House Group Told Control Plan Perils All Markets

Constitutionality Of Bill Challenged

Whitney Invites Visit by Committee to Inspect Trading Practices.

By Rober C. Albright.

Stock exchanges from Washington to San Francisco warned the House Interstate Commerce Committee yesterday that the stringent provisions of the Fletcher-Rayburn bill may force them to close their doors.

Echoing criticism by the New York Stock Exchange, Eugene E. Thompson, Washington banker and president of Associated Stock Exchanges, denounced the pending legislation as "unworkable."

He said economic conditions in 18 cities having local exchanges, Washington and Baltimore included, would be adversely affected by the change, and money would be driven to Wall street.

W. D. Gradison, president of the Cincinnati Stock Exchange; Frank C. Shaughnessy, president of the San Francisco Stock Exchange, and W. G. Paul, secretary of the Los Angeles Exchange, supported charges of Thompson that stock markets everywhere are being "unnecessarily maligned."

Whitney Invites Inspection.

Richard Whitney, New York Stock Exchange president, who Thursday proposed a substitute bill, concluded arguments for the brokers. He invited committee members to visit the floor of the New York Stock Exchange for a first-hand study of trading conditions.

Earlier his attorney, Thomas B. Gay, challenged the constitutionality of the stock regulatory measure and declared it based "on the assumption that this is a National and not a Federal Government, deriving its power inherently, and not by delegation from the States."

The stock market attorney declared the alternative plan submitted by Mr. Whitney for a "stock exchange coordinating authority" also is open to attack on constitutional grounds.

"But I'd say the Whitney proposals are fair and advantageously unconstitutional," he added.

As witness after witness rained denunciation on virtually every provision of the Fletcher-Rayburn bill, members of the House Committee several times rose to its defense.

Thompson Cross-Examined.

"You gentlemen would pull all of the teeth out of this bill," complained Representative Edward A. Kenney (Democrat), of New Jersey.

Representatives Clarence F. Lea, of California, and Alfred L. Bulwinkle, North Carolina, both Democrats, closely cross-examined Mr. Thompson.

Hit-Run Driver Kills Man, 58

Boy, 14, Hurt Badly in Another Accident; Autoist Held.

A 58-year-old man was killed last night by a hit-and-run motorist at Fifth street and Florida avenue northeast, and in another accident, not a hit-and-run affair, a 14-year-old boy was seriously injured at Thirteenth and Euclid streets northwest.

The dead man was Charles Vermillion, of 1116 Fifth street northeast.

The injured boy is Joseph Dagallo, of 1322 Meridian street northwest. Police said reports indicated the lad stepped from between two parked automobiles into the path of a machine driven by James Papanicolas, 19, of 1326 Farragut street northwest.

Test Balloon Rose 10.7 Miles in Air

Cambridge, Mass., Feb. 23 (AP).—The first of a group of stratospheric sounding balloons released at St. Louis was examined at Massachusetts Institute of Technology today and showed it had reached an altitude of 10.7 miles.

Attached to the balloons was delicate apparatus for recording temperatures, humidity and altitude. The one examined today showed a minimum temperature recording of 64 degrees below zero, Fahrenheit.

Reports of the finding of six more balloons were received today, bringing the total number found to 13. Forty were released.

150 Arrested In Downtown Gambling Raid

Police Smash Heavily Barred Doors, Seize Equipment.

Smashing through a skylight and battering through heavily barred doors, Lieut. George M. Little, with 20 special officers of his vice squad and uniformed policemen late yesterday raided two elaborately-equipped gambling establishments in the heart of downtown Washington and arrested 150 persons.

The raid was one of the largest in the history of the police department.

Police first went to an establishment at 1409 G street northwest, which they raided about a month ago and found deserted. Climbing to the second-floor roof with fire ladders, they shattered the skylight and part of the ceiling, then lowered themselves into the crowded interior with ropes.

Inside, they corralled about 50 men, allegedly participating in gaming. The raiders then went to 1407 G street northwest, on the second floor, where they battered through several barred doors and seized about 100 more prisoners who, a few moments before, according to police, had clustered around the long racing board and gaming tables.

No Resistance Offered.

No resistance was offered the raiders. Half-hearted efforts were made to escape, but soon the prisoners were herded in docile little groups under police guard.

Traffic outside was jammed as curious crowds gathered. Later the throngs formed a human alley, down which the prisoners passed on their way to patrol wagons.

Lieut. Little and his men seized a large assortment of gambling equipment, including two long blackboards, where racing results were scrawled with chalk and bets made. Chairs, a brass rail and desks were taken also. Other articles confiscated were a loud-speaker, used in announcing race results; two slot machines, dice, cards and a "chuck-luck" board. Telephones were disconnected in both places.

Beneath the establishment at 1407 G street officers found what they asserted was a "hideaway" for bookies, connected to the gaming room, about 30 feet above, by a wooden ladder. The "hideaway" was connected by a narrow hallway to the street.

One person escaped, as far as officers could determine. He lowered himself on the broken ladder to the

Nashville, Tenn., Feb. 23 (AP).—The grand larceny trial of J. I. Reece, former State commissioner of insurance, was continued today until Monday because of the illness of Jeff McCarn, one of the defense attorneys, who suffered a slight heart attack.

Before the Belgian Parliament yesterday Leopold 3d, 32-year-old monarch, pledged himself to the policies of the late King Albert. Queen Astrid, although she did not participate in the royal procession, was present with her two children as King Leopold assumed rule.

Virginia House Passes Racing By 54-43 Vote

Two Measures Approved; Go Next to Senate; Fate Uncertain.

By Doug Warrenfels.

Richmond, Feb. 23.—The opening wedge for revival of horse racing in Virginia was driven today with passage of the Hall pari-mutuel bills by the House of Delegates.

Reform elements were crushed when the first test of strength today resulted in a favorable vote of 54 to 43 on a measure to establish a State racing commission. The same proposal failed of success yesterday by a one-vote margin.

Turf sentiment gained further momentum on the next ballot when Voller Return Granted.

Sacramento, Calif., Feb. 23 (AP).—The Los Angeles Police Department was granted extradition papers by the Governor's office today for the return of Harry O. Voller from Miami, Fla., to Los Angeles to answer the charge of robbing Mae West, screen star, of $15,000 worth of jewels and cash September 28, 1932.

Mrs. Massie Wins Divorce In 10-Minute Closed Hearing

Reno, Feb. 23 (AP).—The marriage of Thalia Hubbard Fortesque Massie and Lieut. Thomas Hedges Massie, U. S. N., principals in the sensational Honolulu murder trial of 1932, ended in a speedy divorce today.

Charges of extreme mental cruelty, the particulars of which were given by Mrs. Massie behind the locked doors of Judge Benjamin F. Curler's court, won her a decree in less than 10 minutes.

Mrs. Massie's attorney asked the court for a private trial, mandatory under Nevada law when requested by either party, and bailiffs ordered an eager crowd from the courtroom.

A few minutes later it was all over and the young matron, daughter of Mrs. Granville Fortesque, socially prominent in Washington, left the court building in the company of her attorney and witnesses, who certified she had been a resident here six weeks.

She wore a black crepe dress, trimmed in white, with black hat and coat to match.

Mrs. Massie reiterated previous statements that today's divorce proceeding "had absolutely no connection" with the Honolulu assault case, which attracted world-wide attention.

The assault upon Mrs. Massie, allegedly by a group of natives, was followed by the slaying of Joseph Kahahawai, and the trial for his murder of Lieut. Massie, Mrs. Massie's mother, and two enlisted Navy men. Convicted of manslaughter,

Belgians Hail Leopold III As New King

Brussels, Feb. 23 (U.P.).—Amid the cheers of his subjects, Leopold III took the oath today as King of the Belgians.

Slender and pale, he went through the simple ceremony in the Senate chamber before the two houses of Parliament at 11 a. m. Princess Astrid of Sweden became Queen. Elizabeth, widow of King Albert I, buried yesterday, is Queen mother. Grief-stricken and ill, she was unable to witness the ceremonies today in which her son became monarch in dynastic succession.

Leopold met members of Parliament at 4 p. m. to hear an address of loyalty.

The cabinet, according to tradition, offered its resignation. Leopold requested the government to continue. The affairs of state, in which he had been trained during the 33 years of his life, took his mind momentarily from his sorrow at the tragic death of his father, killed last Saturday while mountain climbing.

A million Brussels subjects threw off the bands of mourning for the day and festively greeted the young King as he rode to the capital on a white charger from the royal estate at Laeken, outside Brussels.

A salvo of 101 guns roared the news of his departure from Laeken Castle for Brussels, and the populace lined the avenues from which they witnessed Albert's funeral yesterday.

Prince Charles rode behind Leopold. As the cavalcade clattered past the Church of Notre Dame de Laeken, where Albert lay entombed in the royal crypt, trumpets sounded and Leopold turned, bowing his head in tribute to his father.

A detachment of regiment guides preceded Leopold and his immediate escort, and officers of the royal household, chiefs of staff of the nation's fighting forces, troops and

Hospital in Quarantine Over Diphtheria Cases

Minneapolis, Feb. 23 (AP).—Minneapolis General Hospital was placed under quarantine today after several cases of diphtheria were found among the patients.

Dr. Charles E. Remy, superintendent, said that several diphtheria carriers discovered among the hospital personnel were under observation. No deaths were reported.

All Forests Placed Under Federal Rule

Roosevelt Gives Approval to Vital Change in Lumber Code.

Public Hearing Monday Not Expected to Bring Protests.

President Roosevelt gave his approval yesterday to a proposed amendment to the lumber code, which would for the first time bring the country's privately owned forests under a Nation-wide conservation program. He characterized his action as one of the most important things he has done since coming to Washington.

A public hearing will be held March 12 on the question of whether to include under the code all producers of commercial lumber, including farmers. Such a step, if taken, would mean that the entire 500,000,000 acres of America's timber land would be subject to conservation.

The President's approval, which was characterized as an end of the 50-year fight between lumbermen and foresters, came after a delegation visited the White House yesterday afternoon at his request. The delegation, led by Assistant Secretary of Agriculture Tugwell and John D. Tennant, chairman of the Lumber Code Authority, consisted of 24 men representing the lumber industry and forestry services.

Supplements Lumber Code.

The amendment, which is expected to supplement the present Article X of the Lumber Code, contains ten provisions.

They call for scrupulous measures by individual operators to prevent forest fires, preservation of young trees and immature growth, and plans for restocking the land after cutting; and, on the public side, Executive action to bring all commercial timber producers under the code, "equitable taxation systems adapted to the nature of a crop which may be harvested only once in a generation," a forest credit system to help finance taxation and other carrying charges under a long term program of forest development and greatly enlarge public acquisition of timber lands, including the early purchase of 150,000,000,000 feet of standing timber and cut-over land.

Can You Spare a Dime? to Be Plea Of Kaiser's Son

Berlin, Feb. 23 (AP).—A Hohenzollern Prince begging for coins before the castle of his imperial forebears will be the compelling spectacle offered residents of Berlin tomorrow afternoon.

Prince August Wilhelm, 47, fourth son of former Kaiser Wilhelm, in his capacity as a group commander of Nazi supreme storm troops, has been ordered, together with all other high leaders of the Brown Shirts, to take his turn at standing on a street corner with a slotted tin can to solicit for the winter relief fund.

The Prince, who was clubbed and roughly handled by police at a Nazi rally three years ago—long before the party swept into power—said the stern Hitler was sent to Germany by God.

Saving Roosevelt May Win Medal

Mrs. Cross, Who Blocked Assassin, Mentioned.

Tallahassee, Fla., Feb. 23 (AP).—Mrs. W. F. Cross, credited with striking the arm of Guiseppe Zangara when he fired at President Roosevelt in Miami last February, was nominated today for award of a medal to the Floridian who contributed most to law enforcement in 1933.

The nomination was made by Julian C. Calhoun, State's attorney at Palatka.

The nomination was placed alongside others made for the medal which is awarded by the United States Flag Association. Members of the medal jury were summoned to meet in Gainesville Monday to consider the names.

Sixth Army Mail Pilot Killed at Sea; Contract Return Bill Cuts Fees

House Committee Adopts Plan Halving Rate for Airlines.

Move to Withdraw Corps Due Today

Millions in Savings Seen With Firms' Income Sufficient.

By James D. Secrest.

Air-mail transportation would be returned to commercial air lines at a fixed fee of 2 mills a pound per mile with a maximum rate of 50 cents a mile under a proposal adopted yesterday by the House Postoffice Committee. This rate would be less than half the average payments under competitive bidding.

The plan would eliminate competitive bidding, and would save the Government $5,000,000 a year for the first four years and $10,000,000 a year after that, under the $19,000,000 outlay in 1933, according to Representative James W. Mead (Democrat), of New York, chairman.

Meanwhile, the House postponed debate on the emergency air-mail bill by adjourning out of respect for Representative Hooper (Republican), of Michigan, who died Thursday.

Republican leaders hinted that an amendment would be offered today to withdraw the Army from carrying the air mail at once. Such a move would meet the united opposition of Administration forces, however, and probably would be defeated.

Provides Temporary Funds.

The emergency bill provides for a transfer of funds and equipment to provide for the temporary carrying of the mail by Army planes. A vote may be expected today as debate was limited to an hour and a half Thursday.

Another attack on the emergency system of air-mail transportation was made yesterday by Representative D. Lane Powers (Republican), of New Jersey.

"I think that the air-mail service should be discontinued at once," he said, "until it can be returned to the experienced commercial companies.

"This should be done to prevent the further sacrifice of our Army fliers, who are unexperienced in this service. No great harm would result from the temporary and brief cessation of the service."

Average Rate 4.2 Mills.

Chairman Mead pointed out that the average rate under the competitive bidding scheme was 4.2 miles per pound-mile or more than double the rate adopted by the committee.

Smaller air lines on the nonprofit-making routes would be granted a subsidy of 25 cents a mile above the 2 mills, providing the combined

Husband and Wife Slain, Third Shot in Argument

Fort Smith, Ark., Feb. 23 (AP).—Two persons were dead and a third not expected to recover as the result of a shooting in the office of a lumber company here today.

The two killed were Jim Center and his wife, Edna Center. Jack Hill, a company official, was shot and is not expected to recover. Authorities said they believed the shootings resulted from an argument over a bill.

Three Children Killed When Stove Explodes

Sterling, Colo., Feb. 23 (AP).—Three children of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Gandee were burned to death today in an explosion which resulted when Mrs. Gandee tried to light a kitchen stove fire with coal oil.

The dead were Wayne Gandee, 8; Louise, 4, and Phyllis, 13 months. Mrs. Gandee, 28, was burned critically and her husband less seriously.

Farley Slated To Face Probe In Black "Slur"

Brown Will Repeat His Remark, He Says, if Given Permission.

By Martha Dalrymple.

Two Postmasters General — one past, one present—one Republican, one Democratic, will meet today when the Senate Mail Contract Investigating Committee will seek to learn exactly what was the "very personal remark" that the Democrat made to the Republican.

The situation evolved at yesterday's examination of former Postmaster General Brown in connection with his administration of the air mail. Brown was dramatically recounting his visit to the office of his successor, Postmaster General Farley, to return certain air and ocean mail correspondence which he had been "shocked" to find had been packed with his personal papers when he left the department.

He showed no hesitancy in relating their conversation until he

Poison Deaths Of Three Laid To Evangelist

Indictment Charges Fatal Potion Put in Flour to Gain $10,000.

Pampa, Tex., Feb. 23 (AP).—The Rev. L. H. Shockley, 30-year-old itinerant preacher, was charged today with the poison deaths of three persons and a plot to take the lives of four other relatives by marriage in 1930.

The county grand jury indicted him for the fatal poisoning of W. T. Hudgins, his father-in-law; Terry Erwin, son of his wife's sister, and Mrs. Terry Erwin.

An attempt to kill by poison Lloyd and Ernest Erwin, Terry's brothers, their mother, Mrs. Nora Erwin, and her daughter, Mrs. Ruby Bean, was charged.

Poison Put in Flour.

The indictment alleged the poison was mixed with flour which the family used.

Investigators offered as the asserted motive for the poisonings a desire of the preacher to come into the possession of the $10,000 estate of his father-in-law.

"It was that flour that poisoned us," Mrs. Nora Erwin told authorities. "Some of the bread we ate was fed to my father's dog and cat and they both died. It was just an accident that any of us lived."

M. D. Bentley, real estate man at McLean, where all of them lived, said the Hudgins estate consisted of about three sections of land and some money. Bentley was one of several private investigators who worked on the case.

Claude Williams, a McLean attorney, promised the Gray County sheriff that he would surrender Shockley. The evangelist had been at liberty on $8,000 bond, granted after the grand jury indicted him recently for Hudgins' death.

Minister Denies Guilt.

He was arrested February 12 at Springfield, Mo., and returned to Pampa.

Shockley said with emphasis: "I plead not guilty," when he was arraigned on the old indictment.

Hudgins died November 6, 1930; Mrs. Terry Erwin died the day of Hudgins' funeral, November 7, and her husband died December 31, 1930 in Oklahoma City. The others poisoned have never fully recovered.

Three Others Hurt, One in Leap; Two Suffer From Submersion.

Capital Airman In Ocean Mishap

Many Congressmen See Wisdom in Private Mail Flying.

Another Army mail flier was killed and three others injured yesterday.

This brought the total deaths for one week of mail flying to six, and the injuries to six.

Lieut. George F. McDermott, of Pittsburgh, a reserve officer, lost his life when a plane in which he was flying from New York to Miami with two other reserve lieutenants fell at sea off Rockaway Point. The other two officers were rescued by a Naval destroyer.

Norman Burnett, an Army pilot, suffered a broken leg and exposure when he jumped from his plane at Fremont, Ohio, and lay for three hours in a snowdrift.

One Flier From Washington.

The plane carrying the three officers, according to the Associated Press, was forced down about 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon, shortly after it left Floyd Bennett Field. Besides McDermott, the fliers were Lieut. James H. Rothrock, of Washington, and Lieut. William S. Pocock.

Army and police planes at first failed to locate the craft. Later, a police plane said it had sighted the fallen ship and that three men were clinging to it. The police plane was unable to attempt a rescue because of a frozen rudder.

Last night, the naval destroyer Bernadou reported it had picked up Rothrock and Pocock, but that McDermott was missing. Both of the men who were saved were suffering from exposure, having clung to the floating plane for hours.

The destroyer was making all possible speed for New York with the two rescued airmen, who were reported to be in a serious condition. An ambulance was waiting on the dock to take them to a hospital.

Associated Press reports from Fremont indicated Burnett was in a serious condition, suffering from exposure as well as from the injury to his leg.

Commenting on the tragic consequences of his order turning the job of carrying the mail over to the Army, President Roosevelt said he deplored the accidents as everyone deplores any accident in the air, no matter what kind.

Meanwhile, members of Congress were demanding that the job of carrying the mail be turned back to commercial fliers. Representative Hamilton Fish (Republican), New York, termed the situation "legalized murder." Other developments were:

The House Postoffice Committee proposed to return air mail to commercial lines on the basis of a flat rate of 2 mills per pound

Bryan to Seek Post in Senate

Nebraska Governor Will "Aid Roosevelt," Seek Farm Relief.

Lincoln, Nebr., Feb. 23 (AP).—Gov. Charles W. Bryan, thrice chief executive of Nebraska and brother of the Commoner, William J. Bryan, today announced his candidacy for the Democratic nomination to the U. S. Senate to "assist President Roosevelt in restoring prosperity."

Only last fall Bryan said the National Administration's recovery program had turned the farm belt into "a seething mass of unrest" and that the farmer's throat was being "cut from both ears." Today he advanced as his platform virtually the same program he espoused last fall.

Soon after the 67-year-old Governor announced his plans, the man he appointed to fill a senatorial vacancy last spring, 80-year-old Senator W. H. Thompson, of Grand Island, Nebr., said he would not be a candidate.

Tennessean Reported For Credit Post Here

Memphis, Tenn., Feb. 23 (AP).—The Press-Scimitar said today that Norman Monaghan, of Memphis, is to be first assistant to S. M. Garwood, Production Credit Commissioner, in Washington. Garwood and Monoghan conferred here today.

The paper says that Commissioner Garwood will not announce Monoghan's appointment until President Roosevelt disposes of the emergency crop loan bill. Managhan is vice president and treasurer of the Production Credit Corporation office in Louisville.

Fay Can't Sing Alimony Blues; Court Rules She's Being Mean

New York, Feb. 23 (AP).—Mrs. Fay Webb Vallee's California suit for $7,450 a month alimony was called an attempt to "harass" Rudy Vallee by Supreme Court Justice Bernard L. Shientag today in ruling she could bring action for divorce and maintenance only in New York State.

"The California action seems to have been an afterthought," the judge said, "brought to harass the defendant when he was fulfilling a contract in California and under conditions which plaintiff and her attorneys well knew were very expensive to defendant.

"The proceedings seem to have been brought after threats failed to induce defendant voluntarily to relinquish his rights under the separation agreement."

That agreement signed last April and giving Mrs. Vallee $100 a week, formed the court's basis for granting the orchestra leader a temporary injunction restraining Mrs. Vallee from going ahead with her action in Los Angeles for the alimony, $50,000 counsel fees, and $10,000 expenses.

If Mrs. Vallee does not adhere to Justice Shientag's order and prosecutes the California action, the court held, she will be unable to collect any judgment against Vallee in this State, where he has his assets.

The orchestra leader, on the other hand, was ordered to post a $250 bond to provide damages, if any, which Mrs. Vallee might suffer as a result of the injunction. The latter also prevents her and her attorneys from attaching Vallee's assets.

France Fights Hidden Terror In Bank Probe

Paris, Feb. 23 (AP).—A dread "invisible power" that cast an air of terror over the strange killing of Judge Albert Prince, challenged Premier Doumergue's personal efforts today to unravel the deepening mystery of the Stavinsky swindling case, of which Prince was said to have "known too much."

Spurred by an unprecedented governmental offer of a 100,000-franc (about $6,500) reward, investigators pushed an inquiry into the magistrate's death.

The premier ordered the capture, dead or alive, of Prince's slayer.

His sudden intervention in the affair gave it an added gravity, while Interior Minister Sarraut was credited with accepting the idea of some hidden force seeking to terrorize witnesses in the $40,000,000 pawn shop machinations of the late Serge Stavinsky.

Scoff at Suicide Theory.

Judge Prince's bound and mutilated body was found on a railroad track near Dijon Wednesday. A bloody knife lay near it. His brief case had been looted of papers he was to have used in testifying at an investigation of the financial scandal.

Police at first said he had been lured from Paris by a fake telegram saying his mother lay ill in Dijon, and that he had been set upon in a train compartment, his body later being thrown from the train.

Baffled as to the real cause of death, however, scientists today sought traces of poison in the vital organs. Prince's friends scoffed at suicide theories.

Scandal Fatal to 27.

Thus the Stavisky trail of blood, death, scandal and near-revolution forced Doumergue to face Prince's death as one of the government's big problems.

The crime revived mention of high personages against whom Prince, an appeals court judge who was present when Stavisky was first arrested in 1926 on swindling charges, was said to have had damaging evidence.

Prince's death was the twenty-seventh recorded in connection with the pawnshop fiasco. Twenty-five were killed or died from wounds in three weeks of rioting.

The police, Parliament, and the press generally accepted the theory that a "band of terror" or a "Mafia gang" was striving to silence witnesses and struck Prince down first.

Forest Lands Put Under U.S. Control and the inclusion of all forested public domain in the National Forest.

Mr. Roosevelt reminded the delegation of his long advocacy of conservation, and recalled that he had presented a conservation bill in Albany when he was a Stat Senator more than 20 years ago. He declared his belief that the reforestation amendment was the beginning of a program which would take 20 years to accomplish.

At his prss conference later, he pointed out the success of the program would depend on its enforcement. The delegation assured him the proper enforcement would be obtained.

Public Hearing Monday.

Before the amendment actually becomes part of the code, it will be presented at a public hearing next Monday. No opposition is expected to develop.

The conservation amendment has been in preparation almost since the lumber code itself was approved last August. The code already contains provisions for production control and elimination of wasteful cutting, but the matter of reforestation and afforestation was put off for further consideration.

"The program ranks as one of the most important and significant developments in the long and colorful history of American lumbering and the shorter history of American forestry," said Ovid Butler, secretary of the American Forestry Association. "It presents the imposing spectacle of an indutsry which owns almost one-fourth the land area of the United States marshaling its far-flung units, resources and authority, to launch a long range course of forest conservation and planned land management."

Farley Slated to Face Air Probe Over "Slur" on Black

Brown to Repeat What He Said He Was Told, if Given Right.

reached a discussion about Senator Black, chairman of the committee.

"Mr. Farley then made a very personal statement which I can't repeat. He asked me not to say anything about it."

He assured the committee, however, that he would be glad to repeat it if Farley game him a release. So Farley, who is expected to return from Georgia this morning, will be immediately summoned to the Senate Office Building.

Brown Explains Documents.

This episode was sandwiched between an explanation by Brown how he found the missing documents and a bitter, rapid-fire cross-examination by Black, during which he introduced considerable new correspondence relating to the 1930 "spoils conferences."

Black introduced a letter from Chester W. Cuthell, chief counsel for Transcontinental Air Transport, which, relative to the 1930 meeting, said that Brown "told the full meeting he would like to avoid competitive bidding, but that it could only be done if all the elements in the business agreed on some equitable distribution of routes, services and compensations."

Brown, vigorously denying the truth of the statement, protested when Black asked him the hypothetical question:

"If this were true, Mr. Brown, would you consider it legal procedure for the Postmaster General?"

Introducing transcript of the testimony of three previous witnesses who have given evidence about the conferences, Black observed:

"I just want to find out if everybody is out of step but you, Mr. Brown."

Refuses to Answer.

After denying the charges of dictation and collusive agreements included in the transcript, Brown flatly refused to answer Black's hypothetical queries about the legality of the charges, if they were found to be true.

"I am not here to express a legal opinion. All I will say is that these statements are incorrect. Those questions that you are asking me now have no relation to the inquiry."

Black introduced each letter and each transcript with questions about Brown's regard for the writer or witness, securing in each instance an affirmation of high regard and faith in the person in question.

Brown objected particularly to the following portion of the Cuthell letter:

"The PMG stated plainly that he would not welcome bidding by one company for lines in another one's territory but stated that he would have to have such a competition unless equitable arrangement could be made all around . . ."

"Would Avoid Bidding."

"I am very sure that the PMG will go the full limit to avoid competitive bidding but the dangers to his own situation of overstepping his authority are obvious. Unless everyone is taken care of there may be an attack on the whole program in the courts and unless the routes and the moneys are so clearly equitably distributed Congress simply will decline to appropriate more moneys at the next session or indeed may amend the bill so as to change its provisions radically."

Brown declared the letter was "wholly incorrect," but pointed out that any desire to avoid competitive bidding was entirely within the law. Black repeated his query about the truth of the statements in a slightly different form, whereupon Brown answered hotly:

"I have already said no, Senator Black, and I will keep on saying no if you kept on asking me that question as long as you live."

The former Cabinet official then repeated his previous defense of the 1930 meetings by saying that he had called them to see what could be done for passenger operators who had no mail contracts, and held the high hope that the operators would be unable to come to an agreement and that he would thereby be relieved of any further responsibility in the matter.

"Which is exactly what happened," he added.

"Exaggerated," Says Brown.

A letter written by Col. L. H. Britin, who is now serving a jail sentence for contempt of the Senate, in which he said that Brown "has conceived, probably in iniquity, a plan of three large transcontinental routes, and asks the operators to settle on a plan," dhe wfrom Brown the comment:

"That is probably exaggerated."

Black, barely giving the witness or the Republican members of the committee time to take a deep breath, then read a memorandum by Dan M. Shaeffer, vice president of the Pennsylvania Railroad and an official of T. A. T., which related that the operators decided to "abide by the decisions of the Postmaster General with regard to the assignment of the routes in controversy."

"That is not correct," replied the witness.

The Farley conversation was brought out during the sympathetic questioning by Senator Austin (eR-publican), Vermont, who had gone at length into Brown's discovery of the missing Postoffice correspondence.

"Mr. Farley said he dndn't believe in political investigations," said Brown. "I told him I thought he was too good a sportsman to hit below the belt just because a man was a member of another party.

"Farley Got Personal."

"Then I said that I couldn't understand what all this investigation is about. Senator Black had only been in my office once while I was Postmaster General and I felt sure he had been courteously treated, so I said I couldn't understand this. Then Mr. Farley made a personal statement which I can't repeat. He told me not to."

Senator McCarran (Democrat), Nevada, insisted, but Brown stood firm, even against Black's request.

Brown also revealed that while waiting for Farley in the Postoffice Department he had had a conversation with James Maher, department stenographer, who previously had told the committee that Brown ordered his correspondence all burned before leaving office.

"Maher spoke to me and came over to where I was sitting," said Brown. "He extended his hand, but I kept mine at my side. He said: 'I wanted to tell you that the things the newspapers said I said weren's true at all. What I said was what they put in my mouth up there at that committee. I know there's not a thing to that business of burning he papers.'"

After the hearing, Black said he did not believe Maher would be called to supplement his previous testimony, or to reply to Brown.

Secretary Packed Up.

Brown explained that he left all the packing to his secretary, Kenneth MacPherson, when he left office on March 4, 1933. He said all the packing was done in the "Brown Room," so-called because of its color and not its occupant. He said he had had a small electric kitchen installed in one corner of the room, and that packing included "various fancy cooking utensils" in addition to his personal correspondence, books, and documents.

The boxes were sent to his New York hotel, he said, where those containing correspondence were left in storage, until the Black committee investigations began to involve his administration intimately.

He said he had the box brought up to his apartment because he wanted to find a copy of a Senate document. When he discovered the two packets labeled "Air Mail" and "Ocean Mail" he affirmed he was "terribly shocked" and "never so upset in my life."

After showing them to Mrs. Brown, he locked them up and left for a two-day business trip to Toledo, after which he returned to New York, picked up the papers, and came to Washington with them immediately.

Black brought out on crossexamination that Brown had stopped off in Chicago to confer with McPherson about his discovery.

Farley Denies He Made Any Remark

Durham, N. C., Feb. 23 (AP).—Postmaster General Farley here late today issued a flat denial that he had made a "personal remark" about Chairman Black of the Senate Committee investigating air-mail contracts, or had said he was not in "sympathy" with the investigation.

Walter F. Brown, former Postmaster General, testifying before the Senate Committee in Washington today, said Farley had made a "personal remark" and had said he did not have any "sympathy with political investigations," when Brown recently returned some official correspondence.

"I made no remark and I said nothing on the occasion of Mr. Brown's visit to my office that could in any way be construed as against Senator Black personally or the activity of his or any other committee," Farley asserted here.

After attending a dinner here tonight the Postmaster General will leave for Washington, arriving tomorrow morning in the Capital City.

He declined to elaborate on his brief statement.

Japanese Statesman Would Give U. S. Eastern Half.

Tokyo, Feb. 24 (Saturday) (AP).—Foreign Minister Koki Hirota, in House of Peers today, discussed the possibility of an agreement between Japan and America to divide the Pacific Ocean into two spheres of interest.

Baron Toshiatsu Sakamoto, retired vice admiral, asked in an interpellation: "Why could not Japan recognize America's supremacy in the Eastern Pacific in return for American recognton of Japanese supremacy n the Western Pacific?"

Hirota replied: "If America is satisfied to conclude an agreement of such a nature, I do not believe it would be difficult."

Five Racine Factories Paralyzed by Strikes

Racine, Wis., Feb. 23 (AP).—Work was almost at a standstill at five of the largest factories in this industrial center today as more than 2,000 laborers and mechanics continued their strikes for increased pay and recognition for unions.

There was hope of settlement at the Nash Motor Co. plant, but workers and employes were far apart at the two J. I. Case plants, the D. B. Eisendrath Tannery and the Oster Clipper Co. plant.

per mile, thus eliminating competitive bidding and saving the Government an amount estimated at a minimum of $5,000,000 a year.

Hearings before the Senate Mail Contract Investigating Committee continued with testimony of former Postmaster General Walter F. Brown and the summoning of Postmaster General Farley to appear today.

The House Military Affairs Subcommittee on Aviation was ready to begin an investigation of "negotiated contracts," whereby aircraft has been purchased from leading manufacturers since 1926.

The Army's record for one week compares with the commercial flying record for the entire year of 1933 of eight persons killed, seven of them pilots. The Army recorded 12 serious accidents in one week. Commercial aviation companies carrying the mails had 84 accidents last year.

In spite of the record for the past week, President Roosevelt believes that the Army is equipped to fly the mail, he said. He said the Administration still is working on plans for permanent operation of airmail, which is understood to include permitting operators whose contracts were canceled to bid for new contracts.

Army officials were reluctant to be quoted in connection with the situation. They took the attitude that they are by no means discouraged, pointing out that the Army took over a difficult job without much notice, and that the job had to be done during extremely bad weather.

They pointed out that 149 Army planes have been flying 21 routes and averaging nearly 41,000 miles a day. Army statistics show that during the ten years ended with 1932, an average of 47 Army aviators were killed each year.

Interviewed by the United Press, a number of members of Congress expressed themselves as opposed to continuance of the plan of having the mail carried by the Army.

Views of Congressmen.

Here is what some of them said:

Senator Warren R. Austin (Republican), Vermont—"The present situation supports my theory that is it in the public interest to restore the job of flying the mail to private operators."

Representative Clyde Kelly (Democrat), Pennsylvania—"I think these developments prove that the Postmaster General should put the mail back on the planes that have been carrying it at once. The Postmaster General should put the mail back in private hands and then appoint a nonpartisan board to hear the case."

Representative John Taber (Republican), New York—"It is generally recognized that the Army has neither planes, equipment or pilots with proper experience for flying the air mail. The attempt to load it on them, to my mind, is criminal."

Representative Edward R. Burke (Democrat), Nebraska—"It (Army mail carrying), wil give us a practical knowledge of the condition of our air defense system and will make our Congress more 'air conscious.' As soon as practical, the air lines will again be flying the mail."

Representative Harold Knutson (Republican), Minnesota—"The results of having the Army forced to fly the mails with little advance notice now are apparent. The regrettable events of the last few days convince me that the Administration acted without having given fullest possible consideration to the stiuation."

Brig. Gen. Oscar Westover, chief of Army air-mail operations, interviewed by the Associated Press at Salt Lake City, said lack of proper equipment and unfamiliarity with routes they were flying caused the death of Army officers assigned to carry mail.

Routes Were Strange.

"It was not lack of experience as such that sent those men to their deaths," he said. "The men were experienced fliers. But they did not have sufficient experience in flying those particular routes. They were unfamiliar with the conditions they had to meet. After all, a man can't fly a certain route only once or twice and consider he knows the route. That takes time."

He said more stations reporting weather conditions along air-mail routes are needed.

"When you consider how the job was dumped on our laps, how little warning we had, how little time for preparation, the men have done exceptionally well, particularly with our present equipment," he continued. "We have had to take what we had and adapt it to the needs."

Meanwhile, the Army was planning to call into service reserve fliers who have not been on active duty. Col. Horace M. Hickem, commandant of Army mail operations in the Central States, told the Associate Press at Chicago that more pilots are needed to open up new lines in the West.

He said new lines to be opened were Chicago to Minneapolis, St Paul and other Northwest points; Dallas to Brownsville, and Kansas City to Los Angeles.

Meanwhile, the commercial lines were feeling the pinch of poverty resulting from mail contract cancellations.

Commercial Transport Uncertain.

With United Air Lines alone flying a normal schedule, the Associated Press reported, the immediate future of continued passenger and express transport was regarded as operators as extremely uncertain.

Transcontinental and Western Air, flying from coast to coast, was operating only one plane on its transcontinental route. Several hundred T. W. A. employes have been furloughed indefinitely.

Eastern Air Transport, flying south from New York, has modified its schedule to only seven stops to be designated as "regular," and nine as "flag stops." Two hundred and fifty employes have been furloughed.

Representatives of United Airlines said they were operating at a loss, but would continue as long as possible.

Here is a summary of serious accidents to Army fliers during the past week:

Weber Canyon, Utah—Lieuts. Jean D. Grenier, Fort Crockett, Tex., and Edwin D. White, Marchfield, Calif., crashed in a snowstorm February 16 en route to air mail duty. Both were killed.

Jerome, Idaho—Lieut. James Y. Eastman, Marchfield, Calif., crashed in flames during a practice flight February 16, preparatory to carrying the mail. He was killed.

Deshler, Ohio—Lieut. Durward O. Lowry, Selfridge Field, Mich., tried to bail out while carrying the mail from Chicago to Cleveland February 22. His parachute caught in the ship and he was killed. His radio had not been working.

Denison, Tex.—Lieut. Fred I. Patrick, Denison, en route to Barksdale Field, Shreveport, La., for air mail duty, nosed into a field when his motor stopped, February 22. He was killed.

Crack-up at Crisfield.

Crisfield, Md.—Lieut. Harold Dietz, Easton, Pa., suffered serious injuries when his plane crashed while carrying mail to Washington February 22. He was far off his route.

Uniontown, Pa.—Lieut. C. P. Hollstean ran into trees on a mountainside February 22. He was carrying mail from Cleveland to Washington. He suffered head injuries.

Fremont, Ohio—Pilot Norman Burnett, of Graham, Tex., lost his way in a blizzard February 23, suffering a broken leg when he bailed out. He lay in a snowdrift for three hours before he was found.

their sentence was commuted soon after the verdict.

Mrs. Massie came to Reno to establish divorce residence January 10, saying she did so "relucatntly and only at the insistence of Lieut. Massie.

Asks No Alimony.

Evidence that there had been a martial rift between the Massies for some time previous, however, was given in Lieut. Massie's power of attorney in today's proceedings. It was signed in Los Angeles, December 30, 1933.

Mrs. Massie asked for no alimony. It was understood her testimony related largely to their incompatability and to Lieut. Massie's suggestions that they be divorced.

She said she exepected to remain here "for several days," after which she will visit friends at Carmel, Calif. Her plans for the future are "still indefinite," she said.

Asked if she intedns to remarry, she replied: "I am not going to marry anybody." The couple married at Washington, November 24, 1927.

rate does not exceed the 50-cent-a-mile maximum.

Each year this subsidy would be reduced, Chariman Mead said, and the committee anticipates that it would disappear within four years.

"Our plan is to operate the air-mail service just like the railway mail service, except that we have adopted a fixed monetary rate instead of a space rate," Mead said.

The committee expects the volume of mail to increase sufficiently within a few years to permit a reduction in the rate from 2 mills to 1 mill a pound-mile, the chairman revealed, as a proposal to cut the present postage rate on first-class mail from 8 to 5 cents an ounce, has already been adopted along with a new postcard rate of 2 cents.

May Provide Parcel Post.

Provision may also be made in the bill for establishment of a parcel post service on the air lines, Mead said.

"The airplanes have the space," he said, "and there is no reason why the additional service cannot be developed."

The committee believes that 6 per cent of the commercial aviation industry would make profits from air mail transportation at once, and that the remainder would be placed on a paying basis within four years under the 25-cent subsidy plan.

Air mail contracts would not be restricted to a single line where there are existing competing air lines, Mead saidfi Route warrants would be issued to both lines, in such instances, providing they agreed to carry the mail at the specified rate.

The field supervisor would then divide the mail between the lines. In most instances, both would be able to make profits, ,because any territory that could support competing lines probably would furnish enough mail to make its transportation profitable despite the division.

Profit for Three Seen.

In the case of the service between New York and Chicago, where there are now three lines operating, the committee estimates that two of the three could earn a substantial profit if the mail contract were split.

Mead also stated that the committee probably will adopt an amendment which will permit the air lines whose contracts have been canceled to obtain contracts under the fixed rate plan but with severe stipulations and restrictions.

The committee estimates that the proposed air mail service would cost $14,000,000 a year on the basis of 1933 business, or $5,000,000 less. Of the former amount $5,000,000 would be consumed in subsidies tot the smaller lines.

Opertaors would be required to have at least six months previous flying service before they are granted route warrants, under the committee's proposal, thus eliminating what Mead termed "fly-by-night" air concerns organized as stock promotion schemes.

Chairman Mead said that the committee expects to have its bill ready to report some time next week. Several bills, chief of which is that introduced by Representative Kelly (Republican), of Pennsylvania, will be whipped into shape after a hearing is accorded representatives of the Postoffice and Commerce Departments and the aeronautic branches of the Army and Navy.

It is reported that the Postoffice Department plans to submit a proposal which would empower the Postmaster General to negotiate temporary contracts for air mail transporttaion.

Jackson Link In Army Probe Is Disclosed

Democratic Leader Sat In at Conference on Surplus Sales.

The name of Robert Jackson, former secretary of the Democratic National Committee, has been brought into the investigation by the District grand jury of War Department contracts, it was revealed yesterday.

Jackson, it was learned, attended a conference at the home of Col. Joseph I. McMullin of the Judge Advocate General's office last July when contracts for surplus war material were discussed. Also present at the conference was Ralph T. O'Neil, lawyer and former National commander of the American Legion.

It is understood that testimony before the grand jury reveals that the conference was held at the suggestion of Harry H. Woodring, Assistant Secretary of War, to discuss the matter of allowing surplus war material bought from the Army to be resold in the United States. This arrangement was agreed upon. Previously it had been provided that such material must be sold outside the United States to eliminate competition with American manufacturers.

Jackson said that he represented only the Newbury Manufacturing Co. of Boston and that he in no way represented Joseph Silverman, whose dealings with the War Department have been subjected to minute investigation. It was learned that Jackson was assisted as attorney for the Newburg Co. by George Combs, a lawyer, who was Jackson's assistant when the latter was head of the speakers' bureau of the Democratic National Committee.

The grand jury was not in session yesterday, having recessed until Monday. Woodring will testify Monday. His statement is expected to take all day. Tuesday the jury will hear O'Neil and Robert W. Lyons, New York lawyer, both of whom have asked permission to testify.

The office of Leslie C. Garnett, United States attorney, was busy yesterday going over a great mass of evidence and preparing for the jury's vote on indictments. A report will be made next Wednesday or Thursday.

Last season the Swedes won 120 games in 128 played, and included in this startling line-up of victories was a string of 60 straight triumphs.

Washington-Lee Bows To Silver Spring, 19-17

Silver Spring High won a low-scoring game from the Washington and Lee dribblers yesterday, 19-17 on the Springers court.

Wolfe put the hosts ahead at the outset with a pair of baskets and they protected the lead, the visitors training 11-6 at half time. Scoring was at a premium in the second half with the little Generals creeping up until Coopers basket left theme trailing by two points but the whistle saved the game for the Takomans.

The New Dealers

—The Low Down on the Higher Ups—

Clipping Eagles of Wall Street

Old and Honored Bank Grafts Stripped by Gold Deals.

By the Unofficial Observer.

THE form of devil-worship practiced by Prof. George Frederick Warren and Prof. James Harvey Rogers is to assume that the gold on which our currency is based is not a sacred and immutable symbol of value, but is itself a commodity subject of supply and demand. Therefore they propose to vary the amount of money paid for an ounce of gold, according to the demand and supply of gold. This is called varying the gold content of the dollar and is supposed to release the money prices of other commodities so that they will correspond to the supply and demand of those commodities.

It is difficult to understand the denunciation of this simple measure without understanding that the real issue is over Roosevelt's smashing of two respectable and highly profitable banking grafts. The first was the repudiation of the "gold clause" in Government bonds. The "gold clause" was the means by which the elder Morgan brought President Cleveland groveling to Wall street and put the credit of th United States at the mercy of the private bankers who controlled gold credits. The second was the initiation of gold purchases last October, which cut the umbilical cord of foreign exchange which linked our private bankers to the Bank of England and the European central banks. Both of these moves reduced the power of Wall street in National and international affairs.

The present struggle bears all the signs of a struggle for power rather than a battle of ideas. Warren and Rogers—and their commodity dollar—are simply Roosevelt's weapons in cutting the talons of our financial birds of prey.

Wall street and the monetary markets of the world have enjoyed a great deal of sport—tempered with rueful dismay—over the fact that Roosevelt's chief monetary adviser is a professor of farm management.

Warren a Lone Wolf In the New Deal.

Warren has been distinctly a lone wolf in the New Deal. He is a doctrinaire in an Administration that has few doctrinaires. He believes that economics is an exact science, which few intelligent men (economists alone excepted) believe today. He has taken the quantity theory of money and Prof. Cassel's theory of managed currency, and has elaborated and buttressed them with the most complete set of statistics that has been assembled in the study of the American monetary problem.

It was amusing to watch the "sound money" gang run around in circles and bay at the moon over this man who "would undermine the American system" by a few simple alterations in monetary management. For Warren is one of our arch conservatives. He believes that if the dollar is kept variable in terms of gold, but constant in capacity to buy commodities the troubles of the world will disappear. He sees nothing wrong with capitalism in itself, but believes that it needs a better money system. In this he is in opposition to the other New Deal economists who have come to grips with fundamental weaknesses in the capitalistic system for which a new monetary system is no cure.

The answer is that Warren is 60 years of age and comes of a family of rugged individualists. His father sailed from Massachusetts round the Horn to California in the gold rush days, a possible explanation of the family's keen interest in gold. Later Warren senior went to Nebraska and farmed, a sure cause of his son's keen interest in farming. The future professor was born in Nebraska, graduated from the University of Nebraska and took advanced degrees in agriculture at Cornell. Except for a year as a horticulturist at the New Jersey Experiment Station, he has been a student and teacher at Cornell for 33 years.

Farm Specialties Led To Interest in Money.

Warren's specialties were farm crops and farm management, and he became interested in money only when he realized that it didn't help the farmer much to teach him to be efficient and produce large crops, if he couldn't get an adequate monetary reward for his efforts. Before the war he published three standard books on farm management. He also achieved fame by his discovery that the installation of electric lights in chicken houses stimulated the production of eggs.

When Henry Morgenthau, jr., organized the Governor's Agricultural Commission for Roosevelt, he naturally enlisted the aid of his former teacher and established authority on the farm problem: George F. Warren. Warren and Frank A. Pearson, his assistant, came into frequent contact with Roosevelt and their views on money were well known to him.

It is significant that he did not accept their theory of the depression as all-embracing and that the New Deal program was drafted without reference to their views. However, Roosevelt was impressed with the desirability of reducing the gold content of the dollar, as a quick way of establishing a new base for the price level. This was what most other gold countries had done, for, with the exception of Holland and Switzerland, neither of which was a belligerent, every gold country in the world had either reduced the gold content of its currency or abandoned the gold standard since the war.

When we cut loose from gold in the spring of 1933, Roosevelt had no monetary expert who was sympathetic to the idea or who knew anything about the mechanics of currency management for a currency which was not anchored to gold. Warren, who had been chief economist to the Committee for the Nation and who was an intimate friend of Morgenthau's and a friend of Roosevelt's, was available. In June, 1933, he was brought to Washington from Ithaca for a conference at the White House, and as a result of this conference, he and James Harvey Rogers, of Yale, who was also summoned, were put to work out plans for a managed currency. For a time, Adolph A. Berle and Rexford G. Tugwell also worked with them, but eventually the team boiled down to Warren, the expert on price levels, and Rogers, the expert on the technique of exchange under the gold system.

Calculated Dollar Needed Gold Cut by Third.

Warren had calculated that the dollar needed to be reduced in gold content by about one-third, which would raise the price of gold to $36.17 an ounce. This exact figure appeared for months in the publicity for the Committee for the Nation. Later the committee and Warren decided that their calculations had omitted certain factors and decided that a 50 per cent devaluation was necessary.

So Warren and Rogers were installed on opposite sides of a desk in an obscure room of the Department of Commerce, where they made charts and, according to all accounts, spent much of their time in vehement argument. Rogers is better aware of the lag caused by National psychology and also suspects the influence of size upon monetary matters that what would ruin or enrich a small economic unit may have no appreciable immediate effect upon so vast an economy as that of the United States.

When Roosevelt sent Raymond Moley to the London Conference he ordered him to get discussion stimulated around the commodity dollar idea and the relation of National commodity dollars to an international gold standard. A few weeks later he sent his blistering July 3 message to London. At this time and thereafter Warren and Rogers and others were supplying Roosevelt with numerous and conflicting charts. Later, he sent Warren and Rogers overseas to scout around Europe and the plan was devised for buying gold in the domestic and world market.

The technique of the gold price was simple. At first, Warren, Roosevelt and Morgenthau—and occasionally Rogers—met and fixed the daily gold price. Morgenthau then took the word to Jesse Jones, of the RFC. Later Morgenthau, Warren and Rogers made the daily decision.

Rogers Voices Disagreement With Warren's Views.

Prof. Rogers disagreed with Warren, realizing from the first that the effect of depreciating the dollar would be felt only by the export crops and metals, whose prices are fixed in the world market. And that is all that did happen. In fact, even that was modified by the size of the transaction involved. Since we produce the bulk of the world's cotton, the effect of cheapening our money was rather to reduce the cost of our cotton to our customers than to raise prices materially for our cotton growers.

This was a keen disappointment to Rogers, as he was a Southerner from the cotton belt, having been born in South Carolina in 1886. After preparation at the University of South Carolina and at Yale, he had completed his graduate studies at the University of Geneva, and had taught at the University of Missouri and at Cornell before being made full professor of economics at Yale in 1930. He is the author of several standard books on money, and in 1931 he published "America Weighs Her Gold." This last book attracted wide attention and when Moley began to gather experts and material for the war debt and international economic discussions. Rogers was among those summoned to Washington.

Rogers was not particularly active, though he made some practical suggestions, and unlike Warren he did not regard the quantitative theory of money as being as well established as the law of gravitation. Rogers' plan called for devaluation of currencies accompanied by large public works programs undertaken simultaneously by various nations. He believed in a revised international gold standard and that the gold problem must be handled internationally.

Because of his views and his large technical knowledge, he was well fitted to team up with Warren, and despite their many arguments and wide differences in viewpoint, they make a good team. The indications were that while Warren seemed to be the big shot, Rogers' theories were more favorably received at the White House and in greater accord with Roosevelt's own views.

Rogers has many friends in the Administration, especially among the agricultural wing liberals. In him, the Administration possesses a specialist on the gold standard and international exchanges who was not tied up to Wall street or Sir Montagu Norman. When Roosevelt is through using Warren's blunt and oversimplified monetary theories to hamstring the international banking crowd who are fighting him, he may turn to Rogers as the man who is equipped to handle a New Deal in international monetary relations. Until the issue of power over money is permanently settled, Warren is the more useful man.

D. C. Authority Orders Survey Of Street Cars

Will Examine Complaints, Decide if Company Should Be Fined.

A study of the service faults of the Capital Transit Co., with a view to assessing fines for failure to correct the defects, was ordered yesterday by Riley E. Elgin, acting chairman of the Public Utilities Commission.

Inspectors were instructed to prepare reports on the numerous complaints against street car service, and to closely scrutinize transit operations until March 5, when the complaints will be reviewed.

Elgen would not say definitely that fines would be assessed for violations of the order to improve service. It is possible, he said, that the company may be able to show sufficient excuse to warrant leniency.

Will Decide Later.

The question of the imposition of fines, he said, will be determined after inspectors have reported and company representatives had opportuntyi to present its case.

The inspectors were ordered to pay close attention to slow service, insufficient heatings, and overcrowding cars. The bulk of the many complaints received recently have been directed against these defects. The commission is determined the service must show the necessary improvement, he added.

The hearing of March 5 was originally scheduled to review the question of universal transfers between street cars and buses, and to discuss fare rates on buses. In view of the many complaints, Acting Chairman Elgen decided to broaden the scope of the inquiry and to hear the company's reply to the barrage of criticism.

Can Levy Fine of $500.

Under the law, the Utilities Commission, has power to levy a fine of $300 for violation of its orders. The company has asserted that one of the principal reasons for poor schedules is the congestion of traffic.

A conference will be held today to determine whether regulations can be drafted to prevent automobiles from occupying street car tracks in front of moving street cars. The conference will be attended by Acting Chairman Elgen, Superintendent of Police Ernest W. Brown, Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer, Inspector B. A. Lamb, head of the Traffic Bureau, and representatives of the traction company.

Off for Race, Cunningham Confident

AGRIM and determined Glenn Cunningham left Washington yesterday morning, accompanied by Roland Logan, athletic trainer of George Washington University, for the big test in the mile tonight in the National A. A. U. indoor games in New York City.

Blaming himself and no one else for underestimating Bill Bronthon, the Princeton University long-distance flash, last week in the Baxter mile, Cunningham is determined to nose out the Nassau, and has backed up his ability and stamina with a load of confidence in himself.

Throughout the past week the Kansas star relied strictly on long walks about the District and leg exercises in the Colonial Gym.

That the Jayhawk miler will enter the race on the short end of the betting, there is no doubt. With this fact in sight, Cunningham believes the odds of breaking the tape ahead of the Tiger star may be a psychological aid to his cause.

Upon departing, the long-legged Kansan intimated he has no fear whatsoever of Gene Venske, Penn's long-distance threat, but it is Bronthon that he expects to battle all the way, tooth and nail.

Takes Suit, Coat, $45 and Two Watches.

After trying on and approving a suit and overcoat, a holdup man last night robbed a downtown F street clothier of $45, two $35 watches and escaped wearing the garments valued at $50.

The man walked into the store of Henry L. Smith, at 924 F street northwest, shortly after 6 p. m. He asked to see a dark blue suit and overcoat. Smith produced these articles and the man put them on.

After donning the apparel, the man walked over to his discarded and shabby overcoat and produced a pistol. Pointing this at Smith, he obtained the money and the watches and escaped into the after-work crowds outside.

City Repudiates $6,000 Pledge For Park Land

Charlottesville Sees Bias in Centering Activity in Northern Part.

Charlottesville, Feb. 23 (Spl.).—This city's smoldering grievances against the State Conservation and Development Commission because of what it deems inequitable distribution of the benefits of the Shenandoah National Park in favor of the northern counties touched by the park, today found one outlet in the city council's announcement that it would not pay its $6,000 pledge to the park fund.

City officials made public a letter sent to Thomas L. Farrar, Charlottesville banker and commission member, wherein City Attorney E. V. Walker declared that reduction of the park area in Albemarle had deprived Charlottesville of watershed rights called for in a proviso to the pledge. Withdrawal of the park lines westward beyond the extent of the Moorman's River watershed, he said, had left the city holding watershed property which it had purchased in the expectation that it would be included in the park and the amount of the pledge returned to the city in this way.

In view of this, the city government has decided itself freed from the obligation of the pledge, signed March 22, 1926, by J. Y. Brown, then mayor.

Notified yesterday that the letter had been sent him, Mr. Farrar expressed hopes that "an adjustment" might be made.

Reservoir Dam Factor.

The condition to the pledge signed by Mayor Brown read as follows:

"This subscription is made with the proviso that the city shall have the right to build a storage dam and use the water so stored."

Mr. Walker's letter to council declared:

"Subsequent to the execution of this subscription, the city proceeded to buy a large portion of this surrounding watershed for the purpose of protecting its water supply, and with the expectation that the conservation commission would pay the city for this land on the same basis as other property owners in the park area have been paid, and if this had not been done, the city would have received more for the land than $6,000. The city has spent considerably more than $6,000 in purchasing the surrounding land within the watershed.

"Several years ago, the conservation and development commission decided to reduce the park area and this reduction deprives the city of the benefits which would have accrued to it if the original plan had been carried out.

"For these reasons, I am of the opinion that the city is not legally obligated to pay this subscription, and that the council has not authority to pay same."

Resentment Is Deeper.

The reasons here offered by Mr. Walker and the Charlottesville Council for thus repudiating the pledge admittedly represent only a surface aspect of deeper sectional animosity against the actions of the commission relative to the park and against Chairman William Carson, of Riverton, for other actions.

Local leaders privately voice resentment against what they hold has been a tendency to concentrate the park acreage in the northern half about Front Royal, responsibility for which they lay directly at the door of Mr. Carson. The withdrawal of the park lines in behind the Moorman's River watershed they hold to be typical of this movement.

Furthermore, there is a considerable body which retains resentment against what they regard as the unfair ousting of Chapin Jones as State forester a year ago.

Route Group Not Dispersed.

Baltimore, Feb. 23 (AP).—George L. Radcliffe, chairman of a committee appointed by the Secretary of the Interior to make recommendations as to the route of the Shenandoah-to-Great-Smokies National Parkway, denied that the committee had been "abolished."

"Why, only this morning I got from Washington the necessary authorization for the committee to visit the proposed routes in Virginia, North Carolina and Tennessee," he said. "Of course the trip will be made. I hope that I will be able to go along and I am certain that a number of my associates will."

Norfolk Receives Goods for Fleet

Millions of Pounds Arrive Daily at Base.

Norfolk, Va., Feb. 23 (Spl.). Huge quantities of meats, poultry, eggs and other provisions are arriving at the Norfolk naval base daily.

The coming of the fleet to the Atlantic in June will mean that supplies will be furnished the ships from the Norfolk base, although large quantities are being shipped from here to ships now in the Pacific and Cuban waters. Rear Admiral J. J. Cheatham, commandant of the supply department's depot, says there are now 1,000,000 pounds of beef in storage and another 1,000,000 pounds will be purchased before May.

Virginia Asks Bids On Road Projects

Richmond, Feb. 23 (AP).—The State highway department called for bids on seven highway and bridge construction projects. The bids will be opened March 15.

The projects advertised are:

Route 1, Hanover County, overhead construction at the Richmond, Fredericksburg & Potomac crossing north of Ashland; Route 1, Dinwiddie County, 1.1 miles of concrete approaches to the Seaboard Air Line crossing at Butterworth; Route 1, in Dinwiddie County, overhead crossing of the Seaboard Air Line at Butterworth; Route C-1431, in Roanoke County, a bridge over the Rivana River 1 mile from Salem; Route 5, four-tenths of a mile of streets of Charlottesville; Route 29, in Pittsylvania, construction of Main street in Chatham; Route C-644, in the City of Norfolk, the Campostella Bridge.

Mystery Battlefield Marker Found

Above is shown the mysterious monument on the Antietam Battlefield National Park near Sharpsburg, Md. It was discovered by CWA workers engaged in research regarding the battle, one of the bloodiest of the Civil War. No one in the vicinity, including Dr. Robert Lee Jones, historical technician in charge of the battlefield, apparently knows how it got there. It bears these words: "A. N. V.—Near this spot an abandoned Confederate gun manned by a Second Lieutenant of the Sixth Virginia Infantry, Mahone's Brigade, and two infantry volunteers from Anderson's Georgia Brigade, was placed in action here September 17, 1862." Dr. Jones says evidently a Confederate lieutenant and two volunteers came to the spot, found the gun abandoned, and bravely began to man it themselves. "The names of such heroic soldiers should certainly be a part of the history of the Battle of Antietam," he adds.

Historic

Virginia Assembly to Meet in Old Hall.

Richmond, Feb. 23 (Spl.).—The Virginia Assembly will meet tomorrow in the restored colonial House of Burgesses at Williamsburg.

Speakers will include John D. Rockefeller, jr., who is furnishing funds for the restoration of the eighteenth century original Virginia capital; Gov. Peery, and Ashton Dovell, floor leader and Williamsburg delegate.

Two Washington Post writers will cover the historical occasion. Marion Butler will write a color story of the memorable formal opening of the rebuilt first State capitol while Doug Warrenfels, who has been covering the Asse[illegible]y, will deal with legislative doin[illegible].

2-Year Budget Gives Virginia $82,000,000

Bill Reported to Floor of House; May Be Called Tuesday.

Richmond, Feb. 23 (AP).—Ashton Dovell, chairman of the House of Delegates appropriations committee, today reported the State's $82,000,000 biennial budget bill, and asserted it would be taken up ahead of the administration tax program for schools, which preceded the appropriations measure to the calendar by a week.

As amended by the appropriations committee, the reported budget was changed little from the original recommendations by former Gov. Pollard, who asserted its provisions, along with his utility tax proposals and liquor revenues, should guarantee an eight-month school term throughout the State.

Dovell said he believed it would be impossible to cut out of the budget the additional $1,000,000 requested for schools. Some members had advanced this suggestion as a means of meeting the school demands.

Dovell said the budget bill would be called up probably Tuesday.

"When the appropriations bill is passed," he said, "we can meet the question of raising more money for schools. If we decide more is necessary, then more taxes must be levied."

The appropriations committee amended the Pollard general fund recommendation for a net increase of $30,054 during the first year of the biennium, and $66,264.60 during the second. Amendments to the special fund recommendations would result in a net decrease of $12,570 during the first year, and $12,130 during the second.

With the changes, the general fund appropriations for the first year would total $16,812,524 during the first year, and $16,650,882 during the second year. The biennial general fund appropriations total approximately $1,500,000 less than the total for the current biennium, exclusive of the executive cuts.

Miss Mary Noyes Funeral Is Today

Former Takoma Teacher Died Wednesday.

Takoma Park, Md., Feb. 23 (Spl.). Funeral services will be held tomorrow at 2:30 p. m. at Trinity Episcopal Church for Miss Mary Noyes, who died Wednesday at her home, 224 Spruce avenue. The Rev. David C. Clark, rector, and the Rev. Christian M. Young, rector emeritus, will conduct the services. Interment will be private.

Miss Noyes was born at Burlington, Vt., and, following graduation from Vermont University, she taught in public and private schools. George Taylor, president of the American Express Co., and Owen Davis, playwright, were among her pupils, as were children of Ambassadors of foreign countries to the United States. She spent many years as a teacher in the Indian service, later taking a Patent Office position, from which she was retired several years ago.

House Concurs In Alterations Of Liquor Bill

Senate Revision Is Agreed to and Peery May Sign by Wednesday.

By Doug Warrenfels.

Richmond, Feb. 23.—House concurrence today in Senate liquor bill amendments cleared the way for opening of State dispensaries by March 15. While Gov. Peery withheld comment, he was expected to sign the measure Tuesday or Wednesday. Possibility remained that he would send the bill back to the Assembly for minor changes.

A State monopoly was established by the rum bill. Hard liquors could only be obtained in the original package for consumption off the premises. Hotels and restaurants would be permitted, however, to serve wines and beer of unlimited alcoholic content.

A separate bill designed to permit whisky sales, in "substantial" hotels and restaurants, remains to be acted on. Its defeat will be sought by the administration.

Differ on Pay.

Delegate Wilbur C. Hall, Leesburg, won House concurrence by 57 to 31. The principal Senate amendment would authorize the Governor to fix salaries of liquor board members at a maximum of $7,500. The House earlier ruled they should be paid $5,000 a year. Another Senate change would empower the board to alter its rules and prices in different localities, to meet competition from bootleggers.

A third change called for diversion of as much of $1,000,000,000 in prospective profits for establishment of stores and other operation expenses.

Still another amendment indorsed would give the State all liquor revenue up to $1,675,000 a year, with counties and cities to receive two-thirds of additional profits.

Argument today was brief, after Wilbur C. Hall, of Leesburg, the patron, explained the Senate amendments in an hour's address to the House.

Local option is provided. Political units desiring prohibition must vote themselves out from under the bill's provisions. Towns of more than 900 population may become local option districts in addition to counties and recognized cities of the first and second class.

Board Has Full Control.

Mr. Hall asserted that the bill would give Virginia one of the best liquor control laws in the world. The plan in the Hall bill was developed by a commission of 15 citizens named at the special session of the Assembly last summer.

The main provisions of the bill include:

A control board of three members to be named by the Governor and one to be designated by him as chairman, and who will have broad and sweeping authority to carry out the provisions of the act. No member or employes of the board may have any interest whatever in the liquor business.

The board will have complete control of the purchase and sale of alcoholic beverages other than beer, and all beverages other than beer handled by private licensees must be obtained through the board.

Flames Sweep Store; Loss Set at $200,000

Johnson City, Tenn., Feb. 23 (Spl.). Fire believed to have originated in the basement of a two-story brick building housing the S. H. Kress Five and Ten Store and professional men's offices, early yesterday did damage estimated at $200,000.

The five local fire-fighting companies and one from Elizabethton fought the blaze five hours before it was brought under control. Three firemen, Jim Bolinger, assistant Johnson City chief; Reece Holsclaw and Lynn Hyder were overcome by smoke and removed to a hospital.

Boy Scouts Gathering Clothes for Destitute

Harrisonburg, Va., Feb. 23 (Spl.). Harrisonburg Boy Scouts today began the collection of clothing and other necessities for needy families in compliance with President Roosevelt's request for a "good turn" campaign. The clothing and furnishings collected will be turned over to local relief agencies for distribution.

Delegates Pass Libel Measure By 71-7 Ballot

Virginia House Favors Bill Permitting Evidence in Slander Mitigation.

Richmond, Feb. 23 (AP).—The House of Delegates today passed without discusion the Moffett-Quesenberry bill to permit introduction of evidence in mitigation of damages in actions against publishers for defamation, as amended by the courts of justice committee. The vote was 71 to 7.

The House appropriations committee today brought the huge general appropriations bill to the floor, adding approximately $100,000 to the appropriations for the two years as recommended by the retiring Governor, John Garland Pollard.

The Senate today passed the administration bill reducing passenger automobile license taxes from 70 cents per 100 to 40.5 cents. The bill already had passed the House.

The Crowder bills, favored by the Virigina State Federation of Labor, designed to restrict the power of judges to issue injunctions in labor disputes, and to outlaw so-called "yellow dog contracts," were passed by indefinitely by the House committee on labor and the poor, after a hearing.

The House finance committee also reported late yesterday the bill placing a $50 tax on slot machine lessors, a $2 tax on each penny machine and continuing the $5 tax on each machine operated with a coin of 5 cents or more. The bill was sponsored by Delegates George, Moffat, Shrader and Quesenberry.

The bill was reported after some argument. Tax Commissioner C. H. Morrissett said the bill did not legalize the machines as gambling machines, but that they were operating in many sections.

The finance committee passed by indefinitely on Delegate Wilkinson's bills repealing the law for tax return secrecy and providing that bonds should be listed at face value at 75 cents per $100.

The House general laws committee reported the Moss bill repealing the act creating a Virginia real estate commission. The present members of the commission are John W. Moore, of Richmond; R. L. Rush, of Roanoke, and Nash Bilisoly, of Portsmouth.

Chairman Wilbur Hall, of the finance committee, announced a hearing next Wednesday on the administration bill to tax municipalities operating gas, water or power plants on their business outside corporate limits.

The Virginia Manufacturers Association opposed the Crowder bills, while W. D. Anderson, legislative chairman of the Federation of Labor, and Roscoe Greenway, local attorney, advocated the measures.

Proponents charged that "yellow dog contracts," under which the employe agrees not to join a labor organization, were being required by some employers, or else that employers were not hiring workers affiliated with labor organizations.

Mr. Anderson said NRA compliance boards are desired to protect members of unions from discrimination, but that the unions would need protection after the codes expire.

Opponents, represented by J. R. A. Hobson and Frank Louthan, of the manufacturers' association; Lee Long, employer, and David Harrison, attorney, argued that one bill impaired the liberty of contract and that the other was contrary to the spirit of the injunction law.

The finance committee reported the Lyon bill stating that the $10 license tax for veterinarians should be the only State tax, and the Medley bill placing a $5 tax on contractors and plumbers with orders ranging from $1,000 to $5,000 per year.

Attorneys for Increase Of Bond in Lawsuits

Danville, Va., Feb. 23 (Spl.).—Delegate Maitland H. Bustard has been asked by a group of Danville attorneys to introduce a bill in the House amending section 6027 of the code, which requires defendants against whom judgment has been rendered by civil magistrates to put up bond, pending appeal, not only for costs but to cover the amount at stake plus interest.

Mr. Bustard has been told that this virtually denies the right of appeal to persons who have no property to offer as bond. The proposed amendment which Bustard has expressed willingness to sponsor requires bond only for the costs.

Anne Arundel Road Costs Under Fire

County Bills 20% Higher Than State's, Is Charge.

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 23 (Spl.). Anne Arundel County is paying from 20 to 30 per cent more for some road materials than the State or local business firms, it was charged today by Louis N. Phipps, foreman of the county grand jury. Phipps said the jury is making a thorough probe of road expenditures.

Mr. Phipps, who is leading a fight for reduced taxes, appeared before the county commissioners recently to urge that the State be asked to assume jurisdiction over county roads.

Elmer E. Perkinson, president of the board of commissioners, when told of Phipps' statement, asserted that competitive bidding applies to all county purchases, and said he did not think the county is making excessive payments for materials.

Women Will Entertain National Club Leader

Shepherdstown, W. Va., Feb. 23 (Spl.).—Arrangements for the visit of Mrs. Grace Morrison Poole, president of the National Federation of Women's Clubs, were made by the Shepherdstown club today.

Clubs at Charles Town, Harpers Ferry and Martinsburg will cooperate in entertaining Mrs. Poole on her visit March 8.

Changes Asked In Virginia Bill On County Rule

Supervisors in Albemarle Indorse Amendments Before Assembly.

Charlottesville, Va., Feb. 23 (Spl.). Albemarle County supervisors have given their indorsement to several amendments which it is proposed that the General Assembly make this session in the optional forms act pertaining to the county manager and county executive forms of government.

A bill containing these changes already has been introduced in the House by Delegate Ashton Dovell, Williamsburg, it was said today by Maj. John S. Graves, county attorney under the new Albemarle government.

Dr. George Spicer, head of the Virginia Commission on County Government, appeared before the supervisors here at their last meeting and explained the amendments.

The word "deputies" was inserted in the act in addition to "the officials, employes and assistants" whose salaries the supervisors are to regulate. This, it was said, was done to make plain that the supervisors would have jurisdiction over the "deputies" of the sheriff, the clerk and Commonwealth's attorney.

Another provision will specify that supervisors receive the same salary as they did under the old form of government. This was done because the qpuestion has been raised in Henrico and Albemarle.

"The act is not weakened by these amendments," Maj. Graves said. "Their purpose is to clarify some portions which might be misinterpreted."

Lancaster, Capt. Gunyon M. Harrison, Commonwealth's Attorney Robert A. Hutchinson, of Manassas, and J. Walton Hall, superintendent of schools in Hanover County.

King Albert Recently Knighted Singer, Maryland Art Patron

Painter and Philanthropist Gave Hagerstown Its Museum.

Hagerstown, Md., Feb. 23 (Spl.). William H. Singer, jr., who presented to Hagerstown its Washington County Museum of Fine Arts and an almost priceless collection of works of art, was knighted by King Albert of Belgium three weeks before the ruler's death, according to word received here.

Mr. Singer, who is a noted landscape artist himself, is a resident of Olden, Norway, where most of his landscapes are done. He is the husband of the former Anne Brugh, daughter of the late Peter Brugh, Hagerstown merchant.

A portrait of the late Belgian King, done by the Belgian court painter, purchased by Mr. Singer, is en route to the local museum, having been presented as a gift.

Mr. Singer was knighted by the King of Norway two years ago.

Jury Told Girl Caused Killing

Coroner's Jury Holds Suspect in Slaying Over 'Kidding.'

Westminster, Md., Feb. 23 (Spl.). A coroner's jury here yesterday reached a verdict in less than 15 minutes charging Lloyd Bledsoe, 29, of near Taneytown, with the murder of Cecil Glass, 35, of Rocky Ridge, whose bullett-riddled body was found early Saturday beside a State road near Tyrone.

Bledsoe, who surrendered voluntarily to the Carroll County sheriff Saturday night, is being held for trial before the May term of the Circuit Court.

Wesley Glass, a cousin of the dead man and one of three State witnesses, testified that Bledsoe shot his cousin after first having pointed the gun at him. He said that Bledsoe had become angered after being "kidded" about a "girl friend."

Henry Trent and Nelson Bell, two other State witnesses were released yesterday without bond. Bledsoe has been a resident of Carroll County for two years and is a native of Duffield, Lee County, Va. He is married and has two children.

Florence Ward Dies; Extension Work Official

Served in Agriculture Department Bureau Since 1915.

Florence E. Ward, a member of the Extension Service of the Department of Agriculture since 1915 and a prominent figure in the development of the department's cooperative extension work, died yesterday.

Miss Ward, who lived at Virginia Highlands, was in charge of cooperative extension work in the Eastern States since 1923, and previously had been in charge of extension work with women.

"Miss Ward brought to cooperative extension work the training of an educator and a sympathetic understanding of farm problems gained from her farm upbringing," C. W. Warburton, director, said.

Born at Mauston, Wis., Miss Ward was reared on a farm. She was a graduate of the National College of Education, Chicago, and was a member of its governing board.

Before her connection with the department, she had charge of the kindergarten training department of the Iowa State Teachers' College and was professor of vocational education of Washington State College. She was a contributor to a number of publications relating to education and rural life.

Funeral arrangements had not been completed yesterday.

Illness Halts Action on Rum Law's Details

Mrs. Norton, Palmisano, Senator King Suffer Indispositions.

Illness of District Committee chairmen continued to delay action yesterday on proposed amendments to the iDstrict liquor act, while another protest was voiced by independent dealers against the proposal to remove the one-license retriction on chain stores.

Chairman Norton has been ill for ten days, and Rperesentative Palmisano (Democrat), of Maryland, acting chairman, said earlier in the week that he would discuss the amendments with Senator King, chairman of the Senate District Committee.

Seantor King was ill, however, during the early part of the week, and yesterday Palmisano was reported ill just as Senator King returned to his office.

Bert L. Olmsted, president of the National Association of Beverage Dealers, yesterday wrote the House committee that his organization opposed elimination of the chain store limitation.

Its removal, he said, would establish a "monopoly which would permit controlled high prices. Competition," he added," will bring about a more moderate price level."

There's A Reason

WHEN a large number of people are moving in one direction it is not only human nature but a worth-while idea to follow them!

Judy O'Grady and the Colonel's lady are, in truth, "sisters under the skin." What interests one is almost certain to interest the other. And so, when you follow the crowd you invariably find something that interests YOU, too.

Curiosity may draw you first, but did you ever follow a crowd without finding something interesting at the destination? . . . Of course you didn't! . . . Possibly it was a fire, an accident, or some person of prominence whom all wanted to see. In any event, you found that the attraction which held the interest of the crowd also had a personal appeal for you!

* * * * * * * * *

"The crowd" is now being attracted to The Washington Post in ever increasing numbers. . . . Perhaps it is curiosity that first impels them—they are wondering why everyone is speaking of, and quoting, The Washington Post . . . They come to find out, and in this newspaper they find a particular, personal appeal that makes them permanent followers.

Follow the crowd! . . . See what the excitement is all about. Note the exclusive reports of significant events by authoritative writers in every field of news affairs; the complete, accurate and concise coverage of every happening; the many new, informative or entertaining, features and the physical improvement that mark The Washington Post as a NEW and distinctive nwespaper!

10 Farmers Re-Stock Woodpile Of Aged Pair Menaced by Cold

Winchester, Va., Feb. 23 (Spl.).—While subzero temperatures threatened suffering to an aged and semi-invalid couple of western Frederick County this week, ten Frederick County farmers stopped their routine work, got together a power saw and motor truck and went to the home of the couple and sawed 10 cords of wood for the family fires.

Mr. and Mrs. Marion Cooper, of Hayfield, about 10 miles west of here, both 83 years old, had laid in a normal supply of stove wood last fall, but the extended cold during January and February exhausted the supply.

John Loy, Oliver Clowser, Luther Larrick, Clark Braithwaite, Charles Clowser, N. K. Larrick, Boyd Ramey, Newton Cather, Harry Carper and Perry Nail heard of the Coopers' plight. Leaving their farm tasks they went to the Cooper home. Newton Cather drove the truck and Harry Carper and Perry Nail operated a power saw while the others felled trees and carried the wood.

Fruit Farmers Protest Supply Price Increases

Will Send Representative to Code Meeting in Capital.

Martinsburg, W. Va., Feb. 23 (Spl.).—Protesting vigorously advances in the price of orchard materials of as much as 100 per cent, a group of orchardists met here yesterday and voted to send a delegate to the NRA code hearings in Washington next week. Gray Silver was elected delegate.

The growers likewise voted to advise companies selling spray oils in this area that unless the recent mark-up in prices was brought down to reasonable figures they would not use oil this year, but would return to lime-sulphur. The West Virginia Horticulture Society said it would recommend the return to lime-sulphur by its members unless prices were scaled.

Oil Up 6 Cents.

The advance in oil prices was the chief point of contention at the meeting. Until recently spray oil of 150 viscosity sold for 11 cents a gallon. Recently the price went to 17 cents a gallon, in quantity lots, apparently by general agreement among the oil companies, the growers said. They point out that no comparable rise has been made in the price of crude oil at the wells, and that the price is 100 per cent above last year, when growers bought for 9 and 8½ cents per gallon in large lots.

Protests will be made against lesser increases in the prices of nitrates and other fertilizers and supplies.

Dairymen Go to Hearing.

Hagerstown, Md., Feb. 23 (Spl.).—A committee of four milk producers from Washington County attended a hearing of the Pennsylvanai Milk Control Board at Harrisburg today. They were Martin L. Smith and H. M. Moore, Hagerstown; S. H. Day and William E. Hebb, Funkstown.

They went as delegates of the Allied Dairy Farmers Association, seeking a change in the code for farmers shipping milk to Philadelphia.

A resolution passed here which protests the reduction of 4 cents per 100 pounds for the price of milk was presented.

The subzero weather this month has not been without its benefits, farmers and fruit growers who have found wheat and many varieties of fruit destroyed, say. Nearly all insects, including the larva of most of the destructive beetles, are believed to have been destroyed.

The ground has frozen to a depth of 18 inches, the deepest in the memory of oldest residents. Farmers and fruit growers recalled that the summer following the 27 below zero weather in 1912 was almost free of insect life.

Rev. Ainslie, 66, Dies in Hospital

Advocate of Church Unity and Foe of Lynching Passes Away.

Baltimore, Feb. 23 (AP).—The Rev. Peter Ainslie, internationally known for his work in the interest of church unity and world friendship, died today in a hospital here following two operations. He was 66 years old.

Dr. Ainslie was a trustee of the Church Peace Union, founded by the late Andrew Carnegie, and a delegate to the Church Peace Union conferences in Geneva in 1914 and 1920, in The Hague in 1919 and in Copenhagen in 1922.

From 1910 to 1925 he was president of the Association for the Promotion of Christian Unity and was president of the Christian Unity League in 1927. He often protested against military training, lynchings and a divided Christianity.

Born in Dunnsville, Va., and educated at Transylvania College, Lexington, Ky., Dr. Ainslie had been pastor of the Christian Temple here since 1891. He held doctor degrees from Yale, Drake and Bethany College. His widow and two children survive.

Western Alumni Meet at Banquet

Carroll County Clubbers Enjoy "Golden Age."

Westminster, Md., Feb. 23 (Spl.). Four hundred members of the alumni of Western Maryland College attended the annual banquet of the Carroll County Club tonight at the college.

The program was featured by a dramatic offering, the "Golden Age in Western Maryland History." The cast was comprised of alumni from the classes between 1871 and 1900. It portrayed the social, athletic and college life of the nineteenth century, as lived in Western Maryland.

Dr. Fred G. Holloway, president of the Westminster Theological Seminary, was master of ceremonies.

Spotsylvania Teachers' Aid Gives 14 Work

234 Persons Join Classes, Many for Reading and Writing.

Spotsylvania Courthouse, Va., Feb. 23 (Spl.).—Fourteen unemployed teachers have been engaged in Spotsylvania County with a weekly pay roll of $175 under the emergency relief program.

Some of the 234 students, most of them adults and many Negroes, now receiving instruction are learning to read and write, while others are improving their limited education.

Two colored women are teaching small schools which otherwise would have been closed for lack of attendance, while another school is being used to relieve congestion at the Spotsylvania Training School.

Seventy applications for aid from the Federal Emergency Relief Administration have been received for the first week of the county organization's operation by Miss Susan Dickinson, director. The Spotsylvania County Administration is operating on an initial Federal grant of $2,500.

Cuts Slight in Roanoke.

Roanoke, Va., Feb. 23 (Spl.).—The CWA ruling to drop 15,000 employes in Virginia will not affect Roanoke City except in a small degree, W. B. Rogan, district deputy administrator, said, because Roanoke has never taken full advantage of its quota of 1,973 workers. The total here is about 1,200.

The new ruling means, however, that approximately 3,500 employes in the district will be dropped, and that a new wage scale will be inaugurated, based on not less than 30 cents an hour for common labor. The present rate is 45 cents an hour for unskilled labor. The workers will continue on the 24-hour weekly basis in urban districts and 15 hours per week in rural communities.

Bristol Layoffs Announced.

Bristol, Va., Feb. 23 (Spl.).—Unless present orders are changed, 150 men will be laid off next week and 50 each week thereafter, C. H. Drinkard, administrator, told his CWA workers yesterday.

Sanitary Work Retained.

New Market, Va., Feb. 23 (Spl.). Following the announcement that school projects would be given preference during the second period of the CWA, it is learned that sanitation work throughout the county also will be continued. Director Guy C. Dinges will remain in charge of the work, which as heretofore will include the repair and sanitation of cisterns, wells and septic tanks and other outside structures where disease germs flourish.

Transient Camp Argued.

Danville, Va., Feb. 23 (Spl.). M. W. Thompson, assistant director of State transient relief, was here tonight, and will appear tomorrow before the Pittsylvania County Board of Supervisors at Chatham to justify the establishment of a Negro transient camp next week in the old county almshouse, near Chatham.

Thompson denied that 200 Negroes, many with criminal records, would be placed in the camp under no compulsion to remain there. He added:

"The men will come from our bureaus, where their records have been checked. If you want those jobs for idle men in your county, we will put the transients at work clearing underbrush and improving roads."

If the county board tomorrow disapproves the camp, it probably will be canceled and placed somewhere else. Thompson revealed that M. S. Burchard, State Director, has been transferred to New Orleans.

Ice Again Menaces Shipping in Bay

Coast Guard Craft Stands By Boat Frozen In.

Norfolk, Va., Feb. 23 (Spl.).—Another cold wave which hit this section today piled up more ice in Chesapeake Bay, Coast Guard headquarters was informed.

Several days of mild weather had caused heavy floes to move down the bay and shipping interests were of the opinion that the worst of the cold weather had gone. Today the Coast Guard reports from Tangiers, Crisfield, and other points in the bay indicated that small boats are again menaced by ice.

The cutter Travis which was dispatched last night to assist the steamer Victor Lynn, caught in the ice in Chiptank River near Castlehaven, was still standing by that craft today. The vessel is in no danger but is held firmly. The Old Bay Line and Chesapeake Line are operating boats by daylight as much as possible. Both lines have steamers plying between Norfolk and Baltimore.

Veterans Have Forum.

Fredericksburg, Va., Feb. 23 (Spl.). "Does Fredericksburg Have the Future Today That It Had Six Years Ago?" was the topic today of the second open forum luncheon of the American Legion members and other veterans, who last week began a weekly practice of having informal Friday luncheons for friendly association.

Grape Raisers Will Organize In Albemarle

Meet at Charlottesville Tuesday to Plan for Wine Business.

Charlottesville, Va., Feb. 23 (Spl.). Grape growers of Albemarle County will meet here at 3 p. m. Tuesday to form a cooperative association for the raising and selling of the fruit for wine-making purposes, according to Bernard Chamberlain, chairman of the fruit by-products committee of the Charlottesville Chamber of Commerce.

A nonstock corporation will be organized as a means of reestablishing the wine industry, which was a large and profitable business in Albemarle before prohibition.

Peach Outlook Bright.

New Market, Va., Feb. 23 (Spl.). Despite heavy damages to peach orchards in southwestern and eastern Virginia because of the recent cold weather, live buds remain on the trees in this section of the Shenandoah Valley.

Orchardists in the Timberville, Mount Jackson and Woodstock neighborhoods report that only slight damage has been suffered in their localities and indications are that the season's peach crop will be only slightly below normal.

No damage has been done to apple buds, despite insufficient moisture since August. The apple crop this season is expected to be larger than last year's.

Loan Group Ready.

The Strasburg Credit Production Association, serving the counties of Shenandoah, Frederick, Warren, Page and Clarke, announces completion of final details prior to the granting of loans.

The loan committee is composed of D. W. Burress, chairman; W. H. Hunt and J. H. Funkhouser. Members of the board of directors are D. W. Burress, Shenandoah; J. H. Rosenberger, Frederick; W. H. Hunt, Warren; J. M. Shuler, Page, and Clifton Price, Clarke.

Only six applications for loans, all from Shenandoah County, have been received. Three of these have been approved and forwarded to the Federal Intermediate Credit Bank, Baltimore, for final action. Additional applications will be considered at a meeting of the loan commitee next week.

Wheat Hard Hit.

Shenandoah County farmers, after signing the Government's production control agreement to reduce wheat acreage, are lamenting the fact that continued cold weather has damaged the growing on most of the acreage planted.

Farmers state the present outlook would indicate a crop failure. Many are hopeful, however, the few surviving roots will branch heavily, as is sometimes the case when the tap roots are undamaged.

Rockingham County's Dairy Herd Improvement Association announces that J. S. and Paul Roller, of near New Market, again have the leading herd of ten cows in milk and butterfat production for February.

The herd averaged 704 pounds of milk and 50.54 pounds of butterfat. The leading cow in the association giving 798 pounds of milk and 54.3 pounds of butterfat, also is owned by the Rollers.

Corn-Hog Meetings Set.

Harrisonburg, Va., Feb. 23 (Spl.). The set-up of the Rockingham Corn-Hog Adjustment Association will start Monday with a series of meetings to elect the committeemen in each community. The first meeting will be held in the Cross Keys section.

Response at preliminary meetings, at which the program was explained, indicates that Rockingham farmers are going to enter whole-heartedly into the program. Many contract applications have been filled out at the office of County Agent S. M. Cox here.

A committeeman will be elected at each of the community meetings held next week. These committeemen then will name the directors of the association to direct the program in Rockingham.

125 Join in Frederick.

Winchester, Va., Feb. 23 (Spl.). One hundred and twenty-five farmers in Frederick County have signed up for participation in the Federal corn-hog reduction program, I. Fred Stine, county agent, announced today.

County Agent Stine said that he expected to hold the application list open for ten days yet in order that all farmers might have the opportunity of participating.

Stafford Meetings Set.

Stafford Courthouse, Va., Feb. 23 (Spl.).—Six corn-hog reduction meetings for the benefit of Stafford Count farmers who missed the last series of meetings because of severe weather have been announced for next week by W. L. Browning, county agent.

Meetings will be at Bob Bridewell's store, Monday; Berea Postoffice, Monday; J. R. Monroe's store, Tuesday; Stafford courthouse, Tuesday; Wesley Sullivan's store, Thursday, and Fielding Hudson's store, Thursday.

Large Tomato Crop.

Heathsville, Va., Feb. 23 (AP). Early tomato growers in northern neck counties are sowing seed in hot beds for one of the largest acreages in the history of this section.

A large number of packing houses are located in the neighborhood employing both local and Florida packers. Shipments will begin about July 1.

Comedy at Center Cross.

Tappahannock, Va., Feb. 23 (Spl.). "See You Later," a musical comedy, was presented at the Center Cross High School tonight at 7:30 by a cast of more than 30 students from Tappahannock, Dunnsville, Howerton, Upright, Bowlers, Lane View, Jamaica, and Center Cross.

Church Council Urged to Meet In Winchester

Christian Endeavor Group to Open Session in Woodstock Today.

Woodstock, Va., Feb. 23 (Spl.).—Miss Cathleen Shiplett, of Staunton, will preside at the annual Christian Endeavor convention of the Western District of Virginia, to be held tomorrow and Sunday in the Christian Church here.

The organization is interdenominational, drawing support and interest from Presbyterian, United Brethren, Church of the Brethren, and other churches. Eleven counties compose the district.

The program will be opened tomorrow at 2 p. m. with registration of delegates, a praise service at 6 p. m., and a fellowship banquet at 6:30 p. m. At the evening session greetings will be brought by Miss Phyllis Brown, State president, and the address will be delivered by the Rev. A. R. VanCleave.

There will be morning, afternoon, and evening sessions Sunday, speakers including W. B. Smith, State vice president; C. E. Barfield, the Rev. H. M. Crim, Miss Brown, Miss Annie Myers, W. Roy Berg, Miss Elizabeth McKnight, the installation of officers and final address by Mr. Berg concluding the meeting.

Winchester Seeks Session.

Winchester, Va., Feb. 23 (Spl.).—An invitation has been extended the Virginia Council of Religious Education to hold its State convention here in June by all Protestant churches and Sunday schools here.

More than 1,000 delegates from all over Virginia are expected to attend the convention. In addition to the Virginia churches and Sunday schools, it is planned to invite nearby religious organizations in Maryland and West Virginia to join in the conference.

Bible Conferences Scheduled.

Staunton, Va., Feb. 23 (Spl.).—The Rev. Dr. William E. Hudson, manager of the Massanetta Springs Bible Conference, announces the schedule for the coming summer:

Presbyterian young people, June 25-July 1; Methodist young people, July 2-8; camp for intermediate boys and girls, July 9-15; school of music, July 16-22; sacred music festival, July 19-20; Synodical of Virginia, July 20-23; training school for auxiliary workers, July 23-30; Lutheran Church workers' conference, July 30-August 5; Baptist assembly, August 6-12; Bible conference and school for pastors, August 13-26.

Among the speakers already engaged for the Bible conference are Bishop Arthur J. Moore, of California; Dr. Fred W. Norwood, pastor of City Temple, London; Dr. William L. Stidger, pastor of Church of All Nations, Boston, Mass.; Dr. J. R. Cunningham, president of Louisville Theological Seminary, and, probably, Dr. Albert W. Beaven, president Colgate-Rochester Divinity School, Rochester, N. Y.

The school of music, July 16-22, will be under the direction of Dr. John Finley Williamson.

Ordination Set.

Middletown, Md., Feb. 23 (Spl.).—The Rev. Mark Jenkins, recently elected pastor of St. Mark's Episcopal Parish, including congregations at Brunswick, Petersville and Brownsville, will be ordained to the priesthood next Wednesday at a service in Grace Church, Brunswick.

The Rt. Rev. Edward T. Helfenstein, Baltimore, Bishop of Maryland, will conduct the services, and the Rev. Mr. Jenkins will be presented by the Rev. H. F. Kloman, rector of Emmanuel Episcopal Church, Cumberland.

The Rev. William B. McKinley, rector of Antietam Parish, in Washington County, will deliver the sermon.

Church Given Hand.

Boliver, W. Va., Feb. 23 (Spl.).—Land to be used as a site for the Bolivar Heights Pentecostal Church has been deeded by B. F. and Hilda Crawford to Thomas Hardy, William Hilliard, and Amos Woodward, who will serve as trustees of the church.

The deed specifies that the church must be governed by a board of three deacons or deaconesses who must be able to speak in other tongues, be without sin, and have had the experience of the baptism of the Holy Ghost.

County Records Held in Danger

Augusta Lawyers Petition For More Protection of O[illegible] Books.

Staunton, Va., Feb. 23 (Spl.).—Recalling that Augusta County once extended to the Mississippi River, and embraced much of the territory out of which was carved West Virginia, Ohio, Indiana and Illinois and other States, the board of supervisors has been petitioned to provide more adequate protection for county records.

At the monthly meeting yesterday, a committee from the Staunton bar, headed by Commonwealth's Attorney Herbert J. Taylor and Thomas R. Nelson, offered a petition calling upon the board to enlarge the offices in the courthouse where records are filed. The lawyers said all available space has been utilized.

"At one time Augusta County extended as far west as the Mississippi River. All of these old historical records are here, and are not even adequately protected from fire. If these records should be destroyed, the county and the State of Virginia would suffer a severe loss," Mr. Nelson said.

Chairman J. Frank Harper suggested that the bar appoint a committee to confer with the board in order that an investigation might be made.

Fight Over Barred Roadway To Keswick Club Nears Court

Charlottesville, Va., Feb. 23 (Spl.). The controversy over J. B. Belk's gate barricade blocking the road leading into the Keswick Hunt Club from the Charlottesville highway, moved a step nearer solution yesterday with the appointment by the Albemarle supervisors of a condemnation commission to evaluate the tiny piece of land upon which the gate is located.

Mr. Belk, a retired oil man and a breeder of race horses, put the gate across the road entrance on a bit of property about 20 by 40 feet in size and belonging to him. The barricade was torn down several times, and so Mr. Belk now has it anchored with steel posts sunk deep in the ground.

The road, which was frequently used by persons going to the clubhouse, was thereby effectively closed, and club visitors have been forced to take another way about 2 miles farther around. A schoolhouse is located near the clubhouse and parents going there also have to detour.

Public Road Planned.

More than 100 petitioners from the Keswick neighborhood sought relief of the Albemarle supervisors and succeeded in having a board of viewers named. They reported that all the necessary rights of way could be obtained for a public road save that bit on which Mr. Belk's gate stands. They stated his plot was worth about $50.

The Albemarle turfman, however, said the 880 square feet, located between the highway and the C. & O. Railroad's main line, is worth $20,000. He said he planned a railway siding there.

Plans Court Fight.

When the condemnation commission reports, Mr. Belk will still have the right to carry his case into the Circuit Court, and he says he will do that. He has retained Delegate E. O. McCue, jr., of Charlottesville, and Stephen Timberlake, noted Staunton lawyer, to handle the court fight.

The trouble about the barricade is believed to have roots in controversy which has made the Keswick Hunt inactive this year and placed it on a year's furlough from the National association.

In a prepared statement, Mr. Belk said he put up the gate to keep his stock from wandering upon the C. & O. tracks and then fastened it "for keeps" because persons passing through would not leave it closed. A railway crossing at this point would constitute a nuisance, anyway, he declared.

Recess Follows Kump Demand For New Taxes

Speaker Hiner Doubts State Need of $10,000,000 as Urged by Governor.

By W. L. Geppert.

Charleston, W. Va., Feb. 23.—Shortly after Gov. H. G. Kump addressed a joint session of the Legislature today and informed it that $10,000,000 in new revenue is "an immediate fiscal necessity," both branches recessed until next week and members took the Governor's program home to think it over.

The Governor suggested a consumers' sales tax to raise $5,000,000 for schools, a luxury tax to provide $3,000,000 for relief and increased taxes on utilities and other large corporations to produce $2,000,000 for general purposes. The last item, he said, would represent a recapture of savings from the new tax collection law.

Speaker Ralph M. Hiner (Democrat), Pendleton, of the House of Delegates, immediately took the floor and sharply questioned the extent of the Governor's recommendations, saying he doubted the need of the sums suggested for relief and State purposes. Only $500,000 to $750,000 would be needed to meet decreases in general purposes revenues resulting from the tax amendment, he insisted.

With regard to a net income tax, the Governor said that while "there is probably no fairer or better way to sustain government," this source of revenue should be left to future Legislatures. A gross income State tax was enacted last year, and Hiner declared this was producing in excess of $2,000,000 annually. This was challenged by Fred L. Fox, State tax commissioner, who was on the floor, and who said receipts so far were only $250,000, although he expected more would be added.

During the discussion five revenue-raising measures designed to raise close to $10,000,000 were introduced. One, intended to raise $6,000,000, was offered by Delegate Rush D. Holt (Democrat), Lewis. It provides for a depletion tax of 3 cents on each 1,000 feet of gas, 2 cents on each barrel of oil, 1 cent a ton on coal and 1 mill on each kilowatt hour of electricity.

Delegate A. J. Lubliner (Democrat), Mercer, offered bills calling for a privilege tax of 5 mills on each dollar of corporate capital stock and on all scripts, bonds, certificates and evidences of indebtedness of corporation and municipal loans. A sales tax proposal of 3 per cent was offered by Delegate Frank R. Hill (Democrat), Pocahontas, exempting essential foodstuffs, articles bearing a higher emergency tax rate and products of farms, forests and mines sold by producers.

Final legislative approval was given to a bill permitting municipalities to use for current expenses any portion of the 30 per cent allocation for debts not required for that purpose.

Flat prohibition repeal, defeated yesterday along with a State monopoly liquor plan, got back into the House today in a proposal from Delegate Ben H. Butcher (Democrat), Wood. This provides that the repeal amendment shall state, "The Legislature shall enact laws regulating the manufacture, sale, transportation and control of intoxicating liquors."

The barber and beauty shop bill, with several amendments attached, was passed by the Senate and returned to the House.

The Senate judiciary committee recommended passage of the farm and home moratorium measure.

Valley Music Fete Planned March 4

Colleges Join in Honoring Two Song Writers.

Harrisonburg, Va., Feb. 23 (Spl.). Dr. John W. Wayland, of here, Shenandoah Valley historian, and Prof. Will H. Reubush, of Dayton, musician, the authors of "Old Virginia," will be honored next Sunday at a music festival to be held at Shenandoah College, Dayton.

The State Teachers College here and Bridgewater College will participte in the festival with students of Shenandoah College. These three institutions have done more than any others to popularize the song as the Old Dominion State song.

Dr. Wayland wrote the words while on the faculty of teachers' college here. Prof. Ruebush, of the Shenandoah Conservatory of Music, wrote the melody. Prof. J. H. Ruebush, also of Shenandoah College, is assembling a valley-wide orchestra for the occasion.

Students Get College Jobs In Westminster

Communities Start Cutting Number of Workers on CWA Projects.

Westminster, Md., Feb. 23 (Spl.). The Federal Relief Administration plan for aiding students who can not finance college educations was put into effect here this week at Western Maryland college when 36 students—18 boys and 18 girls—were given work at $15 per month.

The jobs include clerical, dining room, library and janitor work about buildings and campus.

Effective today, the number of men employed on CWA projects in Carroll County was reduced from 578 to 429, according to an announcement made by Charles O. Clemson, chairman of the county CWA committee. This reduction, affecting 25 per cent of the CWA workers, was the result of an order received from Harry Greenstein, State administrator.

The orders did not authorize any further reduction of men after this week, Clemson stated. The 149 to be dropped tomorrow will be removed from projects which can be abandoned without handicapping any community, the chairman explained.

Projects which are nearly completed or those of county-wide importance, will be continued under the present plans. Among the latter are the $11,000 repairs on Carroll County courthouse and construction of a foundation for a new Westminster high school building.

These projects, Clemson asserted, could not be interrupted without affecting every taxpayer. Among the first projects to be discontinued is the county road repair which has been progressing slowly due to poor weather conditions.

Water System Bids Opened.

Clearspring, Md., Feb. 23 (Spl.).—Bids for the distribution section of this town's new water system were opened yesterday. The $17,084 bid of W. Harry Angle, of Hagerstown, was lowest, Burgess David Ankeney announced.

The State department of health approved construction of a new system here following an epidemic of typhoid fever here two years ago, which was traced by health authorities to a polluted water system. Cisterns and wells are the only source of water now.

Hot Lunches in School.

Cumberland, Md., Feb. 23 (Spl.). Underweight children in Ridgeley School are served a hot lunch daily. This project is being carried on by women of the Ridgeley Parent-Teacher Association, in cooperation with the CWA. All food is furnished by the CWA.

CWA Lays Off Men.

Frostburg, Md., Feb. 23 (Spl.).—The mayor and city commissioners were notified that 23 per cent of the workers on Frostburg CWA projects have been removed from Government pay rolls, and that 10 per cent will be dismissed weekly until all are laid off. Many of the men will be given employment on PWA projects.

Tracking down the kidnaper

Twenty months ago the Lindbergh law gave authority to the Department of Justice to track kidnapers to their lairs. And of 24 kidnapings occurring in that time, only one remains unsolved. The work of solving the 23 required the utmost in courage and shrewd thinking. Gerald G. Gross has written a thrilling account of it for the Special Articles Section of this week's

Princess Anne Druggist Asks Lynch Hearing

Thompson Declares Lane's Accusation Is "False and Libelous."

William H. Thompson, Princess Anne druggist and one of the men named earlier in the week by W. Preston Lane, Maryland attorney general, as participating in the lynching of George Armwood, colored, yesterday telegraphed Senator Frederick Van Nuys (Democrat), Indiana, demanding a hearing before the Judiciary subcommittee in charge of the anti-lynching legislation.

Thompson, in his telegram, said he would come to Washington at his own expense and at the convenience of the committee "to deny the false and libelous statements given to you by Attorney General Lane implicating me in the lynching of George Armwood."

Senator Van Nuys, chairman of the committee, replied that the request would be laid before the committee at its next meeting. It is believed that Thompson's demand will be granted, as well as any of the other eight persons named by Lane. The committee, however, has no funds and all witnesses must pay their own expenses.

Thompson was one of four men arrested last November by the Maryland militia on a charge of participating in the Princess Anne lynching. The quartet was subsequently released by the court at Princess Anne on a writ of habeas corpus, without a hearing of the evidence gathered by Lane. The latter was given the Senate committee this week.

In a dispatch to The Post from Princess Anne, Thompson was quoted as stating that he had more than 50 reputable witnesses whom he expects to bring to Washington to prove that he was not in Princess Anne on the night of the lynching. He said he was in Salisbury and knew nothing of the lynching until his return home at Princess Anne.

"It is all a pack of lies," said Thompson, according to the dispatch, and Lane knows it. "In naming me before the Senate Judiciary Committee, Lane has done irreparable damage to my character. I have been absolved of all connection with lynching by the Somerset grand jury and Lane's continued attempts to connect me with the crime has assumed the aspects of a personal attack.

"I intend to see what can be done about it and will welcome opportunity to go before Senate committee and for all time clear my name of the stigma Lane has placed upon it."

Thompson intimated, the dispatch stated, that he will enter suit for $100,000 libel against Lane and the military authorities who arrested him here last winter.

Virginia Commandery Undergoes Inspection

Missing Girl Found Bound

Federal Agents Refuse to Give Interview; Child Not Hurt.

Fredericksburg, Va., Feb. 23 (Spl.).—The screams of Caroline Musante last night led a searching party, including two Department of Justice agents, to a spot in the woods more than a mile from the Musante home in Stafford County, where they found the girl, who had disappeared that morning, almost exhausted from exposure and bound so tightly that impaired circulation might have brought death in a few hours.

E. G. Peterson and L. J. Rauber, Department of Justice agents held the girl incommunicado last night and today at the Mary Washington Hospital.

Dr. R. J. Payne, family physician of the Musantes, today revealed the girl had suffered no serious effects from her experience.

The 14-year-old school girl, working a handkerchief gag out of her mouth, screamed, attracting her ibrother, Lonnie. She was found about a half-mile from the place where on February 2, 1933, she was discovered bound after having disappeared that morning.

A note received by Musante yesterday demanding $1,500 on pain of his daughter's death was turned over to the Washington agents. A Stafford County automobile mechanic was released after being taken before Caroline in the hospital.

Home and Heirlooms Lost in Virginia Fire

Culpeper, Va., Feb. 23 (Spl.).—The residence of Mrs. George Mallory, near here, an 8-room house, furnished with rare heirlooms, was destroyed by fire yesterday despite efforts of the Culpeper Fire Company. The flames were beyond control when equipment arrived.

Mrs. Mallory and her daughter, Mrs. J. W. Burton, returning home, found the colored caretaker fighting the flames single handed. The fire is believed to have started from an over-heated stove.

Massanutten Academy Schedules Debates

Although definite dates have not been announced, the Massanutten officials have booked debates with teams from St. Thomas College, of Scranton, Pa.; City College, of Baltimore, Md., and East Orange (N. J.) High School.

Historic Garden Week to Open Numerous Old Virginia Estates

Public May View Places April 23-28 Which Are Usually Secluded.

Richmond, Feb. 23 (AP).—The Garden Club of Virginia today made public a list of 150 gardens, estates and horse-breeding establishments throughout the Old Dominion which will be opened to the public from April 23 to 28, during "Virginia Historic Garden Week."

A number of houses and gardens which are open to public inspection only during garden week are on the list. In the Richmond district an interesting addition to the list is Tuckahoe, one of the best known of the James River estates. In a little house still standing in the garden Thomas Jefferson obtained some of his rudimentary education. East of Richmond the old homes, Chelsea, near West Point, and Hampstead will be open.

Historic Sites Listed.

Among the groups of homes are those in Gloucester and Mathews Counties, including Toddsbury, Elmington, Goshen, Roaring Springs, White March, Abingdon and Ware Churches, Bel Roi, birthplace of Dr. Walter Reed; Long Bridge Ordinary, Sherwood, Burgh Vestra, Popular Grove and Auburn.

Historic Williamsburg's offerings include the recently built garden and palace of the royal governors of Virginia, the old Capitol, Raleigh Tavern, the Garrett garden, the Bassett Hall garden and a group of homes. The Mercer house and garden will be open Monday only, the Vest Christian house and garden on Tuesday, while homes that will be open both Monday and Tuesday include the Cary Peachy house, the Hallam house, the Roper-Lee house.

On Wednesday and Thursday the Garrett house and garden, the Dey house, the Barlow house and the Catherine Rebecca kitchen will be open, and on Friday and Saturday The St. George Tucker house and garden, the Archibald Blair house and garden, the Peyton Randolph house and garden and the Waller house will be opened.

Wilson's Home Included.

The birthplace of Woodrow Wilson at Staunton, the garden of which is being restored by the Garden Club of Virginia, and the house by a National restoration organization of which Senator Harry Flood Byrd is chairman, will be opened to the public.

Homes of Presidents of the United States will be shown to the public during garden week are Oak Hill and Ash Lawn, homes of James Monroe; Wakefield, birthplace of Washington; Montpelier, home of James and Dolly Madison; Monticello, home of Thomas Jefferson; Popular Forest, summer home of Thomas Jefferson, and Bassett Hall, where John Tyler was said to have been a resident.

Roanoke Police Seek Radio Aid

Force Short by 66 Men, Chief Reports.

Roanoke, Va., Feb. 23 (Spl.).—Installation of a short wave radio station and equipment of police cars with receiving sets is recommended by Chief of Police J. L. Manning in his annual report.

Chief Manning declares the police force here is short 66 men, when measured by standards indorsed by National authorities, and that the police alarm system is inadequate. He recommends that the detective force be increased from 6 to 10 men and that the motorcycle squad be boosted from 6 to 9.

The report revealed that arrests for violating city ordinances decreased 1,161 in 1933, as compared to 1932, but arrests on State charges increased 174.

Rapid Progress Noted in Manila Under U.S. Rule

Whole East Changed, Says Admiral on Return After 3 Decades.

Manila (U.P.).—Three decades have brought many changes to the Far East, and particularly the Philippines, according to Admiral Frank B. Upham, newly appointed commander of the United States Asiatic Fleet.

Seated on the afterdeck of the U. S. S. Isabel, trim gunboat which serves as the flagship when the fleet is in winter quarters, Upham looked out over the blue waters of Manila Bay to the palm-lined Dewey boulevard skirting the shore, and Manila's rising skyline of hotels and clubs in the vicinity of the Luneta.

"That was a marsh when I last saw it," he said.

Recalls 1904 Days.

He was referring to the days of 1904, just after the close of the insurrection, and only a few years after the American flag was first raised over the Philippines.

He left the islands that year as a young officer and did not return again until he became chief in command of the Asiatic Fleet, with a rank of full admiral.

In his cruises ashore since his arrival, Upham found that Manila's new front on the bay revealed the progress which he observed elsewhere.

It is a picturesque old Spanish city, which aroused many memories in the admiral's mind.

In looking over the landmarks between Cavite and Manila, Upham visited an old church at Las Pinas, where there is an organ made entirely of bamboo pipes, more than 100 years old.

Sharp Contrasts Shown.

Other recollections showing a sharp contrast betwen affairs then and today included an account of a visit to Vladivostok prior to the Spanish-American War, to participate in a coronation celebration for Czar Nicholas II of Russia. Thirty years has seen the passing of the Czars and th erise of Communism in Russia.

In those days the fleet based mostly at Yokohama, for the American Flag did not fly then over the Philippines.

The Whangpo was so shallow that the big warships could not get up the river to Shanghai.

Upham, in company with his predecessor, Admiral Montgomery M. Taylor, served on the Olympia, Admiral Dewey's flagship, in the Battle of Manila Bay, and returned to the United States in 1899. Upham came back to Oriental waters on the historic battleship Oregon for a tour of duty from 1902 until 1904.

Mrs. Mary M. Hardesty Buried at Berryville

Berryville, Va., Feb. 23 (Spl.).—Funeral services were held from the home yesterday for Mrs. Mary Moore Hardesty, 59, widow of Charles Triplett Hardesty, who died Tuesday at her home in northern Clarke County. The Rev. Thomas Morgan, pastor of Crum's Southern Methodist Church, conducted the rites and interment was in Greenhill Cemetery here.

Mrs. Hardesty was a native of Hampshire County, W. Va. She is survived by four sons: C. T. Hardesty, jr., Thomas F., Robert H., and Richard Hardesty, all at home.

Rites to Be Held Today For Mrs. Ellen Kirby

Staunton, Va., Feb. 23 (Spl.).—The funeral of Mrs. Ellen Kirby, 80, who died at her home here yesterday, will be held tomorrow at 10 a. m.

Mrs. Kirby is survived by two daughters, Mrs. C. E. Thompson, Fluvanna County, and Mrs. Lula Kee, Staunton, and three sisters, Mrs. Virginia Sweets and Mrs. Alice Perkins, of Washington, and Mrs. Amanda Chisum, of Charlottesville.

Scouts Honor Court Is Held at Lexington

Lexington, Va., Feb. 23 (Spl.).—The Lexington Troop of the Boy Scouts held a Court of Honor here tonight with J. W. Fix, of Staunton, scout executive, in charge. The Rev. J. J. Gravatt, rector of Trinity Episcopal Church, of Staunton, and chairman of the Stonewall Jackson Council of Boy Scouts, spoke.

The feature of the meeting was the conferring of the Eagle Scout rank on Dickie Irby, son of Mr. and Mrs. R. M. Irby.

Academy Headmaster, 3 Others Escape Injury

Waynesboro, Pa., Feb. 23 (Spl.).—Two automobiles were badly damaged but their occupants were uninjured after steering apparatus on the car of Dr. Boyd Edwards, headmaster of Mercersburg Academy, broke on the way to Greencastle, where Dr. Edwards was to speak.

The Edwards car, driven by his chaufeur, W. D. Cutchall, crashed into the car of John J. Shank, Waynesboro chemist, who was accompanied by Roland E. Long, manager of the South Penn Power Co.

Free Seed Requests Harbingers of Spring

Sacramento, Calif. (U.P.).—State Department of Agriculture officials here have little need for calendars to determine when spring has arrived.

Advent of the planting season is heralded annually by a deluge of requests for free seeds. The department, however, doesn't distribute seeds, the inquirers were informed.

First Virginia Public Works Check Arrives

Pittsylvania County Urged to Permit Camp for 200 Transients.

Richmond, Feb. 23 (AP).—The first allotment of funds for PWA projects in Virginia was received today.

A check for $200,000 for construction of the Lynchburg-Pedlar River water pipeline was the first received. The total expenditure on the project will be $650,000.

Pay rolls on projects already under way have been met heretofore with short-term loans.

Meanwhile, William A. Smith, Virginia emergency relief director, launched a survey of the State to ascertain the number and location of families stranded as a result of technological unemployment, depletion of National resources, or Government-controlled production.

M. W. Thompson, assistant director of transient relief in Virginia, was in Chatham to appear before the Pittsylvania County supervisors tomorrow with reference to the proposal to establish a transient camp for Negroes at the old county almshouse.

The proposal to establish a camp to accommodate 200 Negroes there has met with opposition, but Mr. Thompson said he believed he could convince the board that the camp could be maintained without creating public dissatisfaction.

Road's Memorial Trees Will Honor Veterans

Roanoke, Va., Feb. 23 (Spl.).—Four memorial trees will be planted by the William Watts Chapter, U. D. C., along the Lee highway between Roanoke and Salem. The trees will be dedicated to the memory of the late Col. William Watts, Col. S. S. Brooks, Capt. S. L. Crute, and all veterans of the William Watts Camp.

The chapter will join the American Legion auxiliary in giving a reception to the State D. A. R. and their hostesses here March 20.

Adams and Adams.

There must have been lifting of Brahmin eyebrows on Beacon street when the Adamses were confused. For Boston does not ordinarily confuse its Adamses. It has known them too long, from John, of Quincy, down to Charles Francis, of Concord. "Bob" Washburn, the sedate Transcript's chronicler of doings among the descendants of the Brahmin great, must have shrugged his shoulders in utter horror when he read that the former Secretary of the Navy, with presidents and ambassadors, historians and the country's proudest "failure" among his forebears, had been accused of harboring airplane stock while a Cabinet member. For two hundred years the Adamses, members of America's most famous dynasty, have never been suspect.

Charles Francis Adams was confused with Charles Francis Adams. The sailor of the America's Cup defender was mistaken for the former owner of a hockey team. The preserver of the Adams estates was mistaken for the president of the largest chain store system in Massachusetts. A reasonable mistake. An amusing mistake. No blood lines join the two. Each bears the other's name, and neither bears the other grudge for doing so. A not unusual name, that of Adams, and an honorable one. So how does one Bostonian let another know of which Adams he speaks? It is simple. Inflection does it. Only a Bostonian can say Adams in two different ways, so that one means Charles Francis Adams and the other means—that other Adams.

Sandino.

Augusto Sandino, crude Bolivar of the Nicaraguan hills, was not a mere bandit; nor was he entirely the martyr his friends among the patriots would have him. He was a fierce little man, sometimes a Robin Hood, sometimes a soldier, and always the soul of sincerity. When the United States Marines vainly sought out his lairs in the jungles, they were officially hunting "a bandit and assassin." Those who led the Marines felt otherwise; they were seeking a clever strategist in whose head was stored more knowledge of the pitfalls of Nicaragua than the Marines could learn in a lifetime. It cost many American lives before a compromise was reached, the election was held, and Sandino came out of the hills essentially victorious.

The death of this tumultuous hater of Yankee imperialism, whose major political faith was the emancipation of his fellow countrymen from peonage, may be fraught with unpleasant implications. "Little August" had been dining with President Juan Sacasa a short time before he was shot down by the National Guardsmen, once, next to American Marines, his bitterest enemies. His visit was under a pledge of truce. Does the murder mean that Sacasa has lost his grip? Does it mean that another civil war may arise to renew complications from which Nicaragua was at last happily gaining freedom?

The death of Sandino comes at a time when the Central American republics are again considering plans of federation which might do much to help solution of their economic problems. This was an ambition in which the Nicaraguan leader's active mind was greatly interested. It would be a sad tribute to his memory if further disunity, rather than a greater measure of political and social advance, should result from his untimely death.

Promotion In Order.

Richmond B. Keech has demonstrated a broad capacity for public service as people's counsel for the District. The recommendation of the District Commissioners that he be appointed to succeed Maj. Gen. Patrick as a member of the Public Utilities Commission appears to be based entirely upon his personal qualifications. Whether Mr. Keech is assigned to this new post or given another term as people's counsel he will undoubtedly render valuable service to consumers in Washington.

There may be some disappointment over the move to shift Mr. Keech to the vacancy in the Public Utilities Commission. He has been especially effective in bringing about lower gas and power rates, and in crystallizing the consumers' viewpoint on other issues. It is pointed out, however, that he may render a similar service as a member of the Utilities Commission. The present members of that body are engineers. A lawyer member might be especially useful, since he could defend the commission's orders before the courts.

Recommendation of Mr. Keech for a commissionership has given rise to speculation as to a merger of his present office with that of special assistant corporation counsel in charge of utility matters. In some respects these two positions overlap, yet their functions are not identical. The special assistant corporation counsel serves as an attorney for the Public Utilities Commission, while the people's counsel represents consumer interests. Sometimes he may fight against commission rulings which the special assistant corporation counsel is obligated to defend. A careful study of this situation ought to be made before a change is recommended. An efficient people's counsel may save the public many times the cost of his services, as Mr. Keech has demonstrated.

Bewildering Distinctions.

Secretary Wallace charges that ten large packing companies have conspired to manipulate prices, have created a monopoly in selling and dealing in meat products, and have forced competitors out of business. The packers have accordingly been summoned to appear for a formal hearing to show cause why an order to "cease and desist" from such practices should not be issued. The validity of the charges presumably will be tested by the evidence brought out at the formal hearings and, until then, judgment must be reserved on the question of facts. However, the whole proceeding is confusing and bewildering to the average citizen who finds it difficult to distinguish between the price fixing that is illegal under existing laws and the price fixing that is encouraged under industrial codes and marketing agreements.

The Administration's recovery program rests upon and assumes the existence of price regulation in a general sense, and in certain industries permits price control of a far-reaching and rigid nature. Consequently, there appears to be a lack of team work between the various parts of the Government's administrative machinery when the packing industry is charged with collusive price fixing by the Department of Agriculture. For the recovery act encourages a type of agreement among competitors which directly or indirectly results in control of prices.

Although these apparent inconsistencies may be legally explicable, they are, practically speaking, difficult to reconcile with the general program of the Administration. The packing industry, like others, is entitled to organize for the purpose of regulating competitive practices. Moreover, it is under no compulsion to pay the farmer as much as the Secretary of Agriculture thinks he should have, nor is it obligated to limit its profits to amounts deemed fair or reasonable by the AAA.

The Secretary of Agriculture of course insists that there is a distinction between collusion and legitimate control of competitive practices. But his criticisms of the packers, indicating a belief that they are trying to "beat down" the prices paid farmers for processed hogs, hint at dissatisfaction with the regulatory system itself.

Obviously it is difficult at one and the same time to organize industry on a nation-wide scale to raise prices, and to prosecute industry for failure to compete freely. Partial price regulation is certain to result in injustice to certain groups of producers and undue profits to others. The result is that regulation has to be extended constantly to cover a variety of operations. Instead of threatening the packers with prosecution for price collusion, the logical next step would seem to be to establish a more complete control over their operations and charges both at the producing and the consuming end. The fact that such action would be logical is far from calling it desirable.

Signs of Life.

Hopeful signs of life are appearing in the market for State and municipal issues, as shown by the lengthening list of new offerings, representing governmental units from New England to California. This development has followed closely upon the Administration's decision for provisional stabilization of the dollar. It tends to strengthen the belief of those who predicted that a return to monetary stability would be followed by a revival of activity in the private investment market. The improvement is particularly encouraging in view of the fact that no guarantees against further dollar devaluation have been given.

There seems to be no doubt that a strong latent investment demand exists and would become effective, given reasonable encouragement. With fears about the currency allayed, although not entirely dispelled, a direct appeal for funds from municipal borrowers in good standing ought to meet with a satisfactory response. The Federal Government can assist revival of the private investment market, moreover, by withholding financial support from States and localities able to place their issues directly. In many cases, the assurance of Federal aid, in case of failure to place an issue through private investment agencies, would suffice to make a flotation successful.

Once a beginning had been made, other classes of borrowers dependent upon Federal aid, notably the railroads, would be in a better position to test the receptivity of the private investment market. Railway equipment trust certificates, for instance, might be sold to investors and the Government could withdraw from this kind of financing activity. With revival fairly started along customary lines, the foundation would be laid for an all-around expansion of the market for new issues. By that time, the securities act, which, together with monetary uncertainty, has helped to block the road to new financing, may be radically revised in the interests of economic recovery.

Sir Edward Elgar.

Sir Edward Elgar, dead in his 77th year, may well be called the last of the English classicists in music. Best known, perhaps, for his march, "Pomp and Circumstance," written on the occasion of the coronation of King Edward VII, this artist had many famous compositions to his credit. His music, from the start, was sound, if not inspired. Although he did not advance with his age into extreme modernism, he was always different to the extent that it took time for many of his listeners to accept his work.

From his first musical experience as a band leader in his native Worcester, through his unfinished work on his Third Symphony, his devotion to his art was marked. The work which first brought him attention was "The Dream of Gerontius," based on Newman's poem. It was attacked by some critics because of its Catholicism and it remained unpraised until Richard Straus heard it played at the Lower Rhine Festival in 1901. His massive choral works were many. In 1908 he wrote his first Symphony, in A flat. This, the critics felt, had more breadth, sympathy, and beauty than his harsher earlier works. After the war he turned to chamber music and he will probably be remembered for some of this and for his famous march, rather than for his more ambitious work.

The Economy Test.

The Senate's vote of 60 to 14 against repeal of the 1933 economy act does not justify predictions as to the fate of other amendments designed to restore various benefits to veterans. Senator Hatfield's demands in behalf of the veterans were far more excessive than the program sponsored by the American Legion. Affirmative action in both houses on his amendment would have restored all the abuses, inequalities and extravagance of the haphazard pension laws enacted between the close of the war and 1932. The surprising fact is that as many as 14 senators could be found to support this move.

The other amendments that will confront the Senate Monday would cost taxpayers less, yet they differ from Senator Hatfield's proposition more in degree than in principle. It is estimated that the Legion program would add from $75,000,000 to $100,000,000 to the Government's annual bill for the relief of former soldiers and their dependents. Complete abolition of the veterans' section of the economy act would expand the budget by approximately $300,000,000 now and by much larger sums in future years. The veterans' lobby is too shrewd to ask for such a large sum in a single bill.

Only a few months after the economy act became law Congress began whittling away the savings it made possible. Some adjustments doubtless were necessary to iron out inequities arising out of this sweeping reform. But such adjustments can be and are being made without any new legislation. Every time Congress tinkers with the system it approved a year ago the effect is to throw out of balance the benefits accruing to various classes of veterans. This, of course, gives the veterans' lobby an argument for further adjustments, and Congress an excuse for further tinkering. In other words, the tactics which are now being followed in the Senate threaten piecemeal destruction of the economy measure.

Many Senators pleaded earnestly for support of the President when lavish appropriation measures bearing his indorsement were before Congress. It will be instructive to see whether they prove equally loyal in preventing sabotage of this White House measure to conserve the Government's credit.

Conserving Children's Eyesight.

In establishing eyesight conservation classes for pupils of the District, our school system is just 20 years behind Boston and Cleveland, where sight-saving facilities were first utilized as part of the school curriculum. According to David Resnick, of the National Society for the Prevention of Blindness, Washington is the 125th American city to establish special classes for children with defective vision. Certainly that is not a favorable record for the National Capital. But neglect in the past is somewhat overshadowed by the importance of the eyesight conservation work that is now being done.

Three local schools of this type will provide facilities for 60 children. By means of enlarged type, maps, globes, &c., special lighting arrangements, yellow chalk and typewriters manipulated by the touch system, children with subnormal vision will be able to acquire much the same information and experience that are offered in regular classes. In addition they will be trained for and encouraged to select occupations in which their handicap will be minimized.

The modern plan of providing special instruction for handicapped children has a broad social aspect. Observers have found that children who are unable to keep abreast of school work because of inferior sight or other physical defects often become morose, mentally subnormal and even criminal. Mental complexes and inhibitions often arise from physical handicaps, and these are accentuated by consciousness of failure. Corrective measures and special equipment which permit these children to function normally often change their entire outlook on life.

Sight conservation classes are beyond the experimental stage, although only 6,000 out of 50,000 children known to be suffering from defective vision in the United States are enrolled in such groups. It will be interesting to watch the development of these classes in Washington as an essential part of the larger problem of educating handicapped children.

The Lindbergh Rebuke.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: As usual, the Administration demonstrates, in no uncertain terms, its complete inability "to take it"—an unpalatable truth—and by adding insult to injury has committed a grave, unforgivable error.

And regarding Farley's sharp reply to Col. Lindbergh, suggesting that he look into the "facts"—an alleged statement is no fact until established beyond the shadow of a doubt, and that opportunity has not been given.

The Administration gives excellent proof that it is slipping fast—by documentary evidence aplenty.

JOHN T. FISHER.
Washington, Feb. 15.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I thought you might want the slant of one of us from out in the "sticks" as to the great popularity of the greatest President these United States have ever seen, according to the great "Charlie," head of the Democratic Press Bureau.

The rebuff to our great hero, Lindbergh, is the straw that broke the camel's back and people are not hesitating in saying that this Administration is a flat tire and that everything they have tried to do has broken down. A few badly managed banks caused Roosevelt to work untold hardships by closing all banks. A few cases of excessive pensions to officers holding highly paid Government jobs caused the "great promiser" to cut all pensions off and caused 100 Spanish War vets to commit suicide. Now the air mail baloney! A few do wrong, and all are punished, including Lindbergh! With our poor people paying $7.50 a barrel for flour that cost $3.25 just a year ago, there is a tremendous holler and this great President is going to do something else besides talk in the "mike" to pacify them. You better have one of your men make a canvass of this Democratic County of Hardy, which is only 100 miles from your office, and you will be surprised. Don't ask the Democratic officeholders of our county, but ask the man on the street, who, when election comes around is the one who counts.

JOSEPH H. HAWKINS.
Wardensville, W. Va., Feb. 15.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I see that Mr. Stephen Early, of Mr. Roosevelt's secretarial staff, became quite caustic in describing Col. Lindbergh's letter of protest as "publicity!" Well, "publicity"—to the nth degree—has been for the past year so much in evidence and use in those sacred circles wherein Mr. Early moves that he probably couldn't think of any other motive, just measuring the Eagle by the standards of political roosters!

For years now Lindbergh has been investing his deserved popularity as the world's premier aviator in building up America's air transport, but when he sees the results of these years dealt a smashing blow by the Government he isn't supposed to exercise the right of his citizenship and the prestige of his standing to vigorously protest such drastic action!

In thus wrecking the house so as to drive out a few rats, neither the interests of the traveling public nor of the honest officials and those of the capable workers are considered! And even the few higher-ups, accused of grafting, are not given an American chance to defend themselves, the law courts are ignored, and Mr. Roosevelt, Farley, and a handful of Senators constitute themselves judge, jury and executioner! And then we howl about popular disrespect for law.

LESTER TRAVIS.
Berkeley, Calif., Feb. 14.

Private Employment Agencies

To the Editor of the Post—Sir: We ask for this letter to be published in your daily paper, so that Commissioner George Allen and the public will not be misled.

We call to your attention that all proprietors of private employment agencies are tax payers in the District of Columbia, operating legitimate business, and we feel that if any racketeering in misrepresenting information in regard to positions or overcharging fees is being done by any agency in this community, it should be handled according to law.

We also wish to call to your attention that every private employment agency of the District is required to pay $100 a year for license and is also under a $1,000 bond. Any of these agents operating under the law will lay open their books to any auditor secured, for the public's approval.

From reports in the papers there are 63,000 applicants registered at the U. S. Employment Bureau on Indiana avenue. Commissioner Allen should try to secure positions for these, without hinting his personal opinion to the public in regard to private employment agencies. An investigation of all private agencies will be granted at personal request.

We are with the United States officials and these private agencies to the greatest extent in trying to secure positions for the unemployed. We wish to bring this to the public's consideration.

On Magnifying the Good.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In Mr. Spargo's letter to The Post, the suggestion is made that we should adopt the slogan, "The Constitution above all," as if a legal instrument, made by man, could equal God, or even be greater than man himself who gave its relative existence. In this connection, I remember reading in an old American grammar, "A soul is greater than a state," which corroborates my convictions on this subject. Both, a state and its constitution, are made by man and for man, and not man for them.

I say these things because there is a pedantic tendency in these latter days, to deify, to trust in systems and personalities, all of which are instruments or instrumentalities, susceptible of possible misuse, hence, our duty—"eternal vigilance"—to detect and neutralize evil no matter in what form it may appear, and to magnify the good, in whomsover we see it manifested. The good only when functioning through any human soul, is worthy of adoration, because goodness is the only principle that can not be misused. Therefore it should be trusted rather than codes or constitutions, which have no authority in or by themselves.

C. PHILIPS.
Washington, Feb. 20.

Dangers of Icy Streets.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: As a subscriber to your paper I read each day of the many people who fall and are seriously hurt on the icy streets of Washington each winter. Yet nothing seems to be done about it.

I understand there is a law in the District whereby every sidewalk must be cleaned or the occupant of the house fined. If this is so, why has it never been put into practice in the 16 years I have lived here? In my home town you are given three hours after the snow ceases to fall to clean your walk or are fined—and the walks are cleaned. Why not start something of the sort here and save people from breaking their bones? The newspaper seems to be the best medium of getting things to the attention of people.

JULIETTE L. TARTER.
Washington, Feb. 13.

HLBB Working Conditions.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In printing the account of the young girls of the Home Loan Bank Board who had to work in a room without windows your reporter missed the point, namely, that if the board continues to increase its personnel, the legitimate civil service employes of the Department of Commerce will have to work in the vaults, or on the roof.

Your paper has shown itself fair in the stand which it has taken so far, so I am requesting it not to follow will o' the wisps.

ROSE VICKERS.
Washington, Feb. 19.

The Irish Mind.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: A certain type of Irish mind ever is in opposition to everything British. It has surprised me not a little that we have not heard from these anti-British people placing the blame on England for the present starling "oppression."

Did not the starling come to us from England—therefore England should be blamed for the presence of the pest! Opposition to Britain is nothing new. Adams, in one of his letters to Congress dated March 24, 1870, wrote: "The British Empire is crumbling to pieces like a rope of sand."

An Irish mind cries out: "We whipped her (England) in 1776, and we whipped her in 1812, and we'd whip her again, and I wish to God we had the chance today."

The "rope of sand" has turned out to be a steel cable; today the sun never sets on the British Empire.

As Others See It.

Are Your Arms Your Own?

Have you examined the crest on the door of your automobile lately? If not, it might be well to do so. For all you know, that little heraldic device may be unwittingly compelling you to commit a serious social faux pas.

At the annual luncheon of the Order of Americans of Armorial Ancestry recently held in New York a speaker related a shocking incident. He told of seeing, in Boston of all places, a coat of arms on an automobile that rightly belonged only to the Duke of Argyll. That is, the coat of arms, not the car. A murmur of dazed surprise reverberated throughout the audience at the disclosure.

Now if that sort of armorial offense be possible in an enlightened retreat like Boston, what can be expected in less favored centers where comparatively few can distinguish the difference between a lion rampant and a crocodile couchant? Who can blame a happy-go-lucky Westerner if she should mix her quarterings and lozenges on her best stationery and perchance order on her escutcheon gules d'argent when she should have told the engraver three wheatstacks on a champ d'or?

It is, indeed, cause for blushful regret that another guest at the armorial luncheon revealed what he designated as a common practice. It seems that certain individuals (happily unnamed) so far forget themselves as to select a coat of arms motto because the original bearer's name has some resemblance to tehir own. Can heraldic devices go further?

Manufacturers, too, it was stated, frequently appropriate aristocratic crests to use in advertising their products and thus add to their social standing in the community. This is, indeed, disquieting. It is not pleasant to think that some valiant knight earned his quarterings by jousting successfully in a tournament when Henry V was King of England in order that a chocolate bar made in America in 1934 might have a smart label. It would not need a College of Heralds to call that a bar sinister.

(Christian Science Monitor.)

Along the Potomac

With

Carlisle Bargeron

I SHOULD not be a bit surprised if something else is done to the dollar in a day or so, that it will be shifted up or down or maybe abolished altogether. There is not the slightest basis, however, for this statement except rather general agreement hereabouts that something startling must be done to divert the public's attention from the whole air-mail picture.

BARGERON.

Without regard to the merits of the cancellation of contracts or to the question of whether something had to be done, the Administration is taking a political licking, its first one. There is hardly any doubt of that. It was breath-taking and dramatic at first, but now criticism is developing by leaps and bounds.

I may be wrong, but there seems to be the realization in Administration quarters that it moved too precipitately, that for once it stubbed its toe on a matter of very major import. And among some of the crowd there is a wan expression, a weakness in the stomach and that oppressed feeling around the chest that comes with the morning after. It was a big splurge when they left their tables and tried to dance with the club entertainer. But the next morning there is only a big headache.

• • • •

And they seem to be having difficulty in backtracking, in getting out of the mess gracefully. This they are manifestly trying to do with the amendment of Senator O'Mahoney to the appropriation bill permitting the companies to bid again for the contracts. That they even let O'Mahoney sponsor this amendment showed a cloudiness of brain. It was a dead giveaway. He is the Postoffice Department's spokesman in the Senate.

Even the elements appear to be conspiring to defeat them on this episode. Pilot after pilot is cracking up to emphasize the recklessness of the whole enterprise.

Over in the battle of wits before the Black investigating committee, Walter Brown seems to have got the better of the headlines for the first time At the afternoon hearing he told of a conversation he claims to have had with Jim Farley since the inquiry began, in which Jim expressed his disfavor of "political investigations." Jim told him something else, too, Brown added, but he promised Jim not to tell this. Now the committee says it is going to have Jim come down and tell what it was.

There is mystery there, deep and baffling. What could Jim have confided in his predecessor? Could he by chance have made light of the committee investigators or have told Brown that it was all just a lot of fun?

Whatever it was Brown was being mischievous with the committee. He meant no good to the Democrats.

Heretofore, when the Administration has been in a political hole it has got out by springing something else startling. Its practice, in fact, has been to crowd one thing on another so fast that the picture was a blur, not clear in any one phase, a series of thrilling episodes that altogether gave the magic effect of action.

Mr. Roosevelt himself gave it as his policy to be always doing something and if he hit it right three-fourths of the time he would be satisfied.

My belief is that action, something that will make the populace exclaim "What an Administration" is needed now. But for the life of me I can't imagine what it could be. Everything seems to have been done and there is also the fact that after what we have been through, we do not thrill so easily.

The only thing I can possibly think of is something thrilling about the dollar again, something such as abolishing it. Certainly something to get us to talking about it and take our minds off the air-mail mess.

PLAQUES COME BACK.

Under the guise of modernistic decoration, the plaque is rearing its ugly head in the American home, says the New York Sun. Can the leopard change its spots? Can the hassock, the patent rocker, the whatnot, the marbletop bureau, the tidy, the afghan, the ormolu clock, the portiere, the inside blind, the Rogers group—in short, can the furnishings of Grandfather Whoosis's house be brought back from the dust and made to live harmoniously with tubular steel chairs and right-angled bookcases? It is no more improbable than making the plaque subdue itself to the element of modernism in decoration. Everybody's aunt or great-aunt with a touch of artistic talent produced a plaque; homemade, handcolored, it hung on a bedroom or living room wall and breathed the spirit of the age as composedly as did the still life over the sideboard in the dining room. One thing or another must happen: The essential nature of the plaque must disappear in the iron mold of modernism, or the arrival of the plaque must be the beginning of corruption in the archly modernistic.

A FLYER IN ENGLISH.

Kim Wak Hong now can fly in two languages. Kim started after a pilot's license several months ago at San Jose. He took to the air like a bird. He could fly, but only in Chinese, says the San Francisco Chronicle.

When it came to the Department of Commerce examination, which had to be written in English, Kim went into a verbal tailspin. But he bailed out with a dictionary for a parachute and now at last has passed the license examination. He can fly in English, too.

No End of Books

By Theodore Hall.

Philippine Station.

It's odd how one's feelings can change while reading a book. I picked up this novel by Charles L. Clifford, "To Many Boats" (Little Brown, $2), about 3 o'clock one morning after I'd been reading all evening. I was, as you can imagine, pretty well satisfied with looking at print. But from a curiosity very awkward at that time of day I read the first three pages, and was rewarded by an exceeding annoyance. Young Capt. Coates, at an Army post in the Philippines, gets out of bed—and, oh, the heat, and, oh, the cicadas, and, oh, this horrid life, and so on. What irritated me in particular was that adolescent device of three periods after a phrase, whereby an author tries to turn on emotion as if from a spigot. I squirmed.

Yet I read on. Somehow, for all this overemphasis, there was an undeniable vitality in the pages. Scenes began to leap out at me, characters took form and (more important) lived and breathed in that form. I forgot my irritation, I forgot myself, I went right on reading until I had finished the book at dawn.

For Charles Clifford (in 1915-16 second lieutenant of Philippine Scouts; now major of cavalry, stationed at Philadelphia) knows his army and his Philippines, and of them he has told a cracking good story.

The scene is a small cavalry post 100 miles from Manila, the time 1918. You see at once that the white officers who commanded the colored regiment were those who, for one reason or another, had been denied any share in the war raging on the other side of the globe. Here on this stifling post, in its deadly boredom, they chafed at the reins, snapped back at each other, wound themselves into unholy knots of intrigue. There was a disappointed colonel to hold them in rigid command; a major of German blood to hate; Mrs. von Kurtz, the latter's lovely wife, to attract the officers and give food for gossip to the officers' wives. There were the colored troopers to be considered, and the Chinese and Filipino house servants as well. And always the heat, the drink, the loneliness, the constant and unbearable tension.

The book is crammed with episodes which will stamp themselves into your brain. The morning, for example, when the regiment lines up to watch one of their number hung for murder, and the gutteral, panther cry which escapes them as the trap falls, the moment which might lead to anything eased only by the mules running away with the ambulance. Or the time Capt. Coats walks unarmed into the barracks of his own company after the men have torn the rifles out of the racks and are drunk with "bino" and lusting for revenge at a needless cruelty inflicted by a hard-boiled "shave-tail." Or the way Coates faces his enemy, Maj. von Kurtz, when rank is thrown overboard and the issue is naked between them.

I would be inclined to call it melodrama were it not for the fact that Maj. Clifford never allows the action to step outside of a deep artistic plausibility. We believe all this happened, however stark and clashing, because we are so thoroughly pursuaded. Very soon we become accustomed to the vivid and telling style, and we are there in the Philippines with these exiles who have missed "too many boats."

Explanation by Hydraulics.

Perhaps you saw, in Wednesday's Post, the picture of a strange device of tubes and tanks called the "Economonstrator." It was an invention of Dr. H. C. Dickinson, retired president of the National Society of Automotive Engineers, which purported to illustrate the workings of the economic system.

Very similar to this unpleasantly named contrivance are the diagrams in James D. Mooney's "The New Capitalism" (Macmillan, $3.0). To show the balanced flow of wheat and shoes, or the influence of a 30-hour week on real wages, the book gives very prettily colored drawings of tanks, pipe lines, pet cocks and check valves, all hooked up together. At first glance, especially when potassium nitrate is assumed to be dissolved in the water, the explanation seems more complicated than the problem. Yet with a little patience the diagrams are understood. They reduce complex economic phenomena to hydraulic images, and the result is curiously interesting.

After thus explaining the number of topics, Mr. Mooney, a prominent industrialist, lists economic ideals and fallacies and exhorts various classes of society to the paths they should take. In this he shows himself very much on the right wing. "In the ideal economic America, the classical patterns of capitalism, with their human implication that 'what I worked for and saved is mine,' would be accepted because of their inevitability." And further, "It is fallaciously believed that the Government can enter all sorts of economic activities (outside of its natural sphere of security and defense)."

His plea for a capitalism based on "Constitutional morality" seems to me, to say the least, vague and unhistoric. The book says a number of good things which need to be said, but its vision is limited.

Cheyenne Strict Town; Even Beer Curtailed

Cheyenne, Wyo. (U.P.).—Cheyenne, one of the famous frontier towns of an earlier day, is no longer the wide-open town it once was.

Under a new joint program of city and county officials, it is illegal to buy even 3.2 beer after 1 a. m. or before 6 a. m. Drinking beer on the premises where it is sold is not allowed in Cheyenne at any hour.

Letter From a Bald-Headed Dad to His Daughter

By Robert Quillen

My Dear Louise: These things aren't new. Jesus was annoyed by gossips. Because He ate and drank in a normal way instead of fasting in gloomy solitude, they called Him a glutton and a wine-bibber. And if scandal-mongers told tales on Him, it isn't reasonable to hope that any one else will escape.

There isn't much you can do about gossip except let Nature take its course, but if ever you are the victim of slander, there are a few things I wish you to remember.

You can judge other people, gossips and all, by using yourself as a measure. We are all much alike, and you can expect others to act and feel very much as you do.

When you hear a tale about some of your acquaintances, your reaction is not determined by the tale itself but by the opinions you have already formed.

If the one talked about is some one you respect and like, you hear the tale with impatience and indignation. "I don't believe a word of it," you declare. "I know her, and she isn't that kind of girl."

But if the tale concerns one you dislike, you listen with satisfaction in spite of yourself and make little effort to disbelieve.

We all function that way, and you can count on it when talebearers make you their subject.

People who have reason to respect and like you will call the lie a lie and take no part in its circulation, while people who dislike or envy you will believe it gladly and joyously pass it on.

We believe the thing we wish to believe.

Some who seem to like you will swallow the tale and repeat it, but their liking is merely a pretense. However friendly they act, some secret envy makes their hearts bitter and they are glad of an excuse to think and speak ill of you.

You can't help that, but there is a way to make other people disbelieve any tale that is told to your discredit.

Just behave well enough to win their respect and be friendly enough to win their liking. Thus fortified you have nothing to fear, for they will refuse to believe anything that contradicts their present good opinion of you.

Love, DAD.

Leopold III Hailed New Belgian King

mounted gendarmes brought up the rear.

Princess Astrid rode to the Parliament Building in an automobile with her children, 3-year-old Crown Prince Baudoin and Princess Josephine Charlotte, 6, on either side of her. She held one hand of each tightly clasped as they moved up to the rostrum. The young queen wore a gown of severe black, relieved only by a string of pearls.

Leopold, in the khaki uniform of a general, similar to the formal garb of his father, wore a sash of the Order of Leopold. He rode to Parliament with a confident half smile on his lips as he bowed to the acclaim of his subjects.

"Long Live the King."

From thousands of throats came the cheers:

"Vive le Roi!" and "Vive Leopold!"

Leopold dismounted at Parliament and moved to the rostrum, where he was seated in a huge armchair. Belgium's kings have no thrones, scepters or crowns, in deference to democratic tradition.

He stood as he took the oath in a firm voice.

"I swear to observe the constitution and the laws of the people of Belgium and to maintain the national independence and territorial integrity."

Leopold repeated the oath in both French and Flemish and spoke to his subjects in both languages, Flemish being the native tongue of millions of his subjects.

Shout Defiance.

The trio, in lounge suits, were permitted to attend the rites as members of Parliament. Two remained seated when the throng arose and attempted to cause disorder by yelling and shouting defiance.

Their outcries, however, were drowned as a great cheer broke from those in the chamber, and guns again began their booming in the 101-gun salute that is royalty's due. Immediately after taking the oath, Leopold delivered his first brief address. He referred to the great blow sustained in his father's sudden death, and promised to follow the example set by his predecessors.

"The Belgian dynasty is at the service of the nation," the King said. "The King always will be devoted to the interests of the Belgian people."

The populace outside was appraised of the King's oath by trumpeters on the steps of Parliament. Then Leopold emerged and the roars of the throng echoed through the square.

All Markets Periled, House Group Warned

Constitutionality of Plan to Control Trading Challenged.

Stock Exchange president to put in the record a specific statement on stock market abuses that have been corrected to date.

"In the zeal of witnesses for making a case against this bill, many statements have been made here that will not hold water and are obviously unwarranted," Representative Lea declared.

Mr. Thompson told the committee that unless the pending legislation is modified in material respects, stock markets will find themselves "so hampered and thwarted in their proper and legiaimate functions that it will be impossible for them to retain their vitally important position in the industrial and economic scheme."

Sees Markets Periled.

"There is much proposed in these measures which spells disaster not alone to stock exchanges as separate business establishments, but to tock exchanges in an institutional sense," he said.

"It hardly needs to be said here that business in this country can not survive without market places for capital stock, and by market places I mean of course stock exchanges."

Mr. Gradison told the committee there must be local markets "to raise capital for the industries in their localities through the sale of securities."

"This bill may eliminate from existence most of these exchanges, and can conceivably put out of business almost 90 per cent of its members," he said.

Requirement that brokers may not borrow money from other than Federal Reserve members "may force borrowers to seek accomodations in the large financial centers, thereby centralizing monetary control," he added.

Conference Urged.

Mr. Shaugnessy, who declared proposed regulation "would seriously affect private business and industry and eventually would dry up the San Francisco Stock Exchange," asked the committee to call a conference of the exchanges in Washington to devise "intelligent regulation."

Mr. Paul complained "the vast majority of us are about to be penalized for the acts of a minority."

Claim that the proposed act would "put the odd-lot dealer system completely out of business," was made by Arthur F. Hetherington, of De Coppet & Doremus, New York's third largest dealers in odd-lot securities of less than 100 shares.

"The magnitude of the business precludes the possibility that any other system could effectively, or economically, provide a constant market for odd-lots of stock," he said.

150 Are Arrested In Gambling Raid

"hideaway," leaped 14 feet, and made his getaway.

The raid was the result of information furnished by an "outside" man to the vice squad. The places have been under observation about 15 days, during which police have observed hundreds of patrons going and coming, they said.

One of the victims of the raid was a candy vendor, who, when police came, had been selling sweets to patrons. He was held, but his business more than doubled as prisoners, waiting for their turn in the patrol wagons, became hungry and bought his wares.

One patrol after another drew up in front of the two establishments as the prisoners were taken away. They included office workers, taxi drivers and laborers. One Chinese was escorted to the patrol wagon.

Lieut. Little said last night all the men arrested would be held as witnesses, under $100 bond each. He will question them in an effort to determine the operators of the two establishments.

Shafts to Valor Of Doughboys Dot Wide Front

Chain of Monuments Runs From British Isles to Gilbraltar.

Paris (U.P.).—A gleaming chain of monuments and chapels, which will perpetuate the deeds of America's wartime forces in Europe, is nearing completion along a front ranging from Gibraltar to the British Isles.

On the shell-scarred battlefields of France and Belgium, last touches are being put to impressive memorials in honor of America's fighting men. In eight cemeteries in France, Belgium and England, where sleep America's soldier dead, stately memorial chapels have been virtually completed.

Over ten years ago, Congress created the American Battle Monuments Commission to plan and execute the memorials to the Nation's fighting forces.

Now, after a decade of hard work, 21 memorials bear tribute to the commission's efforts. They comprise 11 monuments, eight chapels and two bronze plaques. Built as the Romans built, they will last forever, the goal of American pilgrims in years to come.

Built by Americans.

Experts who have examined the monuments and chapels pronounce them perfect in design and workmanship. From the start, the commission insisted that all work should be up to American standards and stayed with this policy despite much opposition from French architects, contractors and workmen unacquainted with American methods.

Constant inspection by the European office of the commission headed by Major Xenophon H. Price, has ensured a quality of workmanship which the commission feels certain will stand the test of time as well as the criticism of contemporaries.

Of the 11 monuments, the largest is at Montfaucon. It commemorates the Meuse-Argonne offensive in which 1,000,000 American troops took part, the largest American operation of the war.

Rises 175 Feet.

It is a 175 foot Doric column in Italian rose granite, surmounting a majestic granite stairway. At the top of the column is an observation platform surveying the entire Meuse-Argonne battlefield. Over the platform is a statue of Liberty.

The terrain around the monument has been little changed since the American troops took it in September, 1918. Nearby are the ruins of houses, German dugouts and machine-gun nests.

Formidable engineering difficulties had to be overcome before the column could be erected. The Germans had thoroughly honey-combed Montfaucon and an ordinary reinforced foundation would not have withstood the weight of the monument. To meet this difficulty, tons of liquid concrete were pumped into the ground under pressure. This ensured a solid foundation.

St. Mihiel Shaft Built.

The next two largest monuments are erected at Montsec, to commemorate the capture of the St. Mihiel salient, in which 550,000 Americans participated; and at Chateau Thierry, to mark the activities of 300,000 doughboys under French command.

Others have been built at Commepy, in the Champagne region, where 90,000 Americans fought under French command; Bellecourt in the same region, where 90,000 fought under British leaders; Vierstraat, south of Ypres, to mark the activities of an additional 44,000 under the British, and Audenarde, Belgium, to commemorate the deeds of 55,000 under King Albert of Belgium.

Memorials to the Navy have been completed at Brest and Gibraltar. A fountain at Tours honors the "S. O. S."—Service of Supplies. Over 650,000 Americans were in this branch of the service.

Harvard Group For Roosevelt Finance Policy

Six Economists in Letter Indorse Abandonment of Gold Standard.

Unstinted praise for President Roosevelt's recovery program, particularly his monetary policy, came yesterday in a letter from six instructors of economics at Harvard University, made public at the White House.

"In view of the amount of adverse criticism that has been directed against the policies of your Administration by professional economists," said the letter, "we feel it incumbent upon us to express to you our sincere admiration of your general objectives and the statesmanship with which you have sought to attain those objectives."

The communication, which was signed by J. Raymond Walsh, Lauchlin Currie, John B. Crane, John M. Cassels, Robert Keen Lamb and Alan R. Sweezey, continued:

"While our support extends broadly to all the major efforts of your Administration, we wish to single out for special commendation that which has received more criticism perhaps than any other at the hands of our professional colleagues—namely, your monetary policy."

Praise Gold Move.

Deliberate departure from the gold standard, the economists declared, was indispensable in that it opened the way for adoption of other recovery reforms. Otherwise, it was said, every proposal would have been opposed on the grounds it engendered the gold standard.

"This attempt to foresee and avoid unfortunate developments," the writers averred, "has characterized the successive steps of your monetary policy to date. It marked the masterly way in which you secured discretionary monetary powers from Congress, and avoided the danger of mandatory legislation.

"It also characterized your refusal to link the dollar in a fixed ratio to other currencies at the World Economic Conference. If we in this country are to work out our own domestic program, it is essential that our hands not be tied by the necessity of maintaining any given exchange ratio."

Aid to Price Rise.

Both the gold and silver purchase steps in the monetary program were lauded—the former as proof of the President's determination to raise prices, the latter for stilling "excessive demands of the silver producers." The writers, however, confessed they did not believe there is any exact relationship between the price of gold and commodity prices.

"We applaud your determination to vary the gold content in the dollar, if occasion arises," the letter went on, "although we hope you will not feel it necessary to confine yourself within too narrow limits. • • • However, we are certain that if in the future it should be necessary to lower the gold content of the dollar below 50 cents or to raise it above 60 cents • • • you will have no hesitation in asking Congress for that power."

New Foreign Trade Policies Due Next Week

Wallace, Peek, O'Brien to Discuss Measures With President.

By Kendall Foss.

Long-deferred action to align this country's foreign trade policy with the principles of National planning will be taken early next week when the interdepartmental committee on commercial policy meets with President Roosevelt to outline necessary legislation.

The plan which the committee will submit is understood to follow closely the views of Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace. It is primarily a laying down of policy; the mechanics are embodied in the Peek plan which will presumably also receive full attention.

George N. Peek, still trying to make up his mind whether to accept the presidency of the new export-import bank, will probably be present, it was said at the White House yesterday. He has delayed acceptance until he could discover the fate of his comprehensive plan.

Robert Lincoln O'Brien, chairman of the Tariff Commission, is also expected to sit in on the discussions, for it is assumed adoption of the committee's policy will require tariff modifications.

Wallace Favors Middle Course.

Secretary Wallace advocates a "planned middle course" between outright economic nationalism and a policy of broad internationalism and free trade. Since nationalism, according to his figures, would mean withdrawing 50 to 100 million acres of good land from cultivation while full internationalism would require far-reaching industrial reorganizations not readily acceptable to the community, Wallace has sought a middle ground. He would require the withdrawal of only 25,000,000 acres and a simultaneous reduction in tariffs to permit the importation of an additional half a billion dollars' worth of goods per year above 1929 figures.

This is believed to be the sum and substance of the Committee on Commercial Policy's recommendations. If this report is stamped with Administration approval the next step will be the working out of methods. The Peek plan contains a comprehensive scheme designed to make realization of the new policy possible.

Proposed Set-up Detailed.

Peek would utilize the Commercial Policy Committee in an expanded form as an advisory board. He would establish a statistical and research department to survey and coordinate the trade field and place it under the advisory board. Parallel to the board, but under the President, he would have a foreign trade adviser and staff. He would also request the State Department to advise independently on reciprocity treaties. Then there would be a director of trade to supervise arrangements with the six major trade areas of the world. These are Europe, Russia, the United Kingdom, the Far East, Latin America and Canada. A director of credits would supervise relations with the RFC and the Federal Reserve and other banks involved in foreign trade. A director of reports would make recommendations for tariff changes and the use of quotas or embargoes where necessary. Finally, there would be a foreign trade corporation to handle certain exports and imports supplementary to private operations.

The Export-Import Bank, set up to promote trade with Russia, but capable of extending its activities to other fields, more or less parallels Peek's proposed foreign trade corporation. It goes at the problem of stimulating trade from a financial rather than a commodity point of view, but it possesses the same ability to exercise a restraining or stimulating effect upon trade whenever unbalance threatens to become serious.

Message Awaited on Tariff.

It is generally believed Peek has hesitated to accept the direction of this bank until knowing whether some or all of these other features of his for rationalizing foreign trade were to be adopted. Next week will probably decide the answer.

While no legislation is required to set up the Peek plan, Congress would have to authorize a new and more elastic method of changing tariffs than that now in force. At present the President can vary tariffs only when a cost of production study carried out by the Tariff Commission shows an injustice. This is considered too cumbersome to permit smooth functioning of planned economy.

President Roosevelt indicated yesterday his anticipated message to Congress on the tariff might follow soon after the meeting to launch the new policy in foreign trade.

Daily Talk About Books and Authors.

A Book on Bashfulness.

In the year 1887, with no preliminary fanfare of advertising, there appeared in Germany a novel by a young and unknown writer, whose name was Hermann Sudermann. Two years later he was to electrify the world with an original play. His novel bore the name "Frau Sorge," translated into English as "Dame Care." Its success was not sensational but rather of the kind that seems to assure permanence. Today "Dame Care" holds an unassailable position as one of the classics in the German language.

The author came from East Prussia, which has one of the worst climates in the world. The clouds return after the rain. He was brought up in the direst poverty, and at school felt constant mortification. The climate and his own circumstances may have had something to do with the title chosen for his novel, and for the rather poetic melancholy characteristic of its climate; for novels have climates as well as countries.

The boy hero suffers from bashfulness, as millions of both boys and girls have suffered. It is rather curious that this very common mental disease of youth should receive so little consideration, so little sympathy and understanding. Those who are tortured by it often are treated with coarse brutality by parents, uncles, and older persons, who would show more kindness if the patient had only a cold in the nose.

If we saw a man kick a cripple, we should regard him as inhuman. But often boys and girls receive abominable abrasions where they are most sensitive. The art of bringing up children is one of the greatest of all arts; and yet there are those who treat their automobile more carefully than they treat the infinitely more complex and delicate mechanism of the adolescent mind. An immense amount of acute suffering is caused by bashfulness; and "Dame Care" is the only novel I can remember where bashfulness is really the main theme.

Nicotineless Tobacco Seeds to Be Planted

Murray, Ky. (U.P.).—A tiny pinch of tobacco seed, said to be free of nicotine and the only specimen of its kind in the country, is being prepared for planting here by Prof. J. S. Pullen, head of Murray State Teachers College agricultural department.

The small seeds, barely sufficient to cover the bottom of a teaspoon, were obtained by Prof. Pullen from Germany. They will be planted with extreme care and sprouted in an incubator. Prof. Pullen said he understood the tobacco had an excellent flavor and was as "harmless as water."

"North of 53" Gets Airplane Mail Service

Edmonton, Alta. (U.P.).—Those who live north of "53" no longer have to wait six months for their mail and news of the outside world.

Recently, the Canadian government established air-mail service to Coppermine, one of the northernmost settlements in the Dominion. The inaugural flights took in 600 pounds of mail, 8,200 first-flight covers, and belated Christmas gifts.

At the Central Presbyterian Church tomorrow morning, Dr. James H. Taylor, the pastor, will preach on "The Principles of the Kingdom." This topic will be a further exposition of the Sermon on the Mount.

The Christian Endeavor Society will have as its guests Mr. Fred V. Poag and Mrs. Wilds DuBose, of Union Theological Seminary of Richmond. Mr. Poag, who was associated with the work of the Central Presbyterian Church last summer, has been awarded the Hoge Scholarship at Union Theological Seminary and will take up postgraduate work there next September, after his graduation in May.

Chancellor Hill, of L. M. U., At McKendree Methodist.

At McKendree Methodist Episcopal Church tomorrow, Dr. John Wesley Hill, Chancellor of Lincoln Memorial University, will preach at the morning service on "Abraham Lincoln, the Christian." At the evening service, the pastor, the Rev. William Pierpont, will speak on "The Revealed Love of God." Passion Week services will be held each evening during the week.

State Flags to Be Given At Cathedral Service.

At the annual observance of "Washington Cathedral Sunday" at Mount St. Alban, tht official flags of six States will be presented to the Cathedral at the evensong service at 4 p. m. tomorrow. It is the custom for many parishes in the District of Columbia and throughout the Episcopal Church to remember the building and maintenance of the Cathedral in prayers offered at the altar on the Sunday nearest George Washington's birthday. The sermon will be by Bishop James E. Freeman.

The flags were donated as follows: Georgia—given by Robert C. Alston, of Atlanta, in memory of his uncle, Robert A. Alston; Massachusetts—given by Mrs. C. C. Williams, of Washington, in memory of her parents, the late Senator Henry Cabot Lodge and Mrs. Lodge; Rhode Island—given by Mr. and Mrs. Arthur B. Lisle, of Providence, in memory of their children, Whiting and Hope Lisle; West Virginia—given by Mrs. Guy D. Goff, in memory of her husband, the late Senator Goff; Wyoming—the gift arranged by Mrs. Frank C. Mondell, in honor of the Rev. John Roberts, D. D., pioneer missionary of the Episcopal Church in that State; Oregon—given by the Portland Chamber of Commerce.

Canon Anson Phelps Stokes will preach at 11 a. m.

A delegation of young women attending the regional conference of the Young Women's Christian Association will be present at the 11 a. m. service and will make a brief pilgrimage through the Cathedral.

Under the Cathedral's Lenten program the following will speak immediately following evensong in the Chapel of St. Mary at 4 p. m. next week: Tuesday, the Right Rev. Warren L. Rogers, D. D., Bishop of Ohio; Wednesday, Canon Stokes; Thursday, the Rev. F. J. Bohanan, D. D., rector of Rock Creek Parish.

Revival at Tabernacle Will Close Tomorrow.

The evangelistic campaign and Christian healing mission which has been conducted the past month at the Full Gospel Tabernacle, North Capitol and K streets, will close tomorrow, when the Rev. Harvey McAlister, the evangelist, will preach at 11 a. m. on "Salvation, Rapture and Rewards," and at 7:30 p. m. on "Five Hundred Years From Now" or "When Christ Reigns." New members will be received into the church at the morning service. The church will resume its normal schedule during the week in charge of the Rev. Harry L. Collier, pastor. A Bible study course is scheduled at 7:45 p. m. Thursday.

Revival Will Continue At Second Baptist.

Revival services will be continued at Second Baptist Church, Third street, between H and I streets northwest, until next Saturday. The Rev. George J. Garnett, of Baltimore, will preach tomorrow evening and will also preach at the week-night services.

Tomorrow morning the pastor, the Rev. J. L. S. Holloman, will preach on "Living By Faith."

Second of Lenten Sermons At Universalist Church.

"Jesus and Nicodemus: or the Man Who Meant Well Timidly," is the topic of a sermon the Rev. Frederic W. Perkins will preach tomorrow morning at the Universallist National Memorial Church. This is the second in a series of sermons called "Jesus and Some People He Met."

Miss Miriam Uppercue will talk on "The Life of St. Francis of Assisi" at the church school worship service.

The third of the Lenten organ recitals will be given from 5 to 5:45 p. m., Wednesday. Dr. Albert W. Harned, organist of the church, has scheduled a series of recitals by guest organists on alternating Wednesdays. This week Dr. Harned will present the program.

Dr. Perkins will speak at the mid-winter round table meeting of the religious education workers of the Congregational churches of Washington at the First Congregational Church, Wednesday.

Christian Science Topic For Tomorrow Is "Mind."

"Mind" is the subject of the lesson-sermon in all the Churches of Christ, Scientist, tomorrow. The golden text is from I Peter 3:8: "Be ye all of one mind, having compassion one of another, love as brethren, be pitiful, be courteous." The lesson-sermon also includes a passage from the Christian Science Text Book, "Science and Health With Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy (page 275).

"Inherited Christianity" Topic of Dr. Stockdale.

Dr. Allen A Stockdale, pastor of the First Congregational Church, will preach at the morning service tomorrow on "Inherited Christianity," and at the evening service on "Foxes and Firebrands."

The Fourth Annual Founders' Day of the Congregational Home, 1290 Crittenden street northwest, will be celebrated at the home at 4 p. m. tomorrow. Mr. Hugh Thrift will extend a welcome, and Mrs. William Knowles Cooper will preside. Mrs. Harvey Wiley will make an address. Others on the program are Mrs. Russell Clinchy, Mrs. Lewis Bartlett, Mrs. Walter Hook and Mrs. Allen A. Stockdale. The Rev. As a part of their study of the Bible and how it came to be, the junior department is visiting the Eighth Street Synagogue, when they will be shown the Sacred Scroll. Mrs. Charlotte M. Heilman will speak in the Adult Forum at 10 a. m. on "The Permanent Value of American Red Cross Service in Foreign Lands."

Germans to Observe Memorial Day Here.

For some years it has been the custom in Germany to observe the second Sunday in Lent as Memorial Day for the soldiers who fell in the World War. In order to permit the German Embassy and Germans living in Washington to share in the observance, a memorial service will be held in Concordia Lutheran Evangelical Church, Twentieth and G streets northwest, tomorrow at 10 a. m. The German Embassy will provide special floral decorations and members of the staff of the German Embassy will attend. The Rev. Charles Enders, pastor, will preach on "Heroic Virtues." The Davison Glee Club will sing appropriate songs and there will be solos.

Swami Vividishananda Speaks on Reincarnation.

Swami Vividishananda, leader of the Vedanta Society, located at 1712 N street northwest, will speak at 8 p. m. tomorrow on "Reincarnation—Its Proofs." At 8 p. m. each Tuesday he teaches the Upanishads, the most ancient texts on Eastern philosophy, and on Thursdays at 8 p. m., he gives lessons on Karma Yoga, the path of detached activity.

Rev. Alexander Zabriskie Preacher at Rock Creek.

The Rev. Alexander Zabriskie, of the Virginia Theological Seminary, will be the guest preacher at the 11 a. m. service tomorrow in Rock Creek Episcopal Church. Other services tomorrow include celebration of Holy Communion at 8:30 a. m. and evening prayer at 8 o'clock, with instructional talk by the Rev. Claude S. Ridenour, assistant to the recotor.

Dr. Franklin J. Bohanan, the rector, will deliver the second in a series of Lenten services at evening prayer service Wednesday. On Thursday there will be celebration of Holy Communion at 10:30 a. m. and a children's Lenten service at 3:30 p. m., directed by the Rev. Mr. Ridenour. Dr. Bohanan will preach at the 4 p. m. evening prayer service in Washington Cathedral Thursday.

"Missionary Urge" Topic At Mount Vernon Place.

Tomorrow morning the pastor, Dr. Forney Hutchison, will preach at Mount Vernon Place Southern Methodist Church on "The Missionary Urge," and in the evening, "The Christian Race." Mrs. Lily Garrett will be guest soloist. Mr. Tabbutt will sing in the evening. The offering for the Kingdom extension campaign will be given next Sunday.

Dr. Oscar F. Blackwelder, pastor of the Church of the Reformation, will continue his series of Lenten sermons tomorrow at 11 a. m., when he will preach on the theme, "What Can Prayer Do?" Services are held in the Avenue Grand Theater.

National Christian Plans Lord's Supper Ceremony.

At the National City Christian Church, Dr. Raphael H. Miller will preach tomorrow morning on "The Unchanging Program of Jesus." In the evening he will give the fourth of a series of sermons on "New Homes for Old." Mrs. Helen Turley, contralto, will sing at the morning service, and will be heard at the evening service in a duet with Mr. W. E. Braithwaite, tenor.

The pre-Easter program of the church will include a celebration of the Lord's Supper on Thursday night preceding Easter. The choir and soloists, directed by W. E. Braithwaite, will offer the sacred cantata, "The Seven Last Words," by DeBois, on the evening of Good Friday.

Dr. Wilson to Commence New Testament Series.

The Rev. A. P. Wilson, minister of Columbia Heights Christian Church, will speak tomorrow morning on "Names for the Communion." At the 7:30 p. m. service the minister will start a series of sermons on "Pictures of Jesus in the New Testament;" the first sermon being "The First Preacher's Picture of Jesus."

The annual dinner of the Philathean Class will be held Wednesday at 5 p. m.

Rev. A. R. Byrd to Conclude Sermon Series Tomorrow.

At the Church of the Pilgrims the Rev. Andrew R. Byrd will preach tomorrow at 11 a. m. on "A Practical Adventure for Spiritual Recovery." At 7:45 p. m., the minister will complete the February series of evening sermons on "God's Guidance for the Homes of Today," the concluding sermon being "The Part of the Church and the Modern Home."

Parents' Day will be observed at the vesper service of the young people.

Russian Music Program At All Souls' Tomorrow.

At the 11 a. m. service at All Souls' Church (Unitarian) tomorrow the minister, Ulysses G. B. Pierce, will preach on "Whither the Head Looketh." Lewis Atwater, organist, will present a program of Russian music at 5 p. m., assisted by George Myers, tenor. A series of posters on "Our Faith," prepared by Laurence C. Staples, will be shown at the book chat hour at 5:30 p. m. Supper will be served from 6 to 7 p. m. by a committee of the Business and Professional Women's Club.

Temple Baptist Revival Recalls Church History.

Ninety-one years ago, in 1843, the Third Baptist Church of Washington, later the E Street Baptist Church, and now the Temple Baptist Church, was in the midst of a revival which lasted for three months. The minutes of the church of that period record the reception and baptism of numbers of Negroes.

The Temple Baptist Church, Tenth and N streets northwest, is now in the third week of a similar revival, for which the slogan is "The Gospel Can Save America."

St. Andrews Episcopal Plans Extra Services.

At the 11 a. m. service at St. Andrew's Episcopal Church tomorrow, the rector, the Rev. A. J. Wilder, will preach on "Dying But Behold We Live," and he will address the Children's Service at 9:30 a. m. on "How God Wants Us to Grow."

The usual Sunday and week-day services will be held, and there will be two additional ones, the Wednesday Lenten service at 8 p. m. when the Rev. Charles T. Warner will preach, and a Litany service Friday at 4:30 p. m.

Chevy Chase Baptist To Hear Editor.

At Chevy Chase Baptist Church tomorrow, the pastor, the Rev. Edward O. Clark, will preach at the morning service, and at the 8 p. m. service the Rev. Frank L. Griffin will preach.

A union Lenten service will be held at the church Thursday at 8 p. m., the sermon being preached by Dr. Charles P. Wiles, of Philadelphia, editor of Lutheran Sunday School Literature.

Really Great Leaders Still Rare

From Time When Christ Chose His Twelve Apostles Unto Present Day, Each Crisis Has Had Too Few Champions of True Ability.

By William T. Ellis

Shortly before he died, Mr. Cyrus Curtis and I were talking about the dearth of great newspaper editors. "There is only about one born in a generation," he said. His pessimistic conclusion set me to considering this, and other fields; and it seems true, as Jesus declared, "the laborers are few." Not only great editors, but great writers are rare. Month after month we thumb the pages of the big magazines, unrewarded by a single glimpse of outstanding authorship. So it is with overvaunted contemporary books. Of "smart" mediocrities we have plenty; but when we want really great literature we have to turn to the old books.

Equally true is this condition in the realm of public speaking. A blight seems to have fallen upon the art of oratory. Glib talkers were never so numerous, but one does not need the fingers of a single hand to count up the day's really great orators, in the pulpit, in politics, at the bar, in education.

Rather a dreary picture, isn't it? It spells opportunity, though, for those who are brave enough to dare to excel. All the devastating experience of the past four years, which has swept away myriads of the unfit from high places, really constitutes an open door for newcomers with potential bigness.

Naturally, one's thought turns to the experience of Jesus, when He was lamenting that "the laborers are few." What did He do about it? How did He go about meeting the need—for He was never one to acquiesce complacently in untoward conditions.

Finding the Fit.

When He could not find the fit, Jesus fitted those whom He found. He took His twelve closest disciples, all ordinary men, and commissioned them as apostles. He gave them a task greater than their powers; but one which brought their powers up to the level of their task. It is not more intrinsically great men that we need, but more men under the compulsion of a great purpose, a great motive, a great devotion. When you hear a man agonizing, "Give me Scotland or I die," then you find a John Knox.

Here we confront a present problem of utmost seriousness. Things went to smash with the world recently because little men with little aims were at the helm. Small and sordid selfishness occupied the high places in business and public life. If new conditions and the drastic lesson that has been taught us put a new, high and holy motive into the hearts of our leaders, all will be well with us. But if then dire disaster, worse compounded, awaits us.

"Little folk of little soul Rise up to buy and sell again"

Now the Jesus method opens up a vista of promise for ordinary folk. He showed that there are potentialities in the common man beyond all tradition or expectation. His chosen 12 were just plain, run-of-the-mine personalities. The limit of the capacity and expectation of most of them was the daily task of market fishermen. All were Galileans, except Judas, the one from orthodox Judea that turned out badly. Out of this common stock, fired with new purposes and powers, Jesus made the builders of His Church, 12 immortals whose names will never be wiped from history's most shining page.

Putting in the Plus.

Every one of us is potentially greater than either we or our friends think us to be. The psychologists have never fully explored the capacity of the common man.

"So nigh is grandeur to our dust,
So near is God to man,
When Duty whispers low, 'Thou must!'
The Youth replies, 'I can!' "

Into the breasts of these average Galileans—men with an inclination toward higher things, it is true, else they would never have become disciples of the new Teacher—Jesus put a great plus, a compound plus. It was, first of all, loyalty to Him; next it was a noble response to a manifest human need; and, third, it was an impartation of Christ's own empowering Spirit—three gifts available today to every Christian. Something of His own overpowering sense of a task to be done, and of an hour of opportunity, were shared by Jesus with this little group of friends, great men in the making.

The International Sunday School lesson for February 25 is: "The Twelve Sent Forth."—Matt. 9:35, 11:1.

Getting the Master Motive.

Before we look further at this wonderful group of Twelve, we need to note the motive that inspired their commission. Jesus had been itinerating Galilee, teaching and healing in cities and villages and fields, and He had come close to the common people, with all their varied needs. Again and again we have to remind ourselves that Jesus was no cloistered slave of the lamb, no secluded dreamer, but a Man among men, accustomed to the give-and-take of the hurly-burly of life. I sometimes think that the crude circuit-riding preachers of an early day, with their rough ways, were nearer to the Jesus ideal of preacher than the elaborately taught, delicately-reared city preachers of our time. The modern pulpit is too remote from the proletariat. There are countless fashionable pastors today who are not on friendly talking terms with a single workingman. They would be embarrassed were any of the rough comrades of Christ to enter their beautiful churches.

Out of His close experience with crowds came the motive that led Jesus to commission the Twelve, thus first organizing the Kingdom propaganda which today functions all around the earth. Matthew puts it in a few effective words with which our lesson opens: "When He saw the multitudes. He was moved with compassion for them, because they were distressed and scattered, as sheep not having a shepherd." It was the shepherd instinct of the Good Shepherd that prompted Him to appoint undershepherds.

Nobody is ever going to do much for his world who has not this Christly compassion for the crowd. It is the hall-mark of all the great. Zeal to serve the masses of mankind is the root of noble ambition. Lesser aims, such as for money, fame, position, are inadequate for true greatness. Now, as in the day when Jesus talked with his friends on the quiet rounds of Galilee, this sense of compassion and of compulsion to serve is the first requisite for membership in that company of which He is the chief.

The Cabinet of Christ.

It was rather a motley group that Jesus constituted into His cabinet. They ranged from His fishermen cousins, James and John—John probably the youngest of the group—to Matthew, the public official, and Nathaniel the dignified churchman. There were the overvoluble, unstable Peter and his quiet, personal-worker brother, Andrew. There was slow-thinking, fact-finding Thomas, the twin—without his twin brother. What of the latter? Did he live and die an unregarded fisherman, too "practical" to chase after a new religious Teacher?

Some of the Twelve were known simply as sons of their fathers. One of them, Simon Zealotes, was a revolutionist. Philip, with the Greek name, was of the modest, helpful type. Judas—whose name is never mentioned in the Bible without a shameful tag—represents the man whose worst self masters him, despite the best opportunities.

To this heterogeneous company Jesus intrusted his work, after training them by His presence and His teaching. They were to be the chief tellers of the Story. They became great, with a greatness that has changed the face of the world. The half billion Christians alive today are fruits of their faithfulness.

FAULTY DEFENSE.

At the Grand National Team-of-Four Championship event of the United States Bridge Association, held in New York last month, it was demonstrated that even players expert enough to participate in this, the first thoroughly national bridge tournament ever held, can make errors just as those who sit down at the bridge table in their own homes frequently do. Perhaps one of the differences between the expert and the average player is that the expert recognizes his errors, while the average player remains in blissful ignorance of all but the most glaring ones.

The hand below was played in one of the early rounds of the Team-of-Four event, and it was characterized, first, by the failure of North and South to reach their best contract, and later by the utter failure of the West player to find the sure method of defeating the contract which was undertaken. It will be noticed that North and South can make five clubs against any defense. It will also be noticed if one makes a careful study of the cards that at the alternative contract of spades not even two can be made with perfect defense.

South, Dealer.

The bidding: (Figures after bids refer to numbered explanatory paragraphs.)

South	West	North	East
1♣(1)	1♡(2)	2♣(3)	Pass
2♠(4)	Pass	Pass(5)	Pass

1—With South's three-suited hand, it is, of course, natural to desire to show them all if possible.
2—West, of course, has a sound overcall.
3—Possibly at the root of the failure to reach the correct contract. North's hand, with the evenly balanced distribution, does not contain sufficient values for a free raise.
4—Of course, a perfectly natural bid.
5—After the hand was played, North, one of the country's ranking players, explained that he did not take further action because he had done something he should not have done when he gave a free raise to his partner on the first round of bidding. He feared that any further bidding by him might bring disaster to the partnership. When the bidding ended so abruptly, West had a feeling that he and his partner had probably failed to bid enough. However, it was too late to do anything about that, and an opening lead of the Ace of diamonds was made.

When the Dummy was spread on the table, it was, of course, apparent to West that East held a singleton club, as the Declarer, on the bidding, was marked with a five-card club suit. Thus it seemed to West that if he could put his partner twice in the lead by enabling him to ruff clubs, and his partner would return diamonds, the contract might be defeated. In his mind, however, there lurked the fear that East might not read the diamond Ace as a singleton, and might attempt to put him in the lead by returning a heart. West decided that East could not have more than three hearts with a singleton club, as otherwise at least one raise would have been given. Therefore, his second play was to lay down the heart Ace. This was ruffed by South, who thereupon took all the remaining tricks but the Ace of clubs.

The reader will notice that had West at his second turn to lead laid down the club Ace and continued the clubs, he would have been able to ruff two diamonds, and his partner could have ruffed two clubs. Thus, with this line of play, East and West would have defeated the two-spade contract one trick. On the whole, I think West erred in not playing the clubs at once, and in not trusting to his partner's good judgment to choose the correct return.

An ace's views on air mail

Capt. Eddie Rickenbacker, World War ace and aviation authority, believes commercial airlines are now and always will be better equipped to handle the mails safely than any other agency. In a special and exclusive article, Capt. Rickenbacker, who this week established a coast-to-coast mail record, gives his full view of the air mail situation in the Special Articles Section of this week's Society Set Here Greets Miss Robert

Round of Entertainments Fete Daughter of Treasury Aid.

Mr. Robert to Be Host Tonight at Large Reception.

By Evelyn Peyton Gordon.

Miss Louisa Robert, daughter of the Assistant Secretary of the Treasury and Mrs. Lawrence W. Robert, jr., who was announced early in the season as a prospective debutante of this season, but who has remained in Atlanta for most of the winter, arrived in Washington yesterday just in time to take part in the week-end festivities.

The outstanding party of the week-end will be the dance to be given this evening by Mr. Robert at Mrs. Curtis' Club on F street, when his young daughter will assist him in receiving 250 guests.

Pretty Miss Robert will make her formal bow to society in the Capital next winter, and will also be presented at her home in Atlanta, but this evening she will meet many interesting and charming friends of her popular father, who is known to his intimate circle as "Chip."

Feted By Mrs. Rumsey.

Mrs. Charles Carey Rumsey will entertain at a large dinner party this evening at her home in Georgetown for Miss Robert, preceding the dance, when the guests will be a group of young people.

At the same time Mrs. James F. Curtis will entertain an older group at dinner at the club, which Mr. Robert will attend.

Mrs. William D. Thomas, the former Miss Helen Marye, daughter of the late one-time Ambassador to Russia, and Mrs. George T. Marye, will entertain a small group at dinner this evening at Greystone, and later the guests will attend the dance.

Mrs. Curtis Entertains.

Last evening Mrs. James F. Curtis entertained at a large dinner in her home for Miss Robert, for a group of the younger society set.

Miss Robert, who is slight and brown-haired, is a splendid sportswoman, enjoying numerous activities. She excels as a swimmer, having won several competitions. She will remain with her father for a few days in his apartment at the Mayflower before rejoining her mother at their home in Atlanta.

Guests at Congressional Club Hear Artist of Metropolitan.

Miss Doris Doe, of the Metropolitan Opera Company, sang yesterday at the weekly entertainment and tea at the Congressional Club. Mr. Kurt Ruhrseitz was the accompanist.

Mme. Pelenyi, wife of the newly appointed Minister of Hungary, with her sister, Mrs. McBride, and her nieces, the Misses Mather, of Cleveland, and Mrs. Benjamin D. Foulois and the wives of several other Army Air Corps officers were among the guests.

Miss Doe, well known in oratorio, achieved success in Europe in both concert and opera, and has made an enviable place for herself in her own land, the United States. Her Town Hall concert in New York in December won warm praise from the critics, and her recent concert in Palm Beach repeated her New York success. She is a finished concert artist with an unusually interesting repertoire.

During the tea hour which followed the concert, Mrs. William H. Dietrich, of Illinois; Mrs. Cassius Dowell, of Iowa; Mrs. William J. Driver, of Arkansas, and Mrs. Drain, of Florida, were at the tea tables, assisted by Mrs. Richard M. Duncan, of Missouri; Mrs. Burgan, of Indiana; Mrs. Elliott, of Indiana; Mrs. Edward C. Eicher, of Iowa, and Mrs. Rene L. De Rouen, of Louisiana.

Senator Lewis Due Here Tomorrow

Will End Chicago Visit; Mrs. Lewis Hostess.

Senator James Hamilton Lewis, who is spending several days at his home in Chicago, is expected to return to Washington tomorrow.

Mrs. Lewis entertained Thursday at an at home at the Mayflower Hotel in honor of Chicago friends who hold positions in the new Administration. The 200 guests included the Speaker and Mrs. Henry T. Rainey, Mr. and Mrs. George Peek, Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Chatfield Taylor, Mr. and Mrs. M. S. Szymczek, Mr. and Mrs. Adlai Stvenson, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Granger, and Miss Valerie Harris, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hayden B. Harris, of Chicago, who is a student at the Mount Vernon Seminary.

The tea table was decorated in red, white and blue. Miss Grace Roper, daughter of the Secretary of Commerce and Mrs. Daniel C. Roper, and Miss Laura Harlan presided.

Admiral Willard formerly was commandant of the Navy Yard in Washington and he and Mrs. Willard have a host of friends who will welcome their return to the Capital.

Admiral Willard will retire on March 1, and they will make their home at 2101 Connecticut avenue, where they have taken an apartment.

Stolen Trunk Interrupts Trip at New Orleans; to Mexico Next.

The former Peruvian Minister to London and Senora de Gonzalez Prada, who spent several weeks in Palm Beach after a brief stay in Washington, are now in Laredo, Tex., en route to Mexico. From Mexico they will continue their motor trip to the West Coast and will return to Washington some time next month to join Senora de Prada's mother, Mrs. Emerson Howe, who is at present visiting Miss Elizabeth Howry at her home in Georgetown. Late in the spring they will return to their home in Paris.

Senor Prada and his wife were delayed in New Orleans, when a trunk was stolen from their motor parked near the hotel. They were obliged to stay, after the trunk had been recovered, until the thief was tried.

The couple made their home here several years ago when Senor Prada was Counselor of the Peruvian Embassy.

Senora de Prada tells of an incident which occurred during a motor trip in Spain.

She and her husband were motoring without a chauffer, alternating with the driving, and in many of the small towns they passed through, the people in the narrow streets stopped in wonder at the sight of a woman driving a car. When the Pradas reached Barcelona, they took their car to a garage to leave it for an overhauling, and while there Senora de Prada stepped into one of the new cars on the floor to examine it.

"Yes," replied Senora de Prada, "I have for many years."

Proudly the salesman announced: "In Barcelona, we too are modern. We have two young ladies who drive their own cars!"

Friends in NRA Bid Colleague Farewell

Mr. W. Sheppard Nicholson Feted at Dinner.

The Carlton Hotel was the scene last evening of a farewell dinner in honor of Mr. W. Sheppard Nicholson, of Union, S. C., who has been in Washington since early fall as deputy administrator in the NRA.

The dinner was given by 18 of Mr. Nicholson's intimate friends.

Castle Contents Impart Beauty To Apartment

Mrs. McMillin Succeeds in Installing Fine Antiques in Limited Space.

Meeting a difficult situation has never deterred Mrs. Lucille Foster McMillin, member of the United States Civil Service Commission.

When Mrs. McMillin was sworn into office about a year ago, she was called upon to make a speech to the officials, employes and visitors assembled for the occasion. She arose, smiled at her audience and said frankly:

"I'm just dying to make a good impression."

She did.

Her next problem was to help the innumerable persons who came to her office day after day for counsel and help. When she could not dispense material aid, she gave sympathy.

"I can not solve their problems every time," she said, "but I can at least be gracious."

Compressing a Castle.

Mrs. McMillin's latest problem has been the fitting of the furniture of a castle into a hotel apartment. At first this seemed impossible. But now it has been largely accomplished. Only the more massive pieces of furniture from the McMillin home in South America have been taken to the old homeplace at Nashville. The other valuable and interesting antiques have been fitted into an orderly and artistic arrangement in Mrs. McMillin's apartment at 2400 Sixteenth street.

Here was the question Mrs. McMillin faced: How could seven tables, eight chairs, a sofa, cabinet, chaise lounge, clothes chest, hassock, bedroom suite and a carload of pillows, rugs, lamps, ornaments and accessories go into two rooms and a hall?

Mrs. McMillin was determined that it could be done in such a way that a sense of harmony and restfulness would greet the visitor at the door. She succeeded in her end.

The primary rule by which she worked was to preserve a sense of space.

"No matter how valuable or how beautiful an article might be," she said, "I would never use it if it seemed to overcrowd a room. Even in placing pictures and ornaments I keep in mind this effect of space."

Bird Gives Tropic Touch.

The antique furniture that Mrs McMillin brought to Washington was accumulated when with her husband, the late Benton McMillin, she was in South America. Mr. McMillin was Minister to Peru and Guatemala.

A piece that dominates the living room of Mrs. McMillin's apartment is a Spanish sofa upholstered in red satin with carved mahogony frame. Its graceful sweeping curves immediately catch the eye of the visitor. Near it is a low five-legged sewing chair upholstered in the same deep red brocade. The mate to this chair stands in the apartment hall. These furniture twins are 300 years old.

Virtually all of Mrs. McMillin's furniture came from the land of mahogany.

"They never stain mahogany in South America," she explained; "they carve it, and let age give it that rich, glowing finish."

A tropical touch is given the living room through an arrogant bird, the "quetzal," which is perched on a lamp whose bowl and base came from the workshop of an Indian pottery maker. The bird has graceful green tail feathers a yard long, a breast of burnt orange, and the defiant head of a jay.

Corner of Old Spain

Above a buhl cabinet hangs a copy of the Mona Lisa made by Alexander Gandarius, court painter of Spain.

"It took me two years to induce the artist to sell me that picture," said Mrs. McMillin.

Among the smaller pieces in the apartment is a metal vessel containing a smaller copper pot. This is the "Torre Tagle" used in weighing gold nuggets Indians bring into the courtyards of the palaces.

Mrs. McMillin has a banderilla—a villainous stick with a barb in one end—that was presented to her by Belmonte, world-famous matador. She also treasures particularly a set of clay figures resembling idols that are believed to represent the oldest type of pottery on the continent.

In the arrangement of her treasures Mrs. McMillin has succeeded in preserving order and spaciousness and also has achieved atmosphere. Her apartment suggests to visitors a corner of Old Spain.

250 Young Women To Hear of New Deal

Y.W.C.A. Sponsors Conclave of Professional Group.

More than 250 young business women from New Jersey, Maryland, Delaware, and Pennsylvania are gathering in Washington to hear the New Deal interpreted at the annual midwinter conference of the Business and Professional Women's Department of the Y. W. C. A. tonight.

Miss Elizabeth N. Haney, chairman of the department, has been adviser to the group which planned the conference.

In addition to the delegates from out of town, about 150 young business women of the District are planning to attend the conference.

Those who still interpret the New Deal and its implications for business women are June Sickel, Edith Rockwood and Genevieve Forbes Herrick. Their speeches will be delivered at a banquet at the Y. W. C. A. A brief discussion on findings of the conference will be held tomorrow morning.

V. M. I. Dances March 2-3.

Lexington, Va., Feb. 23 (Spl.).—Cadets of Virginia Military Institute will hold their midwinter dances on March 2 and 3. Bert Lown's orchestra will play.

Boy and Father Write Music Big Bands Play; Son Tells How Melodic Strains Come to Him

Shipleys Achieve Perfect Coordination of Effort to Produce Tunes.

"Listen to this, Dad." A dark-haired boy at the piano plays a phrase of a march tune.

"Um-m-." A man curled up on the sofa in a corner of the room hums the tune fragment to himself and sketches the number of notes on a piece of paper.

"I've got it!" The pencil races across the piece of paper. "All right, let's have the next one, Jack."

The boy at the piano plays another phrase. The man on the sofa hums and nods, and writes another line.

This is much the way Shipley and son who live at 2514 Twenty-second street northeast, write their marches, waltzes, and jazz foxtrots.

First the boy, John R. Shipley, finds the melody, then the father, W. L. Shipley, finds the words to fit.

The boy, John, explains how he gets his tunes.

"Sometimes I'm playing along on some piece, and when I get through I keep on playing. Then a tune will come, and if I like it I put it down. Sometimes I get an idea for a tune when I'm not playing, then I run to the first piano I can get hold of and pick it out.

Finds Piano Spares Lungs.

"I never studied composition really. I play the trumpet, and the piano—played a trumpet solo with the Playground Band the other day. But the piano isn't hard; it's easier on the lungs."

The father interrupted, "Yes, Jack's at the piano first thing in the morning and the last thing at night. I guess his composing is just a gift.

"I play the drums and the fiddle myself. I used to play drums with orchestras in Baltimore. John has an older brother who plays trombone. The trumpet and trombone business was just a swap. John has played the trombone, then John's brother, who is bigger than he is, took it up, so the big one gets the big instrument, the trombone, and John gets the smaller one, the trumpet."

John's latest composition, a march called "Emblem of Prosperity," has been played recently on the program of the Boys Elks Band at McKinley High School. Shipley, senior, tells of other appearances.

Played by Service Bands

"I took the manuscript to the Marine Band, and they played it on the radio. The bandmaster told me that it was a good march and should be in the repertoire of every band. Then I took it to the Army Band, and they played it in one of their concerts. The Navy Band has played it, and the Fire Department Band, too.

"Well, I decided that I'd get together all the letters John had received from all the bands, and I bunched them together with the manuscripts, piano and full score, and sent them all to the publishers. Now we're waiting to see what will happen."

John says of his pieces:

"I think I like to write marches best; I liked the marked rhythms. I like things with melody, too, and that's why I like band music better than symphony music. There seems to be more melody in it for me.

"I guess I've been composing about four years. The first piece I ever did was a waltz. I've done a lot of foxtrots and some sentimental songs—you know the kind. I'm working on a piece for Mother's Day now, words and music. I hope I'll get it done in time!" He laughed softly.

Fun Working Together.

"I'd like to make composing a profession if I can, but you have to get the breaks. If I get them, I'll be lucky.

"It's lots of fun when Dad and I can work together. Sometimes we disagree, but he points out my mistakes, and I his. I usually get the music first, then he finds the words, or I do. I'd rather do the music, and he'd rather do the words, so everything works out very well.

"It doesn't take me long to write something, once I get the idea. It took me about two hours to write the piano arrangement of Emblem of Prosperity. Then we had to make the band arrangement, so Dad and I just took off our coats, grabbed all the paper we could find—mother says there's always too much manuscript paper lying around—and worked and worked until all the parts were finished.

"It was a job, but it was fun. It's fun to write music anyway."

Elder Generation Rapped, for Change

Woman College Dean Says It's Handicapped Youth.

Cleveland, Feb. 23 (U.P.).—The tables, it apepars, have been turned on the oldsters.

The long popular adult practice of indicting the younger generation for the ills of the world now must be reversed, in opinion of two prominent women educators.

Dr. Susan Guild, of Washburn College, Topeka, cited by the National Association of Deans of Women for 25 years of service as a dean, expressed the opinion today that a vast army of unemployed youth faces the future sadly handicapped because their parents "gambled away their inheritance."

Enlarging upon a theme which she discussed before the annual deans' convention, Dr. Guild said she found the present generation of youngsters "very satisfactory."

"It is not the boys and girls of today, but their ambitious and money-seeking fathers atnd mothers who are responsible for the handicaps with which the youth of today faces the future.

Amateur Is Crowned Cherry Pie Champion

Chicago, Feb. 23 (U.P.).—The third cherry pie she ever baked won for Mary Lenore Spencer, of Iowa City, Iowa, today the title of National cherry pie champion.

The pie baked by Miss Spencer was submitted in a contest conducted by the National Cherry Week Committee. Cost of the winning pastry, Miss Spencer said, was 26 cents and it took half an hour to prepare.

Yes, Why?

By Katherine Smith.

When a man starts to tell you his troubles
And makes you his confidant, wait
In the silence of sympathy, knowing
That soon he will rise to the bait.

And you can be sure of your triumph,
When all his narrations are through,
In his classic and innocent question,
"But why should I tell this to you?"

"Chesty" Dress Coats Feature Of Spring Mode

Bows, Cascades, Jabots and Puffy Collars Achieve Desired Effects.

A "chesty" look is an important feature of dress coats for spring. This chestiness is achieved with bows, cascades, jabots, and puffy collars. The bow has moved down several inches from the just-below-the-chin place that it occupied throughout the winter months. For spring, it reposes on the chest. This means that the neckline of the coat is lower, often revealing a considerable portion of the blouse beneath it.

As for the silhouette—two types are running neck and neck for first place. One is intensely feminine with flowing lines which hug the body at the waistline. The other is a straight, boxy outline, in the manner of Chinese coats.

Both silhouettes have one thing in common. They agree perfectly on deep armholes. As a result, sleeves are usually dolman or kimona in cut, although the raglan shoulder is extremely good. Some of the new coats actually have short sleeves, and when these are used the raglan shoulder is invariably depended upon to give smooth top line. These short sleeves usually stop midway between the wrist and elbow and have whatever fullness they possess on the upper arm.

Buttons all the way down the front fasten some of the fitted coats, emphasizing the princess line. Some of the more expensive ones have their buttons concealed by fine tailoring, in the manner of a man's overcoat.

A large number of coats, however, cling to the popular side fastening. One button is frequently called upon to do the closing honors.

How to Keep Well

By Dr. W. A. Evans.

Read as You Run.

Conan Doyle, whose best-known character is Sherlock Holmes, was a physician, and his superior men were often of that profession. His writings became famous because, aside from their literary style and their use of mystery, he portrayed the art of close observation and of deduction based thereon. The author learned this art and this science from one of his professors in a medical school—a man whose fame for observation and deduction was as great among physicians as was that of Sherlock Holmes among lay people a generation later.

This very acute-minded old Scotchman taught his pupils to observe people minutely and to deduce from what was observed. Aside from the sport this offered in other directions, it was often the basis for snrewd diagnosis of their diseases and correct treatment based thereon.

A professor in Guy's Hospital, London, recently entertained and instructed his pupils by reciting to them some of his experiences in playing the game of guessing what diseases men suffered from, based on the way they sat in street cars, walked in the street and ate at table. His deductions were no more than guesses of varying degrees of shrewdness, and doubtless many of them were wrong, but the game was interesting and diverting—far more so than trying to read as one rode, or than sitting with a vacant mind, or superficially seeing objects of no interest. Besides, it was excellent training for his professional work.

A certain physician in this city has long indulged in the same sport. He sometimes walks and plays the game with another physician, who has considerable "crust." This other not infrequently puts the guesses to the test by engaging the subject in talk and, as an interested physician, asking for the facts. Some of the mistakes have been amusing enough, as when a diagnosis of birth palsy was overturned by the statement: "I had a bad accident and the great Dr. Senn took some of the bones out of one leg."

A man's method of walking may show that he has locomotor ataxia, or that he has had infantile paralysis, lead poisoning, birth palsy, or apoplexy. If he stands overly straight the posture may be due to a weak back. If his hands tremble violently he may have Parkinson's disease. If there is a fine tremor he is apt to have goiter. If he spills soup on his vest or holds his glass of water with both hands he may have paralysis agitans and he may have had sleeping sickness.

Shorts Win Acclaim By Duchess of York As 'Very Practical'

London, Feb. 23 (AP).—The young manikin garbed in shorts colored slightly.

The shorts were intended to be worn on the tennis court and here she was in full view of an audience at the textile section of the British Industrial Fair.

But it was not the size of the audience which embarrassed the shorts-wearer. It was the fact that the most important member of the audience was her Royal Highness the Duchess of York.

Now the British royal family as a whole leans toward the conservative in dress. Shorts are not conservative. Even the manikin knew that.

Beside the wearer of the shorts stood another young woman, also garbed for tennis, but wearing a skirt. A manager called for a vote by the audience on which costume was preferable.

"Will those of you who approve of shorts," he asked, "please raise your hands?"

The Duchess of York raised her hand. Then she turned to Lord Derby, who accompanied her, and said:

"I think they are very practical."

Bill Wails Not; Nor Does Aggie. Two Plain Tales.

By Mildred Reed Bundy

One of the busiest men in Washington this morning is Bill K——. He sells vegetables and fruits on the Water Street market. The foods Bill sells aren't unusual. His prices are not cut prices. Bill himself probably doesn't know it, but his best stock in trade is his beaming good nature—his cheery greeting to customers—and his willingness to take life as it comes.

For a month Bill has sold almost nothing. Even his best customers haven't braved the ice-covered, wind-swept streets on the waterfront just to be sure they were getting fresh foods. The most Bill could do was to move the cabbages, the potatoes, the oranges, and tomatoes and all the other things into the building adjoining his stand, and there patiently stoke a tiny old rusty stove all day to keep the vegetables and fruits from freezing. The little one-burner stove not only protected vegetables, but warmed the shivering, ill-clad bodies of transients out of work, and the foolishly shod feet of at least one woman reporter. While Bill's stove furnished heat, his good-natured grin and kind, dark eyes did a good job of heart-warming while the whole world seemed frozen.

Come what did—depression notwithstanding—no matter what the weather did to his business, Bill has managed to pay $500 on a home and carry on monthly payments of $40. He has six sons and two daughters, every one of them in school. No one hears any moaning from Bill, either, over the size of the load he carries.

The Saga of Aggie.

A family of two—a man and his wife—are finding it difficult to manage on $10,000 a year. They have a luxurious town apartment and a country home. They have no children. "Children," they say, "are just nature's trick. Awful things to have happen to one. All right for everyone else, but not for us." So in this family of two a mere birthday present can cost $300. It did. I saw it, a gorgeous gift.

Ho! Hum! There isn't any moral. Just the way things are. Like the organdy aprons for correct housemaids and the story of Aggie. The insistence on organdy aprons for housemaids was uppermost the other day in a conversation among several women who have the "servant problem." One of the women had employed seven servants. Of couse, their proper attire would be perplexing. But the weightiness of the organdy apron matter came on the same day I found Aggie. This is the story of Aggie, a real person, who ekes out her existence in a shabby house in Southwest Washington.

Aggie's husband is paralyzed. She must bathe him, shave him, help him get about.

"But, oh, my husband was a big man once," Aggie confides. "He was chef at the —— Hotel for 19 years. He has served John D. Rockefeller. Served him many times." What did he serve John D.? We had to know.

"Tripe, lots of tripe," she said.

Without the superfluity of organdy aprons Aggie cares for the invalid husband, for 11 rooms, for 7 roomers and the laundry for the whole house. She hasn't the benefit of an electric washing machine.

"I wash my house in all its corners," Aggie says. With mops, we supposed. "No, all on my hands and knees. Mops don't suit me."

Aggie is frail. "For 11 years I go with just one kidney," she said. Her arms are muscular. "My arms were hard with work before I was 12, before I left my home in Alsace-Lorraine. I knew all kinds of work then."

Handing It Across the Sea.

Probably polite fellow diplomats wanted Mrs. Ruth Bryan Owen to lead the procession, but the London Express seems to think our Mmc. Minister elbowed her way to the front when received by King Christian X of Denmark. The Express says:

"When the tallest of Scandinavia's three tall kings, Christian X of Denmark, received his corps diplomatique last week, Mme. Minister Owen, first woman ever appointed a United States envoy, showed that she might be a diplomat but she was still conscious of her sex.

"Waiving the rule that senior diplomats take precedence, Mrs. Owen claimed privilege of 'ladies first,' swept up to King Christian ahead of everybody.

"Dressed in a gown of silver-embroidered black velvet, she chatted diplomatic nothings in a manner hailed by the press of her own country as a 'triumph for Mrs. Ruth Bryan Owen.'

What Today Means

"Pisces."

If February 24 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 9:30 to 10:30 a. m., from 1 to 2 p. m. and from 3 to 4 p. m. The danger periods are from 6 to 7 a. m., from 4:30 to 5:30 p. m. and from 8 to 9 p. m.

If you were born on February 24, do not let yourself be tempted to try and make "easy money" by purely speculative means. There is no truer saying than: "Easy come, easy go." You are gifted with the collector's instinct, and will be successful if you study the salient essential features and fine points one should know if one is going to collect stamps, books, coins or antiques. You may find it of great future value if you devote your spare time in reading historical works, for the information you now store up may later on prove of practical value.

The child born on February 24, as soon as it is old enough, should be encouraged to take an interest in anything pertaining to flowers and gardening. Out-of-door life will always have a remarkably beneficial influence in its mental and physical growth. Photography may be the child's favorite hobby when it reaches its teens. Everything that is possible should be done to further this interest, as this will prove of great help in developing the child's appreciation for art. The child's active mentality will demand always something of a constructive nature to keep it occupied, so in whatever it evinces an interest should meet with hearty approval.

The woman born on February 24 must not allow herself to be indifferent to material success. While her affections center around and about home life, it might be advisable, in case of necessity, to be prepared to make a living. When possible every woman should specialize in something that will enable her to earn a livelihood, if thrown suddenly on her own resources, and this preparation should be done in advance.

The man born on February 24 is a natural born trader, or of a very artistic temperament, in which case, like many artists, business is a secondary consideration. If he has business instincts, he is cool, collected, and a "go-getter." If, however, he has the artistic nature, he should have some one, in whom he has confidence, to advise him on every move he makes in business negotiation for the petty details of business do not enter into his scheme of life.

People born on February 24 have their principal interest outside of having to work for a living in their family and home life, and very little else interests them.

Successful people born on February 24:

Ephraim Williams, founder of Williams College.

Stephen T. Logan, law partner of Abraham Lincoln.

John Wise, aeronaut and inventor.

Henry Kirke Brown, sculptor.

George William Curtis, author.

John Habberton, author.

Leader of Women of the Moose

Expert Disputes Theory of 'Only Child' Handicap

Dr. Anderson Recommends Discipline and Wide Variety of Experience.

Discipline and a wide variety of early experiences are necessary in aiding a child's character development.

Kindergarten schools are of practical value in that they afford the child of pre-school age excellent opportunity for making social adjustments before embarking on "book learning."

As for nursery schools—for the child from 3 to 5—they benefit some children; make no contribution to others.

The noted child psychologist, Dr. John E. Anderson, here to take part in discussions of the work of Mooseheart Laboratory for Child Research—which occupied two days of the three-day program of the midwinter conference of the Supreme Council of the Loyal Order of Moose—voiced these and other opinions at an interview over a luncheon table at the Willard Hotel yesterday.

"Only Child" No Handicap

Dr. Anderson, besides being director of the Institute for Child Welfare of the University of Minnesota and author of the book "Happy Childhood," which this week won the Parent Magazine award, is the father of five children.

"—And you might say they're all alive and doing well, in spite of the doctor's scientific theories," chaffed Dr. Martin L. Reymert, brilliant Norwegian director of Mooseheart Laboratory, who was chatting with Dr. Anderson at the time of the interview. Dr. Reymert described Dr. Anderson as "president or secretary of almost every conceivable psychological and educational project for child development."

It is Dr. Anderson's belief that the only child is the one likely to profit most from the nursery school. Also, he believes "the problem of the only child" has been over-emphasized in popular literature.

"The only child, who lacks contacts with others of his own age, stands to benefit by the nursery school," he said. "Although the only child—contrary to popular theory—usually comes through very well, ultimately."

No Age Limit on Learning.

Dr. Reymert interjected his opinion, at this point, that up to now biological science has over-emphasized the importance of heredity. The two men agreed that environmental factors and correct early training are the greatest determining factors in building character.

"I maintain there is no inheritance of criminal tendencies," said Dr. Reymert.

Asked if a child's character is determined by the age of two, or three, or even seven years, as many authorities proclaim—the two psychologists emphatically disputed the theory.

"Human beings can adjust at any age. Even an old person can learn," Dr. Anderson declared. "It is hard to overcome bad habits, but it certainly can be done.

"Wide environment and a variety of play things should be at the disposal of every child. Breadth of experience in early years brings versatility and ease of adaptability. It is a pretty good thing, for instance, for a boy to know how to wash dishes."

System Is Blamed For Failure of High School Graduates

If the average boy or girl seems helplessly unequipped for life on leaving high school, it is more the fault of the system than the youth.

There is need for reorganization of the public high school system to provide a different type of education and a different curriculum, Ernest M. Roselle, superintendent of Mooseheart, "The City of Childhood," at Mooseheart, Ill., said yesterday.

"Training youth for the responsibilities of life can be handled in high school, and it is a point I intend to bring to the attention of the National Education Association when it meets next week in Cleveland," he declared.

"The aim of the average high school," he said, "is to prepare students for college entrance. Consequently, only a select group is benefited. Records show that only 24 out of every 100 students entering high school ever graduate. Seventy-six fall by the wayside.

"It is different at Mooseheart. The pupils there represent the rank and file of American youth. We insist that they continue their studies to a logical conclusion.

"When a boy or girl gets a diploma from Mooseheart, he or she is not only entitled to college entrance, but in addition has been trained for a vocation. They are ready to earn their bread and butter the next day, if necessary."

The school at Mooseheart, which was founded 20 years ago to provide shelter and education for orphans of deceased members of the Loyal Order of Moose, is a model for the public schools to pattern after, in Mr. Roselle's opinion. As educational dictator there, Mr. Roselle's position is comparable to that of city manager for the average city.

Four hundred students are enrolled in the high school there this year, and during the years since 1919, 800 have been graduated.

"They are scattered over 39 States of the Union, and all of them have splendid records," said Mr. Roselle. "None of our graduates has ever been convicted of a crime.

"Our graduate students are making records as doctors, ministers, engineers, musicians and in radio work.

"So far as I know, the only other school in the world like ours is one in the Argentine Republic; and it was modeled after Mooseheart."

Coming Drinks Casting Their Shadow Before

Mysterious Hotel Activities Merely Herald Goings-on Due Next Week.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

New ideas are springing up around Washington like so many mushrooms. Whether it's March 1 that is acting as an impetus, or whether these are indications that mark the end of depression is a matter of controversy. At any rate even the most casual onlookers can't fail to see the signs.

There's a subdued excitement in the air. Curious bystanders in the lobby of a large hotel were looking a little perplexed yesterday at the mysterious goings on around there. A first floor room which ordinarily has its doors wide open to the public was suddenly closed up. Groups of workmen carrying queer bundles were seen to approach the doors, and tap gently before they gained admittance. It was barely possible to peek through the crack and see all manner of upheaval. Several varieties of chairs and tables were piled haphazardly around the room. Side lights were being covered with parchment shades. Floors were being scrubbed and polished.

As the hands of the clock moved forward, and the surreptitious activity continued we decided that it was up to some one to investigate. Straightway to the manager, who smiled wisely and shook his head. Thence to the publicity manager, who looked provokingly thoughtful. But the truth will out.

As far as we could ascertain, the low-down is this: Probably on March 1, next Thursday, certainly not much later, the mysteriously closed doors are going to open on a large room furnished completely with bamboo tables and chairs, inclosed with bamboo trees and other tropical plants. No yellow moon, nor any dusky dancers, but indirect lighting from a large overhead dome, and the clink of convivial cups, barely audible above the soft, pulsating melodies of a musical trio.

Those are the facts as near as we could get them. There might be dancing, there might be dinner, there might be a jazz band, or there might be an Hawaiian orchestra, or there might be the trio we mentioned.

A Washington woman who has had her finger in many pies and always pulled out sugar plums is going to have charge of the tropical room the day it opens. She is counting on a large and glittering clientele—for the proceeds that day will go to the Thrift Shop.

In her characteristic way she has arranged for a program which is going to be a real attraction. Professional mannequins are going to model clothes from several of Washington's smartest shops.

And—that's not all. There's a trump card which is still being held. It has to do with an old, old wedding dress and a very high personage. But more anon.

• • • •

No Woman's Land.

Although this bit of the tropics is for both men and women, there's going to be a special room, called Swallow Hollow reserved for men alone. We took the proffered opportunity and gazed into it yesterday, and even dared to trespass. Amidst the jumble of flexwood furnishings, overstuffed leather chairs and sofas, it was easy to see that here was going to be a popular spot for Washington stags to grow mellow and more mellow.

Bath Buns Best for Tea.

Legend says that the Wife of Bath whom Chaucer immortalized had besides a frivolous and capricious nature a remarkable aptitude for cuisine. Although most of her recipes have perished with time one, was rescued from the dust of centuries.

The proprietor of a local bake shop says that the buns he is selling at a special price of 33 cents a dozen today are undoubtedly made from this ancient recipe. Bath buns, he calls them. They are made from regular cake batter which has extra eggs and handfuls of raisins added just before the baking begins.

He says they are about the best buns anywhere to top off tea.

Here's a Pure White Cake.

A two-layer white butter cake, with a thick coating of white fudge icing, is on sale today for 57 cents. It yields 12 generous slices.

As most shoppers know, it is difficult to find a pure-white cake. We sometimes see yellow batter cakes, devil foods, or angel foods with white icing, but rare as that day in June is a pure-white fudge cake.

Southern Shortcake

The old-fashioned Southern strawberry shortcakes are not a thing of the past, as many persons are wont to claim. There's a pastry shop which specializes in home baking and quaint recipes, which makes these little pastry gems quite after the Southern style.

The cook beats his golden batter to a creamy fluffiness. When he's finished he uses real whipped cream and real strawberries. These little individual cakes sell for 10 cents apiece.

In Serving More Than One Entree Hostess Should Avoid Duplicating of Materials, Sauces or Flavors, Says Susan Mills, Who Also Details Several Recipes.

By Susan Mills.

The farther one gets in the menu of a formal dinner, the more complicated are the ideas. Having passed the fish course, we now arrive at the entrees. These may be many or few, according to the plan of the dinner menu and the strength and patience of the cook.

If many entrees are served, care should be taken not to repeat materials, sauces or flavors. They can be served separately as courses in themselves, or together, if the main course of the dinner is not heavy. The latter plan is more modern and saves time, but when a formal dinner is well under way, with appropriately placed guests, time should not enter into the planning.

Good food and good talk is a rare and delightful combination and virtually unknown in the rush and flurry of modern times. But when a hostess has among her guests a group of interesting people, let the dinner go on and on—and it will be enjoyed by all.

A number of palatable entrees can be made of so-called "left-overs." However, since this method of preparing them is a makeshift at best, the perfect dish should be prepared, cooked and seasoned for the purpose for which it was intended, then it will be a veritable masterpiece.

The fish souffle, recipe for which appears elsewhere on this page, is a delicious entree. If a fish course has been served, the fish in the souffle may be substituted with minced ham, or chicken, or cooked corned beef.

Here's an old recipe for chicken croquettes that is sure to please:

Chicken Croquettes

Cook together two tablespoons butter and four of flour, add a half cup thick chicken stock, ¾ cup cream, ¼ teaspoon salt and a dash cayenne. Add to this sauce two cups of chicken chopped fine. When boiling add a teaspoon minced parsley, ½ teaspoon onion juice, a teaspoon lemon juice; or 1 truffle, chopped fine, tablespoon sherry or Madeira, and grated nutmeg. Allow to cool, and when perfectly cold, shape into croquettes, crumb, brush with egg, crumb and fry in deep hot fat.

Mushroom Sauce

Make a brown sauce of two tablespoons butter, three of flour, and a cup and a half of stock or hot water. (Cook butter until brown before adding flour.) Add ½ cup fresh mushrooms which have been cut in small pieces, rolled in flour and sauteed in butter. Cook five minutes, then add a tablespoon each of mushroom catsup, Worcestershire sauce, and sherry. Allow to boil, and serve.

Vegetable entrees may be served much the same way as the meat entrees. Beets with a sour sauce made of ¼ cup sugar, 4 tablespoons cornstarch, ½ cup vinegar, and a ½ cup boiling water thoroughly cooked make an unusual and delicious entree. Cucumbers can be sliced lengthwise, dusted with salt and pepper, rolled in flour or cornmeal, and sauteed in hot fat.

All of these dishes are appropriate and tasteful for a light Sunday-night supper, served with other dishes or separately.

With the meat or poultry entrees, claret may be served, slightly cold. If the vegetable entrees are served after the main meat course, Burgundy, claret, or champagne may be served. Remember that champagne should be chilled, but not too cold, and that ice should never be put in the champagne glass.

Susan Mills' Post-WJSV Recipes

Fish Souffle.

Melt an ounce of butter in a saucepan, add a tablespoon flour and mix into a smooth paste, thinning it with a cupful of lukewarm milk and water. Add pepper and salt. Add a half pound flaked haddock or other fish, stirring well. Let it cook for a few minutes, take from fire and allow to cool. When lukewarm add the whites of four eggs whipped into a stiff froth, yolks of eggs and 3 ounces of cream whipped into a nice snow. Warm a souffle shape and butter it. Half fill it with mixture and bake in moderate oven. The souffle is done when it has risen and looks brown. It will take about 20 minutes. Serve immediately.

Chocolate Souffle.

Beat yolks of 4 eggs with 4 ounces sugar and ½ pound grated chocolate. Whip whites of eggs into stiff froth. Mix together carefully and bake in buttered souffle dish about 20 minutes.

Almond Souffle.

Make a smooth paste with a pint of hot milk, yolks of 4 eggs and 2 tablespoons flour. Stir till cold. Pound a half pound blanched almonds and a half pound sugar, a little vanilla and the stiff froth of the whites of the 4 eggs. Put into pie dish and bake about 20 minutes.

Salad Tid-bits Recipe Wins $5

Alice M. Lowfer Submits Formula Useful to Those Going to Business.

The recipe for fruit tid-bits submitted by Alice M. Lowfer, of 1346 Irving street northwest, has been awarded the $5 weekly prize.

Housewives who go to business will welcome this recipe because it is so quickly and easily prepared. Of all the various kinds of tid-bits served with salads, the fruit tid-bits are the most delicious. They will make the most ordinary salad a pleasing dish.

The recipe is as follows:

¼ pound butter
¼ pound cream cheese or pimento cheese
1 cup pastry flour
½ pound seeded dates
1 cup shelled English walnuts

Mix the cream cheese and butter together. Add sifted flour and knead together as you would an ordinary pie pastry. Roll out and cut in small circles. Place a date in the center of each circle, and then put one-half walnut inside of each date. Roll and pinch the ends together and bake for 20 minutes in a moderate oven.

Prunes that have been washed, soaked and seeded may be substituted for the dates. Conserved ginger or citron may be used in place of the nuts for variety.

Recipes to be entered in the weekly recipe prize contest should be addressed to the Food Editor, The Washington Post, Washington, D. C.

Gallows of Chance

By E. Phillips Oppenheim

The Story Thus Far.

While returning to London after visiting Lord Edward Keynsham, Sir Humphrey Rossiter, British home secretary, is abducted, taken to a building resembling a prison and placed upon a gallows. He is told he will be hanged unless he grants a reprieve to Cecil Brandt, doomed to be executed the following morning for murder. A messenger arrives with word Mrs. Brandt is waiting at Rossiter's home. He is released, hears her story and promises a reprieve. He faints as he lifts the telephone to call Wandsworth Prison. Brandt is hanged.

Rossiter and Mrs. Brandt disappear. Young Detective Pank, of Scotland Yard, learns Keynsham engineered the abduction of Sir Humphrey the night before Brandt's execution. Rossiter and Mrs. Brandt return. He says they went into hiding at Keynsham's plea to elude a mysterious international band. A key sent to Rossiter by Brandt is the object of a search by the gang. Keynsham, returning from a meeting with his associates in France, opens a mysterious box which contains records of murders by the nobleman and his associates who made millions in America during the bootleg era.

Sir Humphrey closed the book. "A very ingenious, though not altogether original idea," he remarked. "You have here the signed confession by each one of the members of your syndicate of certain misdemeanors against the law. I presume your idea was that this made it impossible for any one of them to turn informer?"

"But possible enough," Keynsham rejoined bitterly, "for the one who went out before to sell the rest of us. You know now why Brandt went cheerfully to the scaffold. That was the sort of man he was!"

"I think," Matterson said, taking a step forward.

Sir Humphrey held out his hand. "Wait!" he enjoined. "There is no hurry. This matter needs consideration."

He reopened the volume and studied once more the whole six entries.

"Now, supposing you tell me about this little affair of yours, Keynsham," he suggested. "You simply say here that you killed Jake Grogan, whoever he may have been. Tell us about it."

A Bitter Reply.

"There's not much to tell," was the bitter reply. "Grogan was one of the old-fashioned type of bootleggers, and he tried to clear us out with hired gunmen. We came up against one another one night while we were landing a cargo. We tried, as we always did, to fight our own way, which didn't include firearms, but it was useless. They were all armed to the teeth. Grogan had two shots at me and missed me by a hair's breadth. After that I shot at him, and I held my gun straighter."

"I see," Sir Humphrey murmured. "And now what about this affair of Mr. Samuel Clowes? He seems to have been rather pleased with himself."

"He had reason to be. Tony Burke was what they call a 'go-between.' He took bribes from us and gave information to the police at the same time. We had him up and charged him with it. When Sam killed him he had a knife in his hand which was within an inch or two of De Lusigny's back."

"And De Lusigny's little affair? What about that?"

"Initos started the fight—we didn't," Keynsham declared. "We offered him a friendly arrangement. He accepted it, then he ambushed a few of us and challenged us to fight it out with his cut-throats. He had three shots at De Lusigny—he can't use his left arm even now—and De Lusigny killed him."

Sir Humphrey nodded.

Attack Recalled.

"There's another man here," he remarked with a grimace, "whose muscles I have cause to remember—Van Pleyden. He seemed to me rather a brutal sort of person."

"He's one of the kindest-hearted men alive normally," Keynsham replied. "Rawson was one of our own men who double-crossed us. He brought a trolley load of detectives down to our wharf and we lost one of the only shipments that ever went wrong. Rawson was carrying a gun and tried to get at me—for fear of what might be coming to him afterward, I suppose. Van Pleyden shot him and had to swim across the harbor to get away."

"This fellow Meadows, I suppose," Sir Humphrey inquired, his expression hardening, "is one of the two who committed the Lombard street murders?"

"We have no excuse to offer for that," Keynsham admitted, "nor any explanation. A cold-blooded killing we never encouraged or permitted. Personally, I think it was done in a fit of nerves. Meadows had been terrified from the moment he signed that book."

Matterson could restrain himself no longer. The Scotland Yard fever was in his eyes.

"Sir Humphrey," he pointed out, "of course the whole thing is clear enough now. This book of confessions would be worth its weight in gold to the New York police. You had better give it into our charge at once and we will take the necessary steps."

Sir Humphrey shook his head.

"I don't think so, Matterson," he said, firmly.

The subcommissioner stared at him in amazement.

"But these men are confessed criminals," he argued. "They broke the civil law of the country they were living in, and they broke the criminal law by their killings!"

"They were engaged, no doubt," Sir Humphrey admitted, "in a hazardous and illegal enterprise, but, after all, their deeds of violence seem to have been committed either against informers, who are the scum of the earth, or against others who were engaged in the same form of law breaking."

Voice Shaken With Passion.

Matterson's voice shook with passion.

"Sir Humphrey Rossiter," he said, sternly, "you have been shielding these people for personal reasons too long. I am forced to remind you, sir, that you should be the one person responsible for the due observance of the law. Remember that you are home secretary of this country."

Sir Humphrey turned toward the fire and thrust the book into the middle of the flames.

"I'm nothing of the sort, Matterson," he confided. "I resigned a quarter of an hour ago."

• • • •

Then they all left, and once more Sir Humphrey was alone in his study. Detective Inspector Pank had hurried back to his lodging and settled down to write a love letter to Amy. Col. Matterson had gone furiously to his club, tormented by the bald and ugly fact that the thunderbolt which he had come so near to launching had fizzled out in his hand, and that all these weeks of mortification and nervous anxiety had gone for nothing. The departure of Keynsham and Katherine Brandt had been just a little sheepish. Keynsham for one moment had looked his friend searchingly in the face, but he realized that the latter had reached the limit of his endurance.

"You are a great man, Humphrey," he said simply. "If only we had dared to trust you before!"

Katherine had scarcely been so happy in her parting.

"I must look after him tonight," she faltered. "You will never understand what a marvelous thing you have done!"

But Sir Humphrey, watching them both leave the room, thought that he understood very well indeed.

Chestow Square seemed to have relapsed into its usual state of calm. Policemen, detectives, watchmen of every description had departed. Parkins came into the library, cleared away and set out the whisky and soda by his master's side.

"Is there anything more you require tonight, sir?" was his stereotyped question.

Helps Self to Drink.

Sir Humphrey helped himself to a whisky and soda, selected a pipe from a rack, filled and lit it. He stretched himself out, enjoying the warmth of the fire. He was in a sense dazed when he tried to think of what had happened. No longer home secretary. No longer a cabinet minister. Very soon, in all probability, not even a member of Parliament. Odd how one's ambitions could fade away in a moment of crisis. There was nothing else he could have done, he told himself. He had destroyed the record of criminal actions committed by a band of adventurers, under the leadership of an Englishman, in a friendly country, actions which were brought to his notice in a foully malicious manner by a dead man. Terrible! The worst of it was, he thought, with a faint smile, as he pushed the tobacco farther down into his pipe, he would probably have done the same thing at any time during his career! It was just the evil chance of a lifetime that the problem should have been put up to him.

There was the sound of a car stopping outside. He listened and glanced at his watch. It was still only 12 o'clock. Very likely Carthew had heard the news. The door was opened. Parkins appeared, and behind him a very brilliant vision.

"Lady Louise Keynsham," he announced.

She came forward with a curious smile parting her lips—half of apology, half of subtler things.

"Don't laugh at me, please," she begged. "I had to go to the show at Buckingham Palace, but I only stayed an hour. I got home meaning to change and go on to the D'Arcy's, but Katherine and Edward came in and what they didn't tell me I guessed,"

"So you came to console me," he asked, wheeling up a chair.

She held out her hands, and somehow their natural place seemed to be around his neck. Her eyes melted into his. Underneath the white satin of her gown he could feel the fluttering of her body as he drew her toward him.

"I thought you might be lonely she whispered.

Amusing Story Of Young Love On Keith's Bill

(Reprinted from Yesterday's Last Edition.)

"IT HAPPENED ONE NIGHT." Columbia picturization of Samuel Hopkins Adams' story of "Night Bus," adapted to the screen by Robert Riskin, co-starring Clark Gable and Claudette Colbert, with Walter Connolly, Roscoe Karns, Jameson Thomas, Alan Hale, Maidel Turner, Blanche Friderici and Arthur Hoyt. Directed by Frank Capra. Previewed Monday afternoon, February 19.

By Nelson B. Bell.

Those who withstand the early threat that this is to prove merely another demonstration of the peculiar perplexities by which transcontinental bus travel seems to be hedged about, will find themselves soon enough in the midst of a gay charade having to do with a runaway heiress and a jobless young newspaperman, who face a considerable problem and manage to surmount an amazing number of physical, mental and moral hazards while contriving to fall in love.

The locale of the story is the winding road that leads by bus, hitch-hiking and foot travel from Miami to New York. When Ellen Andrews—called "Ellie" for short—slips over the side of her rich daddy's yacht in Florida waters, to escape a distasteful bit of matchmaking, and embarks upon the night bus to the North, she seals her fate by permitting Peter Warne to boss her roughly around. When her grip is stolen and she is left practically penniless, miles away from her destination, the energetic and unconventional Mr. Warne becomes an unpleasant, but very real necessity to her welfare.

Heady Young People.

Just how it came about that Miss Andrews was able to swim ashore with an overnight bag and a wrist watch that was hockable on sight, is not made quite clear, but that seems to have been the way of it. That, however, is less important than the vicissitudes encountered by Miss Andrews and Mr. Warne on their harassed trip to New York, which took not one night, as the title implies, but many, fraught with the possibilities of discovery, demoralization and disgrace.

But these are heady young people, this Miss Andrews and Mr. Warne, and nothing more serious befalls them than acute physical discomfort, many humorous predicaments and a final casting up of accounts that indicated a heavy credit for both.

The role of Warne is an assignment in which Clark Gable evidently found keen joy. He plays the role better than he has ever played any other on any screen.

While Claudette Colbert perhaps fails to overshadow her every previous characterization, she nevertheless contributes a performance that at least matches her co-star's in ebullience, naturalness and that delightful quality of utter frankness and indifference to convention that lends the entire action of the play a spontaneity, a crisp freshness and a ready wit that very few film comedies indeed have possessed.

Large Cast Supports.

While an extensive gallery of players have been assembled to support the principals in the various stages of their slow journey northward, only a comparatively few of them are cast in roles of pivotal importance. Foremost among these is Walter Connolly, who, as the irate and pursuing Nemesis of a wayward daughter, furnishes the sinister threat and constant element of conflict that give the yarn its suspense and final punch. Roscoe Karns, as a brief but persistent annoyance during the early stages of the trip, lends a comedy touch that is effective. The late Blanche Friderici, Arthur Hoyt and scores of others, including Alan Hale, play lusty bits with fine gusto.

One of the distinguished virtues of "It Happened One Night," over and above the punctilious discretion with which it handles situations of some delicacy, is the skillful manner in which it succeeds in maintaining a constant sense of buoyancy and speed, even when the actual action has slowed down to a walk.

Can Be Quickened.

This slowing down process, by the way, can be largely, if not entirely, overcome by the judicious pruning of the present celluloid footage, which, as it stands, is entirely too long. One finds himself beginning to suspect that the fable is wholly without terminal facilities when all of a sudden it whips into a wedding climax and hilarious denouement that completely dispel the impatience he has been about to vent upon its dilatory tactics in telling itself off.

The supplementary features of the bill, which was inaugurated with a special Wednesday midnight holiday preview, include a new issue of the RKO-Pathe News and another release in the series of "Amos 'n' Andy" cartoon comedies in which the pen and ink figures are miraculously endowed with the familiar voices of the Messrs. Correll and Gosden.

Although "It Happened One Night" is in no sense an important picture, it is heartily recommended as one of the most spontaneously entertaining of the season and the one that probably will cause it to be forgotten that Clark Gable ever was in "Strange Interlude."

Rialto

"BELOVED." Universal picturization of a story by Paul Gangelin, adapted to the screen by Paul Gangelin and George O'Neil featuring John Boles and Gloria Stuart, with Albert Conti, Dorothy Peterson, Ruth Hall, Anderson Lawler, Edmund Breese, Holmes Herbert, Richard Carle, Lucille Gleason, Mae Busch, Bessie Barriscale, Clara Blandick and King Baggott. Directed by Victor Schertzinger. Previewed Tuesday morning, February 20.

There is an earnestness and honesty of purpose about this picturization of a lifetime of valiant struggle, minor defeats and final triumph that must leave an indelible imprint upon the consciousness of any intelligent observer.

Dedicated to exalted motives and executed with an obvious eye to artistic as well as dramatic effects, "Beloved" unfolds a panorama of stirring events, tender loves and unquenchable faith that encompasses the full span of a long and useful career in music. As a matter of fact, it is not impossible that such weaknesses as "Beloved" betrays may be traced directly to its determination to crowd a tremendous number of incidents, climaxes, emotions and passions into the biography of Carl Hausman, musical genius, whose life is fraught with tragic disappointments, disillusionment and despair, until on the brink of eternity, he snatches a last momentary triumph from an age he thought the enemy of his music and all the fine tradition for which it stood.

Vienna In 1838.

The life of Carl is picked up in Vienna at almost the hour of his birth, in 1838, and traced through a bitter Austrian revolution that tragically ended his father's life; the war between the States in this country, where he took up the teaching of music in the South; the Spanish-American War, in which he lost his only son—a good-for-nothing young renegade—and the Great War, from which his grandson returned a gifted and extremely youthful exponent of the modern school of music of which George Gershwin is the high priest in real life.

Through all of this major movement of plot, with its multifarious ramificatiens, sidelights and deviations, runs a tender love story and a heroic overtone of courage, sacrifice and steadfast adherence to an ideal. Not until the last moments of the picture does reward finally come to the tottering old man who has never abandoned a principle, no matter how vital the exigency of the moment.

Barnum "Concert Tours."

The career of Carl Hausman carried him through the lowest Bowery honkytonks, the humiliating experiences of a "concert tour" under the flamboyant auspices of a "master showman," patterned after the fabulous figure of the late Phineas T. Barnum, and played with suave and oily condescension by Richard Carle, who here essays the most important role he has undertaken before the cameras. This wide range of incident and locale permits a corresponding freedom of scene and characterization, which has been fully realized by both authors and director. "Beloved" is a picture of wide scope and constantly changing mood.

Since music provides the background of the story's movement, there are frequent interpolations of music throughout the play's developments. It is by this happy circumstance that John Boles, cast in the role of Hausman, is permitted to sing once more, displaying one of the most agreeable voices in the contemporary theater in songs that are fully within its range and power.

Mr. Boles, one of this department's favorite persons both on and off the screen, is well cast in the early sequences of the picture, but loses something of credibility when called upon to pose as a nonagenarian, palsied, bent and crowned with the hoary frosts of time. Neither Mr. Boles nor his leading woman, the blonde and beautiful Miss Gloria Stuart, should be called upon to reach so far into the future and belie the vigor and aliveness of their buoyant youth. It is not a successful undertaking for either of them.

Support and Supplementaries.

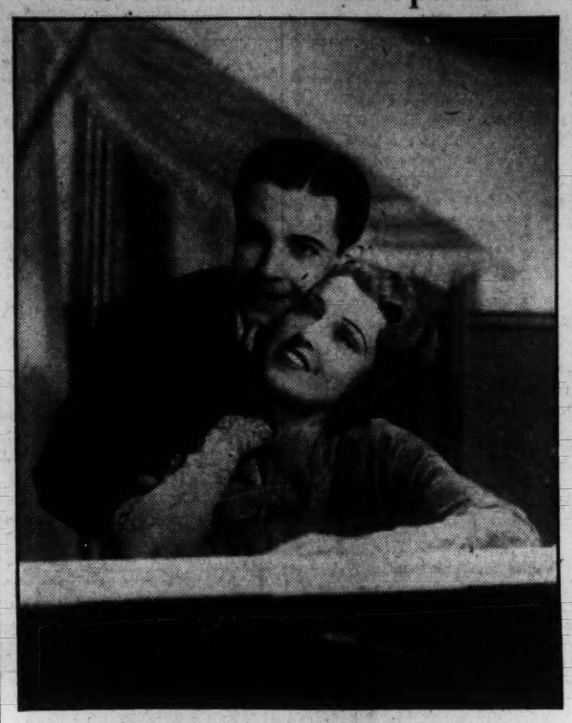
The supporting cast is an exceptionally long and able one, in which Lucille Gleason and Mae Busch, as understanding, if somewhat crude, habitues of the Bowery beer joint; Dorothy Peterson, as Carl's mother; Lester Lee, as Carl at the age of 10; Bessie Barriscale, and too many more to mention, contributes colorful and helpful portrayals of figures essential to the rounded perfection of the complex story's narration.

Director Schertzinger has been especially deft in his introduction of the various war sequences, which are scarcely more than suggestive flashes indicating the mounting horror of armed conflict among the nations of the world. His scenes are skillfully composed and spectacularly photographed. Many exquisitely beautiful touches are introduced as the story progresses and in the matter of costuming, also, painstaking care has been taken to lend the picture a dated and sure authenticity.

Augmenting the feature are an "Oswald, the Rabbit" cartoon comedy, the new issue of the Universal News, with Graham McNamee's illuminating comment, and the customary house features.

It is "Beloved," however, that will linger in memory as a picture conceived and executed on a high plane, well calculated to catch the interest of any discriminating playgoer in quest of Grade A adult entertainment.

The Voices in Filmed Operetta



When the screen version of the Jerome Kern-Otto Harbach operetta of "The Cat and the Fiddle" is shown on the screen at Loew's Fox today, the leading roles will be sung by Ramon Novarro and Jeanette MacDonald, who possess two of the most carefully trained and delightful voices to be heard from the screen. To multiply interest in the occasion, Mr. Novarro will appear in person on the Fox stage and sing several of the songs from the melodious Kern score, accompanied by Prof. Lampkin's excellent orchestra.

Definite announcement has been made by City Manager Carter Barron of the Loew interests in Washington that the long-deferred week of personal appearances on the stage at Loew's Fox Theater will be played by Lionel Barrymore, beginning Friday, March 16.

Mr. Barrymore, who has been in the East for some time, having recently appeared as nearby as Baltimore, is using a condensed version of "The Copperhead," one of his former stage successes, as the vehicle of his present tour.

"Excuse It, Please!"

It will be excusable, under the circumstances and for the time being, if great confusion exists in attempted telephone calls to the Loew theaters in this city.

Instead of individual trunk lines for the Fox, Palace and Columbia theaters, a central switchboard has now been installed at the Fox at which all calls will be received. The new numbers are Metropolitan 5001, 5002, 5003, 5004 and 5005. The first three numbers will get the Fox at all hours. After 11 p. m., calls for the Palace should be made to Metropolitan 5004 and to the Columbia at Metropolitan 5005.

These numbers take the place of the former Fox, District 1534; Palace, Metropolitan 1300, and Columbia's District 5825.

So now you know—although, like the rest of us, you probably will forget!

Tonight at 11, Senor Ramon Novarro, appearing in person at Loew's Fox, will be guest of honor at a small and exclusive levee tendered him by our astute young afternoon contemporary, Mr. Edward De Selding Melcher, in his apartment in the Dupont Circle Apartments. Mr. Melcher has invited as his guests to meet Mr. Novarro the dramatic departments of the local press and the executives of the Loew organization in Washington, under whose auspices Senor Novarro is making his local appearances.

Many Thanks.

This desk wishes to make grateful acknowledgement of appreciated communications these past few days from Mrs. Maude Howell Smith, C. Melvin Sharpe, Romaine Stevens, Edward L. Conwell and a correspondent without the courage to sign anything nearer his right name than "Eddie Torial," who didn't care for "The Lost Patrol."

Reverting momentarily to "It Happened One Night," a midnight phone call from Manager Hardie Meakin of RKO-Keith's Theater, conveys the breathless information that yesterday's holiday receipts shattered all previous house records. The record day's business previously was chalked up by Katherine Hepburn in "Little Woman" on Thanksgiving Day. That record was exceeded yesterday by the new Clark Gable-Claudette Colbert vehicle, which packed 'em in all day and all evening to the vast joy of all concerned. Incidentally, there will be no 9:30 a. m. performance today.

"THE LAST ROUND-UP." Paramount picturization of Zane Grey's story, "The Border Legion," featuring Randolph Scott, Monte Blue, Barbara Fritchie, Fred Kohler and Fuzzy Knight. Directed by Henry Hathaway. Reviewed Thursday afternoon by W. A. Whitney.

Zane Grey here has written the swan song of the border legion, and Paramount, in "The Last Round-Up," has filmed the actual eradication of the last vestiges of the Old West, when men rode hard, shot straight, and law was something made to order for the specific occasion.

One by one, the outlaws are erased in the traditional manner, and the stalwart band of brigands, for many years a permanent adjunct to the cinema, becomes nothing but a memory. There was frequently but little variation in their offerings—but they were consistently fast, full of courageous action, and virile.

The Usual Formula.

To the follower of Westerns, "The Last Round-Up" will present the usual formula: the outlaw chief, rising in the world of brigandage from cattle rustling to the pilfering of gold; the lone cowboy, who gets mixed up with the legion; the girl, to be rescued at the last minute, and the usual complement of bandits, sheriffs, members of the posses and bar flies.

To the three or four others, who do not care to admit their addiction to "horse operas," the film version of "The Border Legion" is just "another of those things" which offers little variation on a well-known theme: law, or what passes for it, versus the bandits, with justice and young love conquering all. This elect group, too, will find their villains weakening, the villainy being tainted with cardiac softening.

Then, too, in a picture definitely dated 1869, it seems queer that the saloon barytone should suddenly burst into Billy Hill's well-worn (and frequently butchered) lament of the cow hand. It is a good number—in its place—but its use as an integral part of the picture seems out of place.

Competent Cast.

Notwithstanding these limitations, and regrets, Monte Blue makes a smooth villain, with the reliable Fred Kohler as his partner; Randolph Scott is a lone victim of circumstances, who finally succumbs to Barbara Fritchie, and Fuzzy Knight is ample justification for the lighter moments.

While possessing no particular attribute to link her with her illustrious ancestor, Miss Fritchie, who here makes her cinematic debut, makes one of the best of Western heroines. Usually these ladies are unbelievable, but here is one who seems to be a daughter of the depicted era, one who knows what it is all about and is prepared to match wits with a man on even terms.

In the supplementary show, Borrah Minnevitch and his Harmonica Rascals top the list with their comedy musical, "Where's That Tiger?" wherein the gang present a series of numbers closing with "Tiger Rag." Charles Judels and Lionel Stander are seen in "Pugs and Kisses," a fistic comedy that has a moment or two. A release of the Paramount News completes the list.

Martinsburg, W. Va., Feb. 23 (Spl.).—J. Wesley Rice, jr., and Henry D. Rice, brothers, were named and installed as noble grand and vice grand, respectively, of Tuscarora Lodge of Odd Fellows last night, by District Deputy Grand Master C. L. Jackson.

It is believed that is the first time in West Virginia that brothers have held the two top offices at the same time.

Bank Deposit Case May Be Quashed

Coblentz Trial Continued; Action Not Expected.

Cumberland, Md., Feb. 23 (Spl.). The case against State Senator Emory L. Coblentz, president of the closed Central Trust Co., involving a charge of accepting a deposit when he allegedly knew the bank was insolvent, may never come to trial, a number of persons here believe.

The case was sent back by the Court of Appeals for re-trial, but at the January term of the Allegany County Circuit Court it was marked continued. It is considered doubtful that it will come up at the April term.

Oranges Included In Relief Rations

West Virginia Counties Get Federal Supply.

Clarksburg, W. Va., Feb. 3 (Spl.). West Virginia county welfare and relief authorities are being notified that the Federal Relief Administration has arranged to send large shipments of oranges into the State for inclusion in the food that is being distributed among needy families. The shipments will continue during March, April and May.

Each family is to be allowed 5 pounds of oranges a month, but the distribution is to be flexible, to accommodate both large and small families.

Families must call at relief headquarters for the fruit and bring their own containers.

Cohan, Hayes, Hull Voted Best In Critics' Poll

Perennial 'Georgie' Cited as Harassed Father in 'Ah, Wilderness.'

New York, Feb. 22 (AP).—George M. Cohan, Henry Hull and Helen Hayes are the three best performers on Broadway this season, according to a poll taken among New York dramatic critics.

These three were the only ones nominated by every critic.

Cohan, who has been acting for 45 years, won the honor for his performance as the humorously harassed father in "Ah, Wilderness," Eugene O'Neill's comedy drama of American family life. It is the first time he has appeared in a show not of his own authorship.

Since she triumphed in "What Every Woman Knows," in 1926, Miss Hayes has been regarded as a major box office star, and this season is adding to her laurels in the title role of "Mary of Scotland."

Hull has been unanimously praised for his interpretation of a grizzled old mountaineer in "Tobacco Road," known heretofore principally as a handsome, young leading man, the laudatory reviews of his current part brought from him the humorous comment that "after 30 years, they've discovered that I can act."

Runners-up in the actors' group are J. Edward Bromberg, the wise, experienced physician in "Men in White," and Burgess Meridith for his performance of the hard-boiled reform school prisoner in "Little Ol' Boy," and also as a college boy in "She Loves Me Not."

Next to Miss Hayes, the most popular actresses are Lillian Gish and Blanche Bates. The former was seen this winter in "The Joyous Season," while Miss Bates made her return to the stage in the Katharine Hepburn play, "The Lake."

Kump Asks Funds For State Parks

$70,000 Sought in Request to Legislature.

Charleston, W. Va., Feb. 23 (Spl.). Gov. H. G. Kump has asked the Legislature for $70,000 to acquire State parks.

The sum, he stated, would be sufficient to acquire lands for State projects in which the Federal Government stands ready to spend $1,200,000 during the next 12 months.

Five projects are contemplated: The Watoga State forest in Pocahontas County, one for the State game farm in Upshur County, and one each in Fayette, Hardy and either Kanawha or Boone Counties.

Fliers Forced Down On College Campus

2 Navy Aviators Land at West Virginia Wesleyan.

Buckhannon, W. Va., Feb. 23 (Spl.).—One hundred miles off their course and fearing bad weather ahead, two Navy aviators landed their planes on West Virginia Wesleyan College campus this morning, chatted with scores of admiring co-eds, had luncheon in Agnes Howard Hall and departed for Elkins to get more fuel.

They were A. Feher and W. J. Green, flying two new planes from a Troy, Ohio factory to Philadelphia, where the ships are to be put aboard the dirigible Macon.

Panhandle Nurses Meet Next at Keyser

Martinsburg, W. Va., Feb. 23 (Spl.).—Nurses from the Eastern Panhandle and South Branch Valley will meet May 23 in Keyser for the next session of the Eastern Panhandle District Nurses Association, it was announced here yesterday.

Nearly 100 nurses attended the meeting here from Berkeley, Morgan, Jefferson, Mineral, Hampshire, Grant and Pendleton Counties. The nurses heard a lecture by Dr. W. A. Wallace, this city, in which he said cancer is preventable and curable in its early stages.

G.O.P. Speakers Analyze Trends

Republicans Hold Meeting at New Market Honoring Washington's Birthday.

New Market, Va., Feb. 23 (Spl.). More than 200 Republicans of Shenandoah and adjoining counties met last night at Narrow Passage Tavern at a Washington's birthday dinner sponsored by the Young Republican Club of Shenandoah.

Speakers were the Revs. Edward Miller and John Locke, of Maurertown; Col. Warren Mabrey, Strasburg; W. C. Deming, Front Royal, and P. G. Williamson, Mount Jackson.

Rev. Locke reviewed the trends of the day and contrasted present standards with those on which the Nation was founded. Col. Mabrey declared the Nation must return to the fundamental standards by which it was built, and Mr. Deming stressed the necessity for a strong Republican organization in Virginia and the county.

Charles Town, W. Va., Feb. 23 (Spl.).—"The Wrong George Washington" and "The Vision," two patriotic plays, were presented at the Martha Washington Tea tonight by the Young People's Division of the Charles Town Methodist Episcopal Church South.

The program also consisted of patriotic songs and recitations and orchestral music.

Runners-up in the actors' group are J. Edward Bromberg, the wise, experienced physician in "Men in White," and Burgess Meridith for his performance of the hard-boiled reform school prisoner in "Little Ol' Boy," and also as a college boy in "She Loves Me Not."

Shepherdstown, W. Va., Feb. 23 (Spl.). — A Washington birthday party was held at the Manse of the Presbyterian Church tonight.

In keeping with the "birthday" idea, each attendant was asked to contribute 1 cent for each year of age.

Big Timber Tract Sold at Auction

Chambers-Clopper Survey of 18,830 Acres Bought.

Harrisonburg, Va., Feb. 23 (Spl.). The Chambers-Clopper timberland survey, extending from Rawley Springs to the foothills of the Shenandoah Mountains in Rockingham, containing 18,830 acres, was sold at public auction today for $22,500, or $1.20 per acre.

Royall E. Cabell, of Richmond, acting for other parties, bought the tract of timber, which cuts into the George Washington National Forest like a wedge. Similar land in the mountains west of Rockingham brought $3.17 an acre when purchased by the Federal Government for National Forest purposes.

Across the Shenandoah Valley, Blue Ridge Mountain land, now being bought for the Shenandoah National Park, is bringing on an average of $11 an acre.

Medal Is Sought For Dead Youth

Roanoke, Va., Feb. 23 (Spl.).—An effort will be made to have Walter Fisher, 22, who was drowned in Carvin's Cove Sunday while attempting to rescue his companion who had fallen through the ice, cited for a Carnegie medal. Data for the request are being prepared by the Roanoke life saving and first aid crew.

Fisher and his companion, Roy Scott, 20, both of Roanoke, had left several companions in an automobile and ventured upon the thin ice. Scott was the first to break through, and Fisher sought to reach his struggling companion with a stick, when the ice gave way again. Both were drowned.

Radio Explosion Mystifies Owner

Bristol, Va., Feb. 23 (Spl.). A radio exploded yesterday at the home of H. L. Smith, Piedmont avenue, and today the unusual accident was still a mystery.

The radio, a cabinet model, burst open with a noise like a shotgun and with such force, Mr. Smith said, that it blew a heavy vase across the room and cracked open the top of the radio cabinet.

Postal Employes Dine at Frederick

150 From Four Counties Hear David J. Lewis.

Frederick, Md., Feb. 23 (Spl.).—About 150 persons, including postal workers from Frederick, Washington, Carroll and Montgomery counties, attended the first annual dinner of the Service Relations Council of Postal Employes here last night. In the absence of Irving S. Biser, postmaster of this city, Roy McK. Harris, assistant, was toastmaster.

Representative David J. Lewis, known as the father of the parcel post and author of the Maryland workmen's compensation act, explained the industrial insurance act. Joseph D. Baker, banker, paid a tribute to Mr. Lewis.

Mayor Elmer F. Munshower welcomed the visitors and remarks were made by Mrs. F. K. Markline, National secretary of the Ladies Auxiliary of the Letter Carriers' Association; James Murray, Hampstead postmaster; C. M. Dixon, postmaster at Brunswick, and Francis M. Petrott, of this city.

Forger Sentenced For Having Checks

Gets 8 Years, Although He Did Not Cash Any.

Roanoke, Va., Feb. 23 (Spl.). Found guilty of forgery, Louis E. McGowen, alias James R. Owens, alias John L. Ward, was sentenced here to eight years in the penitentiary. Three other indictments against him are yet to be disposed of.

McGowen was arrested several weeks ago and several checks bearing a cashier's stamp were found on him. In his baggage at a hotel, police found rubber stamps, other checks and several letters addressed to him under other names.

Although he had not passed any checks here, the prosecution contended that mere possession of the paraphernalia proved his guilt.

Fathers and Sons Dine.

Waynesboro, Pa., Feb. 23 (Spl.). Fully 250 fathers and sons joined in the sixteenth annual banquet in the Waynesboro Y. M. C. A. last night.

Town Menaced As Fire Razes Two Residences

2 Other Buildings Suffer Before Winchester Fighters Arrive.

Winchester, Va., Feb. 23 (Spl.).—Fanned by a strong northwest wind, a blaze, originating in a defective chimney, destroyed two homes at the little village of Grimes, near here, today and menaced the town until volunteer fighters from Winchester got the fire under control.

The fire originated at the home of James L. Grimes. Fanned by the wind, the blaze quickly razed the house, and only a few personal effects were saved. The loss was estimated at $2,500.

Flying embers ignited the home of D. L. Affleck, which also was destroyed before more than half of the household goods could be carried out. The loss was placed at $3,500.

The Sarah Zane Fire Company truck and a band of volunteers arrived when the fire had spread to the combined general store and postoffice of A. S. Orndorff, and the home of Nelson and Charles Hensell. Hampered by extreme cold, the firemen saved both the store and home. About $500 damage was done to the Hensell home and $1,000 to the store.

A. R. Arnold Loses Dwelling in Blaze

Former Arundel Official Sets Loss at $10,000.

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 23 (Spl.). Fire of undetermined origin last night destroyed the ten-room frame dwelling of Alton R. Arnold, former treasurer of Anne Arundel County, at Revell Station. The $10,000 loss is partly covered by insurance.

Flames were bursting from several parts of the house when discovered by neighbors, during a heavy rain. Volunteer firemen from West Annapolis and Annapolis responded, but found the fire out of control.

None of the family was in the house. Mr. and Mrs. Arnold, who had been visiting relatives in Virginia, had planned to return last night. It was believed the fire may have been started by some one taking shelter in the house.

Pay Restoral Awaits Vote On Office Bill

White House Is Worried Over New Contest on Veteran Benefits.

Pay restorationists marked time on Capitol Hill yesterday awaiting passage of the independent offices appropriation bill and final word from the President on the Senate's 41-to40 vote restoring Government salaries effective July 1.

Vice President Garner and Senator James F. Byrnes (Democrat), of South Carolina, who had charge of the bill on the Senate floor, conferred with the President at the White House during the afternoon but neither would comment. At the White House it was said the discussion revolved around "politics."

Politics" has been brought directly into the pay fight by the vigorous espousal of the Federal workers' cause by Republicans in both House and Senate, in the face of Administration opposition to full restoration. Of the 41 votes by which the Senate adopted the McCarren full payment, only 13 were Democrats and one a Farmer-Laborite.

Veteran Fight Looms.

Without support of the small Republican minority the Government workers would have been given only the five and five program approved by the committee and the President. This provided for restoration of 5 per cent effective February 1 and a similar amount July 1.

What will be done about increasing benefits to veterans, however, is said to be of greater concern to the Administration than the outcome of the pay fight. Politics has been brought into that question too, by Republican espousal of the veterans' cause and the fight is to be resumed when the Senate meets again Monday.

The independent offices appropriation bill, carrying the pay and economy provisions, is expected to be sent to the House by Tuesday. Immediately it gets there a motion to concur in the Senate pay restoration amendment is expected to be made. That motion will have precedence.

Full Restoration Seen.

Representative Joseph W. Byrns, of Tennessee, Democratic leader, has predicted a majority of the House will vote for full restoration. Representative Bertrand H. Snell, of New York, Republican leader, has made the same prediction. The Republicans will line up almost solidly on the question.

The outcome is expected to hinge on how determined the President is in opposing restoration. House leaders said they had received no word on the subject and did not expect any until the Senate had completed action.

There is a possibility the restoration vote may be reconsidered in the Senate, but Senator Joseph T. Robinson, of Arkansas, Democratic leader, and Senator Byrnes denied knowledge of such a plan. Reconsideration could be moved by a Senator who voted for the McCarran amendment or by one who was not present. But the motion must be made within two days. Monday will be the last day.

Cue and Curtain Play March 1, 2

Its second play of the season, "Three-Cornered Moon," will be presented by Cue and Curtain, dramatic organization of George Washington University, at Wardman Park Theater, March 1 and 2.

Performances will begin at 8:30 p. m. The three-act comedy, by Gertrude Tonkonogy, was produced on Broadway last season. Constance Connor Brown, director of dramatics at George Washington, is in charge.

Capital's First Probation Meet Is Slated Today

Mrs. Roosevelt to Attend; Speakers to Discuss Improvement Plan.

Washington's first probation conference will be held today, with Mrs. Roosevelt the guest of honor at a luncheon at the Admiral.

The conference has been called to discuss methods of improving the probation system in the District. Dr. Frederic W. Perkins, president of the Council of Social Agencies, will preside. Sanford Bates, director of the Bureau of Prisons, will speak on "Probation in the Correctional Process."

The afternoon meeting will be presided over by Joel Moore, supervisor of the probation system of the Department of Justice. This session will be at the United States Chamber of Commerce. The speakers will be Representative Carl D. F. Weideman, of Michigan; Joseph Murphy, chief probation officer of Essex County, N. J., and Dr. Loren T. Johnson, of the iDstrict Board of Indeterminate Sentence and Parole.

A dinner meeting will be held at the Admiral at 7 p. m. with Bates presiding. Speakers include Assistant Attorney General Joseph B. Keenan, Judge Joseph N. Ulman Ulman, of Baltimore, and Dr. William A. White, superintendent of St. Elizabeth's Hospital.

The probation conference was arranged by a committee consisting of Ray L. Huff, chairman; Miss Mary Coulson, secretary; Judge Jesse C. Adkins, Mrs. Jesse C. Adkins, Judge Fay L. Bentley, Maj. Ernest W. Brown, Dr. Frank W. Ballou, Walter Davidson, Adjt. Gilbert Decker, Joseph E. Dayton, Mrs. Henry Gratton Doyle, Mrs. Ray H. Everett, Miss Jeanette Ezekiels, Charles M. Fyfe, J. S. Repeater

Representative Powers' Car Gone Once More.

Lightning may not strike twice in the same place but auto thieves do, Representative D. Lane Powers (Republican), of New Jersey, has learned.

Exactly three weeks from Thursday night at 7:30 o'clock he left his office and found that his car had been stolen from in front of the new House Office Building. He had left the keys in the car.

Police recovered the car a few days later but not the keys. Thursday, Powers parked his car in the same spot and left his office last night to find the car gone again.

"Last time the thieves kindly locked the doors when they abandoned the car," he observed. "I hope they'll put some air in the rear tires this time."

Police Say Two Confess Holdup

Store Employe 'Phoned Bandit Before Theft, Is Charge.

Two butchers yesterday were accused in the hold-up last week of a Sanitary Grocery branch at 1607 Foxhill road northwest, after detectives declared the men had signed confessions.

Daniel B. Vick, 29, of 1921 Thirty-fifth place northwest, employe of the robbed store, confessed, police said, that he called Forney R. Briley, 29, of 1124 Lamont street northwest, on the telephone just before the hold-up, after which Briley went to the store in a taxicab and at pistol point robbed Jesse O'Dooley, manager, of $425 in cash and checks, while Vick looked on.

A taxicab driver, George Chism, identified Briley as the man who hired him to drive to a point near the hold-up an dwait. Chism later told police he drove Briley away, not knowing of the hold-up.

Thomas M. Lillard, 58, Dead at Cumberland

Cumberland, Md., Feb. 23 (Spl.). Thomas M. Lillard, 58, supervisor for the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad shops here, died yesterday after a year's illness.

He is survived by two daughters, Mrs. Lee Ginniman and Mary Margaret Lillard, and the following brothers and sisters: W. E. Lillard, Erie, Pa.; E. P. Lillard, Luray, Va.; Grover C. Lillard, this city; Mrs. Virginia Webb, Westernport, and Mrs. Etta Burnett, Middletown, Ohio.

Davis Assails 12-Hour Shift At Gallinger

Pennsylvania Senator Says Hospital Staff Should Work Eight Hours.

The 12-hour work day required of graduate nurses and male attendants at Gallinger Hospital was described as "intolerable" by Senator James J. Davis (Republican), of Pennsylvania, yesterday.

"The employment of 10 additional graduate nurses and 30 more orderlies would remedy this condition and make possible an eight-hour shift," Senator Davis said. "This is a reasonable request and one which is in accord with every theory and ideal of good busines and government.

"There is no just reason why these hospital workers, particularly women graduate nurses, should be required to work on a 12-hour shift at Gallinger Hospital when the eight-hour shift is in effect at St. Elizabeths Hospital. With the large number of nurses who are unemployed, and with the burdens consequent to their profession, there is every reason why some immediate adjustment should be made."

New Appeal Board Of NRA Wins Nye

Senator Praises Personnel After Roosevelt Visit.

Senator Gerald P. Nye, Progressive Republican, of North Dakota, who has been outspoken in his criticisms of the NRA, yesterday expressed himself well pleased with the organization of a board to protect small business within the Recovery Administration.

He discussed its functions with President Roosevelt, following which he told newsmen he was highly gratified both with the new appeal advisory board, to provide a check against monopolies under codes, and its personnel, which includes Clarence Darrow.

City Schools Picture Rum True Demon

Textbooks Denounce All Time-Honored Virtues.

Law Orders Instruction by Reading, Lecture in All Grades.

Repeal not to the contrary, Old John Barleycorn still will be pictured to District school children as the great bogey man of success.

Whiskey will be described as a menace equaled only by typhoid fever and small pox. Its medicinal value will be condemned as nonexistant.

"The teaching of the effects of alcohol on the human system will continue to be taught as it has always been," Superintendent of Schools Frank W. Ballou told a Post reporter yesterday, " no more and no less."

To determine just what has been and what will continue to be taught Washington children about a beverage that legally will be available to their parents within a few days, the text books on biology and health used in hte elementary, junior high and senior high schools were exmained.

When a child enters the first grade he is told that alcohol is a dangerous stimulant which puts the imbiber partly to sleep.

No Drinker Is Free.

"No one who is under the influence of liquor is a free man," the textbook for the lower grades observes.

When a pupil leaves elementary school he will have learned that if "alcohol is taken habitually in any quantity whatever" it will have the following results:

Threatens the physical structure of the stomach, liver, kidneys, heart, blood vessels, nerves, brain. Lessens one's power to work in any field, physical, intellectual or artistic. Lowers the grade of the mind, dulling higher senses and "taking the edge off morals." Lessens one's chanes of maintaining health and living to an old age.

Law Orders Teaching.

This instruction is augmented by a law enacted in 1886 which provides that the effects of alcohol and narcotics must be taught both orally and with text books in District schools.

The junior high school student is taught that the value of alcohol as a food is a bugaboo. The pupil then is told that the theory that alcohol is valuable as a medicine is untrue. Resolutions of the American Medical Association are included in the text to support this contradiction.

Cold Cure Derided.

Whisky as a cure for colds is offered as another highly mistaken belief to the junior high school boys and girls. Whisky not only fails to cure colds, the are shown, but the imbiber is more apt to catch one.

With this knowledge, the junior high graduate enters senior school.

It may be some time before he hears anything more about alcohol in a classroom because the subject is not treated in his biology book until the final chapters. But he will receive a full exposition of the effects of strong drink on the nerve tissues and behavior. He will find that a man under the influence "carries out the impulses of a disordered mind." Speech and sight centers are attacked, muscles are next affected, and, finally, "breathing is interfered with, the heart action partially or wholly paralyzed and the condition of dead drunkedness or even death ensues."

Alcohol kills more people than typhoid, and fifteen times as many as smallpox, in the United States every year, the senior high boys and girls discover.

Man-Eating "Lily" From Ocean Deep

Post Staff Photos.

Miss Mary Wallace, an employe of the Smithsonian Institution, contemplates the wondrous crinoid, or "sea lily" which came from the Puerto Rican deep. A hundred and fifty million years ago it was in its heyday, but now only 700 species are left. Crinoids are animals which look like plants, are brilliantly colored, live on tiny sea creatures which they paralyze with poison before eating and, when brought up from the bottom, are inclined to break themselves to pieces.

Parley of D. C. Head, Senate Group Planned

Commissioner to Give Reports on Proposed Legislation.

District legislation to be pushed for enactment during the present session will be discussed at a meeting of the Senate District Committee and the District Commissioners at 10 a. m., Tuesday in the committee room in the Capitol.

Invitation to attend the meeting was extended the Commissioners by Senator William H. King (Democrat), of Utah, committee chairman. The committee wants a report from the Commissioners on various legislative proposals.

Revision of the existing District tax system may be discussed along with other measures. House members are known to have requested action by the Senate committee on local tax measures.

No definite list of measures which are to be considered has been prepared, Senator King said, and direction of discussion of proposed legislation may be largely dictated by the Commissioners.

Among proposals which are expected to be discussed are pending measures providing for old age pensions, recording of deeds and mortgages, measures which might be taken to improve conditions in the milk industry, the forthcoming report on the District bread investigation, regulation of the real estate business, several street bills, increase in the powers of the Commissioners, alley closing and others.

Hebrews Observe Purim Thursday

Feast Is One of Faiht's Most Joyous.

Purim, one of the most joyous holidays in the Hebrew calendar, will be celebrated in Washington synagogues and reformed congregations next Thursday. The feast day commemorates deliverance of the Jews in Persia by Queen Esther.

Principals of the story are Haman, prime minister of the realm; Mordecai, who incurred his hatred by refusing Haman homage, and Queen Esther, the king's Jewish consort. Haman's attempts to have the king order the Jews killed were frustrated by Esther and he was hanged, Mordecai being elevated to the post of prime minister.

For cenutries the holiday has been celebrated by reading of the Book of Esther, or "Megillah," in the synagogues and performances of biblical plays and masquerades.

6-Year D. C. Road, Bridge Plan Offered

Board of Trade Groups Oppose Smith Bill to Divert Fuel Taxes.

A $15,500,000 bridge and highway program, which would be financed by the District's 2-cent gasoline tax revenues, was announced yesterday by Maj. John C. Gotwals, engineer commissioner, when he made public a six-year plan drafted by Highway Director H. C. Whitehurst.

Covering the six fiscal years after July 1, 1934, the program was submitted with the remark that it is "conservative and represents the very minimum requirements necessary to keep pace with growing traffic demands and provide adequate protection to existing structures."

"The fact that it is proposed to entirely finance the work and plan from the 2-cent gas tax fund warrants its approval," Capt. Whitehurst declared.

House Bill Protested.

A special joint meeting of the bridge and highway committees of the Board of Trade was held yesterday to consider the 35-page report presented by the District highway director. They adopted a joint motion protesting the diversion of gasoline tax funds to other highway projects, as proposed in a bill now pending in the House.

A committee was named to presetn arguments against the bill, sponsored by Representative Howard W. Smith (Democrat) of Virginia, at hearings next week.

The si-year plan, successor to the five-year plan, which has been followed since 1930, provides for expenditure of $3,250,000 for bridge replacement and grade crossing projects; $1,750,000 for development of main highways, $500,000 for street widening, and approximately $10,000,000 for operation of the street and bridge divisions ,including personnel.

Virginia U. and Duke Boxers Lead Southern Conference Fighting

Cavaliers Win Four Of First Five Tests In Ring Tournament

Webb, Maryland, Beaten Hahn Opens Fighting With Knockout.

By Bill McCormick.
(Post Staff Correspondent.)

MEMORIAL Gymnasium, University Virginia, Feb. 23.—Glove tossers of Duke University weer gradually creeping up on the front-runnig Virginia squad as the first day of the Southern conference tournament here slimmered towards a conclusion. The Cavaliers still led with four bouts to their credit, but Duke was a close second with three wins, boosted from two when Leroy Sides defeated Nat Lumpkin, of North Carolina, on a second-round technical knockout.

North Carolina, North Carolina State and V. M. I. weer tied for third place with two wins and V. P. I. and South Carolina each had one triumph to their credit. Walter Webb, the sole Maryland performer to show, failed to produce his usual brand of fisticufling and went down to defeat before stiff opposition.

Virginia suffered it's first defeat in the 135-pound class when Lewis Bosher, the student with the highest scholastic average in the school, lacked te stamina to resist a whirlwind attack from Capt. Eddie Bain, of V. M. I., Bain's victory was the first scored by his school.

Cavedo Gains Decision.

V. M. I. chalked up its first victory of the day in the first bout of the evening session in which Willie Cavedo took an undecisive decision from Ernest Eustis of Carolina. Both boys missed frequently and there was little on which to base the decision excepting that Cavedo moved about the ring more expeditiously than did the loser.

J. E. Altman, of Clemson, and Jimmy Williams, of Carolina, staged a pretty slugger-boxer duel with Williams, the slugger, coming out of the ring with the decision by a hair's breadth. Williams rocked the loser from stem to stern with a stiff right throughout the bout, but Altman fought back and almost evened matters.

Favorites triumphed with relentless regularity, and underdogs fell gamely by the wayside, as the thud of glove against cranium christened the annual tournament this afternoon before a crowd of 2,000. Virginia, the defending champion, and favored to retain its diadem, scored the largest number of wins in the afternoon matches with each of its four delegates performing in the opening bouts winning. Duke University also scored unanimously with two wins. Washington and Lee, North Carolina, North Carolina State and South Carolina each chalked up one victory, and the sole performers for Clemson and V. M. I. failed to produce. No Maryland boxers were scheduled to appear in the afternoon bouts.

Hahn Stops Henley.

Following a custom that is fast becoming a tradition, Archie Hahn, Virginia's defending bantamweight champion, quickly gave the Cavaliers a win in the opening bout by scoring a clean knockout over Murray Henley, of Clemson.

Henley started in a manner that presaged grief in Charlottesville, hitting hard and often and deftly evading the Virginian's left jab to take the initial round by a decisive margin.

Hahn woke up in the second, catching the opposition with a hard right that caused him to fold slowly for a nine count. He rose only to run into a flurry from which emerged a hard right that landed so hard it shook the rafters at Monticello. There was no need for the referee to count over the prostrate Clemson battler, who was out cold.

Onisko Beats Gamecock.

Vincent Onisko, Duke 115-pounder, pounded out a clean win over Lorenzo Taylor, of South Carolina, in another bantamweight bout. Onisko, a reformed college wrestler, performed very much in the manner of another wrestler who once turned boxer—Paul Berlenbach. He kept up a continuous fire at the enemy, telegraphing each blow, but somehow managing to land most of them.

Taylor showed greater boxing skill and threw his punches, straighter, but he was unable to overcome the aggressive spirit of the pint-sized gamecock. Both boys were punched out at the final bell, but Taylor had tired quicker, allowing the Duke battler to pile up the necessary lead.

Rainey Outpoints Davies.

The loser was always dangerous, several times lashing back with jarring rights that almost terminated the contest in his favor, but

Racing Voted By House in Virginia

First Test, to Set Up Commission, Passed by 54-43 Vote.

Bills Now Go to Senate, Where Fate of Both Is Uncertain.

Both proposals now go to the Senate, where their fate is most uncertain. Few senators have given any thought to the issue because they expected overwhelming rejection by the House.

Observers believed the decisive House action would strengthen prospects for Senate passage. It was generally agreed that turf lobbyists were putting up the most stubborn fight seen in the Assembly since the heyday of the Antisaloon League.

Delegate J. T. Coleman, jr., Augusta, an opposition leader, contended the House vote demonstrated the power of an organized minority.

The next round in the legislative warfare will come Tuesday when the Senate finance committee conducts a public hearing on the measures.

Predicts Passage.

Delegate Wilbur C. Hall, Leesburg, author, predicted Senate approval by a substantial majority. He viewed the House vote as reflecting public opinion and as showing the relative strength of track supporters and unyielding clergymen.

Senator Cecil Connor, Leesburg, will manage the bills in the upper house. He already has obtained the support of Senator Aubrey G. Weaver, Front Royal, an administration spokesman.

The bills would permit establishment of three tracks. Charlottesville, Alexandria and Virginia Beach have been suggested as probable locations. Local option elections would be necessary.

Racing would be limited to 100 days a year. Each track would be a mile in length with minimum purses of $600. The State would get 3 per cent of an 8 per cent parimutuel "take," with the remainder to be spent on purses and operation. The State also would receive a 10 per cent admissions tax.

Revenue Estimate.

Hall estimated State revenue would range between $225,000 and $750,000 a year. He stressed the fact that a three-man commission would have broad regulatory powers, including supervision over owners, trainers and jockeys.

"One thing you can be sure of," he declared, "is there won't be any bootleg tracks."

Vote on Measure.

BonthronFaces Cunningham Tonight

Star Milers Seek National A.A.U. 1,500 Meter Title; Venzke Dark Horse.

NEW YORK, Feb. 23 (AP).—Glenn Cunningham, Gene Venzke and Bill Banthron will have their last chance to see which is the best man tomorrow night in the "Olympic mile" of the National indoor track and field championships in Madison Square Garden.

Their paths will not cross again in competition if Bonthron holds to his intention of competing only in dual track meets and the intercollegiates, to which Cunningham is not eligible as a Kansas student.

Princeton Bill won the first test last Saturday in the Baxter mile of the N. Y. A. C. games in the Garden, nosing out Cunningham, with Venzke a step behind in a breathless finish, which had the 15,000 spectators in a frenzy of enthusiasm.

Superiority Doubted.

His margin of victory was so close, however, that there still remains a question of superiority among the three, and especially at 1,500 meters, the distance of the championship, or 120 yards short of the mile.

There are some, among them Daniel J. Ferris, A. A. U. secretary-treasurer, who has been looking at foot races long enough to know who believe it will be Venzke's turn to win with Cunningham or Bonthron in the runner-up role. The Pennsylvania sophomore ran his best race in two years last Saturday, and appears to be back near the form of 1932, when he set the indoor mile record of 4:10 and the 1,500-meter mark of 3:53.4. They believe the shorter distance is more suited to the long-legged youngster from Pottstown.

Trained in Capital.

Cunningham remained in the East this week, foregoing the long train trip to and from Lawrence, Kans., which might have taken some of his stamina from him last Saturday and has been carefully training at Washington, D. C., under the watchful eye of Roland Logan, of George Washington University.

College and Club stars from all over the country are gathered for the climax event of the winter season and the running events competed in meters for only the second time.

Shea to Referee In Carnera Bout

Florida Commission Picks Six-Foot Official.

Miami, Fla., Feb. 23 (AP).—Leo Shea, a stocky six-footer, was named referee for the Carnera-Loughran heavyweight title scrap here February 28, by the Miami Boxing Commission today, when the fighters' managers were unable to agree on a choice.

Shea, one of the three available licensed referees, has been deciding fistic encounters here for the past four years. The two judges required by Florida boxing rules will be named at 2 p. m. on fight day.

Woodstock Schedules Ring and Mat Matches

Woodstock, Va., Feb. 23 (Spl.).—Sport fans of Shenandoah County will be introduced to boxing and wrestling matches here March 7, when a card will be sponsored by the Woodstock Athletic Club. The matches will be held in the old skating rink.

Three boxing mathches and one wrestling match have been scheduled. The main boxing bout will be the amateur middleweight championship of Shenandoah County, in which Bill Allen, 170 pounds, is scheduled to meet Alfred Coby, 165 pounds. Other boxing bouts thus far scheduled included the amateur junior middleweight championship of Shenandoah County, with Paul Shaver, 150 pounds, meeting Lee Bushong, 160 pounds, and a match between Young Keller, 155 pounds, and Pete Sassier, 160 pounds.

W. & L. Grid Card For '34 Announced

Wofford Is Signed for Opener Sept. 22.

Lexington, Va., Feb. 23 (Spl.).—With the signing of Wofford College, of Spartanburg, S. C., for a game here September 22, announced today by Richard A. Smith, director of athletics, the Washington and Lee football schedule for 1934 is complete.

The addition of this contest gives the Generals a ten-game schedule and settles the matter of an opening date, which has been hanging fire for more than two months, while officials considered the advisability of a nine-game schedule starting with the Kentucky game in Lexington, Ky., September 29.

The complete schedule:

September 22, Wofford College, at Lexington; 29, Kentucky, at Lexington, Ky.

October 6, Maryland, at Lexington; 13, West Virginia, at Charleston, W. Va.; 20, Princeton, at Princeton; 27, Virginia Tech, at Lexington.

Part of Albany Squad Trains in Martinsville

Martinsville, Va., Feb. 23 (Spl.).—Joe C. Cambria, president of the Albany Club of the International League, was in Martinsville today where he conferred with local business men, making necessary arrangements to bring a part of the Albany squad here for spring training.

Satisfactory arrangements were made for hotel lodging and use of the local baseball field during the three weeks' training period, beginning March 25, and continuing through April 15. Fourteen young baseball players, under the direction of John Weiland, scout and coach of the Albany Club, will report here for spring training activities, while the remainder of the squad will report at Barnwell, S. C., for early training.

Stengel to Pilot Brooklyn for Two Years

Signs $10,000 Contract; Promises Club Will Play Entertainingly.

NEW YORK, Feb. 23 (AP).—Charles D. (Casey) Stengel, colorful exponent of the type of baseball that appeals to Flatbush fans, was engaged today to succeed the deposed Max Carey as manager of the Brooklyn Baseball Club. He signed a two-year contract at a reported salary of $10,000 a year.

The hiring of the sagacious, capricious Casey was accomplished without the usual ceremony attending such affairs. Stephen W. McKeever, the club's president, was at home suffering from grip, and the team's general manager, J. A. Robert Quinn, was in bed with an attack of pleurisy. So the good natured veteran of 24 years in the sport, unannounced and all alone, ambled into a room full of sports writers and smilingly told them he'd signed up.

Strictly Brooklyn.

Thus Brooklyn rooters appear assured of getting back the bizarre brand of baseball that Carey in two seasons failed to deliver and with which Stengel is familiar through his eight years' connection with the team—six years as an outfielder and the other two as coach.

"And that's the big job cut out for me—to get the fellows to play entertainingly," Casey said.

"What about the title, 'the daffiness boys,' that has been given the team?" he was asked.

"I don't give a hoot if they're daffy or screwy, so long as they play winning baseball," Stengel replied earnestly.

For the nonce he expects to work with the material on hand. He tabled the suggestion of immediate trades. The only immediate change he has in mind is the elevation of Chick Frasier, who scouted for the club last year, to his own former post as coach. Stengel indicated that Otto Miller, former Brooklyn catcher and a coach under Carey, although to date unsigned, would be retained on his staff.

Woodberry Staves Off Swavely Quintet's Rally

Woodberry Forest, Va., Feb. 23 (Spl.).—The Woodberry Forest quintet successfully withstood a last quarter rally on the part of the visitors to defeat Swavely School here today, 31 to 25.

After tratiling at the turn, the locals forged ahead on shots by Jones and Barrow to a 10-point lead at the close of the third period. Walter and Avery led the visitors' rally, which was checked by the final whistle.

New Orleans, Feb. 23 (AP).—The Southland Stable's Petite Julie, winner of only one race last year as a 2-year-old and beaten in three starts this year, today found her racing legs and stepped away from a field of 3-year-olds in the 6-furlong claiming feature at the Fair Grounds.

C. U. Carnival Draws 350 Tonight

Ryan 1,000, Abbey Dash Outstanding Events in Third Games.

AFTER a lapse of one year, spiked shoes, humming a defiant song of youth and speed, again will cut into the boards tonight at Brookland, where Catholic University is staging the third annual renewal of its track carnival. The first group of runners will leave their mark at 8 o'clock, and from then on until near midnight there will be action.

Abandoned last year because of financial stringencies, tonight's games promise to exceed in brilliance their predecessors. Approximately 35 men, representing most o fthe local schools and representative institutions of the South and East, will compete. High and prep schools are heavily presented also.

Two Feature Events.

Featuring the games are two races, the "Ryan 1,000" and Abbey Club 50-yard dash, both invitational affairs which will find the cream of this section competing. Jack Hickey, running for the host school two years ago, hung up the existing record for the Ryan, 2:20 4-5, a mark that surpassed the time made by Ray Conger the year previous. Another C. U. runner, Johnny Lyons, made the record for the Abbey Club, 50, 5 2-5 seconds. Both marks will be in danger tonight.

But there are other events on the program certain to produce thrills and to captivate the audience. Grover Everett, a former Eastern High School luminary who last week equalled the world record for the 50-yard low hurdles, will attempt to better this effort. The meet record for this event, 6 1-5 seconds, made by Ed Finkelstein, of Washington and Lee in 1932, is almost certain to fall.

Syracuse May Get Jersey City Club

Jersey City, N. J., Feb. 23 (AP).—The Jersey City bugaboo which has harassed the International baseball League directors for the last two years, cropped up again today when Jack Corbett, president of the Jersey City Club, announced he would ask permission to transfer the local franchise to Syracuse, N. Y.

Lack of satisfactory playing facilities was given as the reason for the shift, permission for which will be asked of the league drectors at a meeting in New York Saturday. Corbett said he would acquaint the Jersey City directors with the facts tomorrow, but anticipated no opposition from that source.

"It isn't that we want to leave Jersey City," said Corbett. "It's merely that we have no place to play ball here and Syracuse has offered a mighty fine proposition."

Leaves Virginia

COACH FRED DAWSON.

Dawson Quits As Virginia Coach

Tebell Appointed Chief of Grid Staff, Council Announces.

UNIVERSITY, Va., Feb. 23 (Spl.).—The resignation of Fred T. Dawson as head footcoach of the University of Virginia was announced today following a meeting of the 3-3-3 athletic council. Elevation of Gus K. Tebell from assistant coach to head coach of the Cavaliers was also announced.

Dawson's resignation is the culmination of an alumni movement directed at a change in the athletic regime at the university. He had been under fire in company with Athletic Director James Driver, whose removal was also sought, but Dawson's resignation is believed in many quarters to have diminished the hopes of Driver's opponents.

Met With Students.

The developments today were announced by William H. White, of Washington, chairman of the athletic council, following his meeting with the 3-3-3 committee, composed of three students, three alumni and three members of the faculty.

While no statement was made concerning the terms of Dawson's resignation, it is believed that arrangements were made to pay up his contract at a $6,500 salary which was to run through 1934.

Tebell From Wisconsin.

Tebell, a former Wisconsin all-American end, came to Charlottesville in 1930 as assistant to Head Coach Earl Abell, who preceded Dawson. Prior to coming to Virginia, Tebell was head coach at North Carolina State.

The movement to oust Dawson and Driver was sponsored by the "V" Club, an organization of Virginia alumni, which charged mismanagement of athletics and sought to combine the posts of athletic director and head coach. A scheduled meeting of the "V" Club tomorrow is expected to develop further details on the situation.

Group Is Named to Recodify Southern Conference Rules

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va., Feb. 23 (AP).—A sub-committee empowered to recodify the by-laws and constitution of the Southern Conference worked today on its report to made to the full membership at tomorrow morning's final session of the conference.

This committe, named zy President C. P. Miles after unanimous consent had been granted, wrestled with proposals that fundamental eligibility requirements be retained but that individual schools be granted wider authority in determination of local policies.

Meanwhile, the conference basket ball committee had picked the eight teams to participate in the March tournament at Raleigh.

South Carolina's powerful Gamecoks were seeded first by the committee. North Carolina was seeded second, Maryland, third and Duke fourth. Clemson and Virginia Tech were the two teams eliminated from the tournament.

Additions Doubtful.

There was no mention on the floor of the possibility that the conference might take in new members at his annual meeting. Several influential members said after adjournment of today's session, however, that they doubted that any additions would be made this year to the ten-team loop. Other members withheld comment.

Schools in Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina and Kentucky have at one time or another made overtrures to the conference and several of them made bids for recognition just before the conference assembled here.

W. H. Wannamaker, faculty chairman of Duke University and chairman of the sub-committe, said that none of its recommendations would be made public in advance of tomorrow's session. On the committee with him are Col. William Couper, of V. M. I.; H. C. Byrd, of Maryland; C. P. Nash, of Virginia, and Forrest Fletcher, of Washington and Lee.

Mr. Fletcher, secretary-treasurer of the conference, reported today that the basket ball tourney at Raleigh last year had netted $1,020 and th boxing tournament at the University of Virginia, $2,928.

Among proposals set for the subcommittee were conflicting recommendations as to the central booking office. One proposal would empower the booking office to appoint football officials for all games played in Southern Conference and Southeastern Conference territory, while another would abolish the booking office.

Spring Grid Drills.

The proposal of the executive committee (passed three to two, with one member not voting) that spring football practice be abolished, faced rough sledding on the conference floor, with opposition promised from several sources.

In appointing the recodifying sub-committee the conference indicated interest in retaining fundamental rules but permitting individual schools a wider range in the determination of local policies. H. C. Byrd, of the University of Maryland, in explaining the proposal, said he believed there were a number of regulations in the constitution which properly should be left to the determination of the several schools.

A nominating committee composed of Col. Couper, Mr. Nash and Mr. Byrd was named to bring in its recommendations for officers at tomorrow's meeting.

Augusta to Sponsor Annual Ring Tourney

Fort Defiance, Va., Feb. 23 (Spl.).—Augusta Military Academy will sponsor the ninth annual South Atlantic boxing tournament, to be held here Thursday and Friday, March 9 and 10, to decide the prep and high school champions of Maryland, Virginia, West Virginia, Tennessee, North Carolina and the District of Columbia.

The tourneys were held for the first six years at the University of Virginia. However, the seventh session was staged at Augusta Military Academy, and last year it was sponsored by Staunton Military Academy.

District Race Bill Sternly Opposed

Commissioners Decide Against Measure After eHaring.

Civic and ChurchGroups Cite Dangers; Few in Favor of Move.

AFTER hearing an avalanche of criticism against the Black bill, which aims to legalize horse and dog racing, the District Commissioners yesterday decided to file a unanimous report in opposition to the measure.

Simon Lane, representing the bricklayers, electrical workers, stonecutters, painters and building laborers' unions, presented a letter signed by these organizations, indorsing the bill's passage. Lane expressed the opinion that it would create work in the District. He added that the Allied Trades Council had not discussed the subject, but believed that it would indorse the move.

Bishop Edwin H. Hughes, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, condemned the bill as morally unsound, and decried the proposal to "tie the center of the Government of the United States to a gambling proposition."

Would Provide Work.

Frank E. James, president of the Benning Citizens Association, third witness to testify, stated that his group unanimously approved the measure on the ground that it would provide work for unemployed and a source of revenue for the District government. The association dispatched a letter to Chairman Mary Norton of the House District Committee, pointing out that gambling is prevalent in the city though illegal, and that the city government derives no revenue from it.

George E. Sullivan, representing the Federation of Citizens' Associations, opposed the bill and reported that such action had been voted by the federation at its last meeting. He said that betting has an appeal to youth and the criminal class is made up primarily of persons under 23 years of age. He was followed on the stand by Deets Pickett, well-known vice crusader, who spiritedly denounced the proposal.

Others who voiced their disapproval of the bill were Arthur L. Winn, jr., of the civic committee of the Washington Federation of Churches who said he represented 57,000 persons. Philip J. Murray, assistant pastor of Calvary Baptist Church, Mrs. Giles Scott Rafter, the only woman to testify; Rev. Charles H. Butler, secretary of the Lutheran Ministerial Association, and Willard A. Driggers, representing the Kenilworth Citizens' Association. Mr. Driggers reported that his organization wanted an airport on the site of the old Benning racetrack, which it feared would be restored if the Black bill passed. He said he believed the aviation fraternity to be of a higher type of people than the racing fraternity.

Cummings on Hand.

Andrew J. Cummings, president of the Laurel Racing Association, who appeared at the request of the Commisisoners to present information on racing, disapproved of dog racing, which is included in the bill.

"As to the moral proposition," he said, "if only those who don't take a drink and don't bet on a horse race reach the Promised Land I know that it will be a lonely place and I hope I never go there.

"At Laurel the track takes 3 per cent of money bet in the parimutuel machines for putting on the show. Ninety-five per cent goes back into the crowd. That doesn't break a man."

Commissioner Allen observed that if a man makes 20 bets he "would soon be broke."

"Oh, no," laughingly replied Cummings. "If he is losing he will be broke long before he makes 20 bets."

Cummings insisted that betting must be legalized if horse racing is to survive.

Maj. Henry Leonard, chairman of the executive committee of the American Remount Association, speaking for himself, approved anything that would improve the breed of horses. He did not favor the bill in its present form, which he characterized as not well drawn.

The Commissioners took the mat-

Happy Go Scores, Beating Jens Son, 114-1 Shot, by Two Lengths at Hialeah

Easy Winner Pays $5.10 Mutuel

Porter Rides a Double; Is Tied With Gilbert for Top Honors.

HIALEAH PARK, Feb. 23 (AP).—J. R. Buchanan's brown colt, Happy Go, a son of Happy Argo, that has been working sensationally, drew a heavy play and made good with a bang in the 6 furlongs of the St. Johns Purse here this afternoon. Although several very fast sprinters were included in the field of nine 3-year-olds, none was a match for the flying winner, which scored by two lengths in 1:11. Long-shot players nearly got rich when Jens Son, owned by L. M. Severson, finished second by five lengths and paid $108.20 for place. The Belair Stud's Zulu Lad was an easy third. Happy Go returned $5.10 and was the fourth well-played horse to win.

Florida Derby candidates in the field were Jens Son, Zulu Lad, Don Manuel and Shuffle On. Don Manuel received a play, but after a brief display of speed he dropped out of it.

Zulu Lad Tires.

The sandy-haired Lee Humphries had Happy Go off on his toes and thereafter the boy had little more to do than sit snug and save ground. Zulu Lad chased the pace for a half mile, swerved out while tiring and left the chase to Jens Son. Litzenberger shot this fellow through on the inside turning for home and the colt easily beat Zulu Lad. Jens Son, had he won, would have paid odds of $114.10 to $1.

Earl Porter caught up with Johnny Gilbert in the race for local riding honors when he rode the $5.04 favorite Wedding Ring to an easy victory in the opening dash. The combination scored by three lengths, Porter resigstering his twentieth success of the meeting. In High chased the pacemaker throughout and although holding on gamely to nose out Gibby's Choice, the gelding was no match for Wedding Ring.

Westys Duke Scores.

Gilbert came right baek in the second event, again to take the lead over Porter. The Kansas boy booted Westys Duke, an $11.60 for $2 chance, to a three-length score over Canobie Lake, with Earle Maxwell, a field horse, beaten a length for the place. Starter Cassidy did a good job with the flock of 17 maiden juveniles, getting them off to a fine start after only two minutes' wait.

Lady Reigh was much the best of the distance performers in the third. The daughter of Reigh Count scored in a gallop by 3 lengths for her second in a row and paid $7. Gilbert and Porter followed as named astride High Proof and Militia, 5 spans apart, respectively.

Double for Porter.

Porter gained a double and regained a tie with Gilbert by virtue of his driving triumph astride the heavily backed Fire Mask in the six furlongs of the fourth. The ally, Florida Derby hope of the Coldstream stud, made all her own pace under smooth handling and gamely stood off the strong stretch bid of Herowin to click by a length in the good time of 1:11 flat. Patchpocket made up ground once in his stride to finish a creditable third. Fire Mask paid $5.50.

Standout was a lightly regarded victor in the sixth contest. Coming with a rush under Jimmy Hunter's whip in the last sixteenth, the Catalan colt won going away by two lengths, returning $34.10. The other five horses wound up half lengths apart, with Clonard second and Terrier third.

Strange as It Seems —By John Hix

The whim of a despotic ruler caused construction of a railroad which was unsound economically and almost impossible from an engineering standpoint. The ruler was Czar Nicholas I of Russia, and the railroad was the St. Petersburg-Moscow line.

Plans were made for construction of such a railroad, and several tentative routes had been surveyed for the line. These plans were then laid before the emperor so that he might select the route he favored. Angered because any one dare tell him to choose one from among several, he answered by sticking his finger in an inkwell and tracing a line between the two terminal points of the proposed railroad. He ignored the territory in between and commanded that the line be built to follow the ink smudge he had made on the map.

Engineers found themselves powerless to change the ruler's will, and the road was built as ordered. It passed over desert lands, through swamp districts and over mountains, failing to touch upon any of the important towns along the way.

Dear Al: Hialeah Race Track, Feb. 23.

Jens Son, my sleeper in the fifth race, was a mere 114-1, and what a race this fellow ran to give Happy Go a whale of a battle and pay $108.20 to place! Three winners were clicked off by Bennings, Inc., however. Again we had the first and last races right, Wedding Ring supplying a $5.40 pay-off in the opener and Escadron paying a neat $10.40 in the finale. In between, Lady Reigh stepped down at $7, which made it a rather encouraging day. Clocker Mike is all het up about Peedeeque over at New Orleans tomorrow, and has bet me his supper money that I can't pick one to beat it. I'm taking Cherokee Sal. For tomorrow, these hold much promise. BILL.

First race—Quickly appears best suited in this sprint and comes to the race backed by a fast workout. Happy Scot ran something like his real race last out and will be dangerous among these. Steel is the possible medium of an upset.

Second race—I hate to keep hammering on Pardee, but I know this one can do it if capably ridden, even with such as Judge Schilling in the field. Traffic Judge has all his speed now and can be depended upon to make a race of it.

Third race—General A gets the Bennings stamp of approval in this sprint. Hhas fared well in Florida racing and is at tops. Fancy Flight and The Pelican for the other awards.

Fourth race—The entry of Forever Young and Sablin looks like the goods in the Nursery Stakes. Both have performed cleverly and worked well. Wise Prince and No Saint to take care of the others.

Fifth race—Monel gets a chunk of weight from Clarify and Sweeping Light and I expect them to run in that order. The Labrot representative has a way of staying in front when the world is out. Sabula, with 99 pounds, may embarrass some of the stars here.

Sixth race—Boy Valet is my special here. The Bradleyite is primed for tomorrow. Agrarian and Gay Joe to fight it out for the place and show.

Seventh race—Bright Beauty gets back on the turf course tomorrow and we shall see what we shall see. Fingal and Polo Bar for the rest. The last named is a sleeper from Sleepersville. Watch out!

Y. M. C. A. League.

One-Legged Court Player Averages 8 Points a Game

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., Feb. 23 (Spl.).—In Walter Lauter, former Chattanoga High School athlete, the Peerless Woolen Mills basket ball team of Rossville, Ga., probably has the only one-legged basket ball player in the world today.

Lauter has been a member of the Peerless team for the last two seasons, and he has played every minute of every game played by the team. This season he has an average of 8 points per game and the players he has guarded have averaged only 3 points per contest.

Lauter received an injury to his left knee when he was 12 years old and the leg was amputated just below the hip. He refused to give up basket ball, which he had taken up with a Sunday school team, and began learning to play with the aid of a crutch.

A year after the leg was amputated, Lauter was back as a regular member of the Sunday school team. He then went to Junior High School and after serving as substitute guard for one season, made the varsity team at that position.

Lauter later attended Chattanooga City High, and made four letters as football manager, four as baseball manager and the same number as a regular member of the swimming team.

Since he graduated from high school, Lauter has played on several championship independent basket ball teams. He is married and has one son.

The Peerless Woolen Mill team has played leading teams in practically every city of Georgia, Alabama and Tennessee.

WEDDING RING ran as if much the best. She broke fast, ran into lead, displayed good speed and drew away easily in stretch. IN HIGH was hard hustled along all the way and just saved the place. GIBBY'S CHOICE came from far back to take the show. He finished on inside. THE KING had plenty of speed and held on well. UPPERCUT closed a bid gap. ALL ROWES was outrun.

SECOND RACE—Three furlongs (straightaway); nursery course. Purse, $700; claiming price, $2,500. For maiden 2-year-olds. Start good. Won easily; place, same. Went to post at 2:55. Off at 2:57. Two-dollar mutuels paid—WESTYS DUKE, $11.60, $5.70, $5.00; CANOBIE LAKE, $10.70, $7.80; EARLE MAXWELL, $3.10.

WESTYS DUKE, a rapid breaker, was sent to the front early, drew away in final sixteenth and won nicely in hand. CANOBIE LAKE got away fast, showed good speed, and held on gamely. EARLE MAXWELL ran straight and performed creditably. MICKEYS MAN always well up. MANUAL ran a fair race. SPECS broke well, but dropped out of it. MISS FIREFLY finished gamely.

THIRD RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $800; claiming prices, $2,000 to $1,500. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place, same. Went to post at 3:25. Off at 3:26½. Stocks Retreat In Selling Due To Control Bill

Regulation Publicity Makes Traders Cautious; Sales, 2,296,238 Shares.

New York, Feb. 23 (AP).—The well-known line of least resistance was downward in today's stock market. After narrow irregularity through the early dealings prices turned lower during the afternoon and finished around the bottom, the general range of losses being 1 to approximately 5 points.

Selling was in moderate volume, but with the matter of market regulation getting wide publicity it was apparent that many operators had withdrawn pending clarification of the outlook, and support for some issues was rather thin.

Heaviness was well distributed, though aviation shares fared better than most other divisions. Sales totaled 2,296,238 shares.

Packing Equities Weaken.

Packing company equities weakened from the start, reflecting the Department of Agriculture's inquiry into alleged price-fixing. Armour of Illinois preferred and Wilson preferred which were down, respectively, 4⅛ and 6½ points net.

Aircrafts were kept in fairly good spirits by reports that efforts would be made to give the mail flying back to the commercial companies. Some tobaccos apparently liked the higher January cigarette production. Liggett & Myers "B" having an extreme rise of a couple of points.

Preholiday favorites in the lowller quotation brackets acted less enthusiastically. Motors of this description may have been a bit disturbed by news of labor difficulties in one manufacturing and one accessory plant.

The recenttly strong Studebaker backed up a point, but Packard resisted. Higher priced automotives failed to follow an early spurt by Chrysler, which put that leader across 60 to a new high since 1929. It finished with a net loss of 2 and General Motors was down more than 1.

American Telephone made a good start, but subsided. Steels, farm impements, rails and many of the recently favored specialties looked a bit tired, while Rayon issues were rather substantial losers.

U. S. Smelting and Industrial Rayon dipped around 5 each. Union Pacific's net loss was 4½ and Libbey-Owens-Ford softened nearly 4. Douglas Aircraft eased on omission of the dividend, but United rallied.

Commodities Act Well.

Commodity markets acted well during much of the day, but lost spirit later. Silver futures had another rally as bar metal was marked up one-quarter cent an ounce.

Foreign exchange dealings were uneventful. Dollars made little change against the gold currencies, though they rallied in terms of sterling. The Bank of France showed a substantial decrease in the amount of gold withdrawals, which was in line with forecasts.

Unfavorable weather, as usual, has had an adverse effect on retail distribution, but Dun & Bradstreet's, in accounting for the slower pace of trade, also mentions the beginning of CWA demobilization. Comparisons with a year ago remain highly favorable, and the agency looks for early alleviation of some of the factors which contributed to the pause in the advance.

Robey's Review

Finance Economics Business

Whitney Testimony Throws Into Clear Relief Whether Purpose of Bill Is Reform and Regulation or Virtual Elimination of Exchanges.

By Ralph West Robey.

Richard Whitney's testimony on the Fletcher stock exchange bill brings squarely to the front whether the purpose of this measure is to regulate these organizations or virtually to force them out of existence. If it is the former, a large amount of weight will be given to both Mr. Whitney's criticism of the bill as it now stands and his constructive suggestions. On the other hand, if it is the desire to eliminate stock exchanges, his testimony will be taken as evidence that the present measure effectively will accomplish the purpose and few changes need be made.

A few months ago the suggestion of such a possible ulterior motive in a piece of proposed legislation would have received little, if any, attention. Then it generally was assumed that the Administration was interested in reforming institutions with a view of their better serving the public interest. Most people still accept this as the purpose of our accumulang a mass of so-called regulatory legislation. If one looks below the surface, however, he finds there is much room to question whether this is the underlying motive, perhaps not of the Administration as a whole, but at least of a small group that has had and is having an enormous influence in the framing of New Deal legislation.

Legislation Used to Pave Way for Wider Federal Action.

In other words, there is reason to consider whether the basic purpose of such legislation as the Fletcher bill is not so drastic as to undermine the working of existing institutions as to make further Government absorption of functions necessary. Time after time, in the last year, this has been the result of Administratively supported measures.

A notable example is the security bill—the truth in securities measure. That was presented and passed upon the assumption that it merely was for the purpose of preventing fraudulent practices in the underwriting and selling of new securities. Its actual effect, however, was to eliminate the capital market for private obligations. The outcome has been an increasing demand that the Government step in and advance long-term capital to private industry.

Another case of similar legislation is found in the Thomas inflationary amendment to the agricultural act of last summer. That measure was presented and passed on the basis that it was a compromise with the inflationists and hence would prevent mandatory legislation. Its actual effect was to enable an effective driving down of the dollar to a level far below what our international economic position justified. The outcome has been a devaluation of our currency—on the ground that such devaluation merely recognizes an existing situation.

Agricultural Act, the NIRA and RFC Offer Further Cases.

The agricultural act, itself, the NIRA, the increased activities of the RFC, are further cases of an action paving the way for further Governmental enroachment into our economic system. More bluntly, they are further indications of the incessant drive of this Administration to Fascism.

Mr. Whitney's testimony, in bringing out this trend, although he does not use these terms, should help to clarify the public view as to the direction in which we are moving. His attitude was not that of some one who opposes reform and regulation. Rather he gave full support to the idea of a supervisory board, the majority of which would be appointed by the Government. He asks, in other words, not the continuation of conditions which makes the practices of before 1929 possible, but a supervision that will be effective in making our security markets yield the highest possible benefits to society. Only an Administration driving toward Fascism would consider such a suggestion unworthy of careful consideration.

Wool Market.

Boston, Feb. 22 (A.P.) (U. S. Dept. of Agriculture).—Trade was slow in the wool market, but prices were quite firm. Original bag lines of 64s and finer territory wool brought 79@81 cents, scoured basis, for short French combing and clothing staple and 84@85 cents for lots consisting of good French combing and average strictly combing staple. Most sales in these lines were of very moderate volume. Medium quality territory wool received some inquiry, but there was little actual demand. Asking prices, however, were firm.

Bonds React As Secondary Loans Weaken

Quiet Trading Results in Total Turnover of $15,151,000.

New York, Feb. 23 (AP).—While prime investment issues maintained a relatively steady position in today's bond market, the recently bouyant secondary groups turned downward along with stocks.

Trading was quiet throughout the session and transfers totaled $15,151,000, par value, compared with Wednesday's turnover of $15,692,000.

The average for 60 domestic corporate loans, however, was off one-half point, at 84.6, its first sizable decline in more than two weeks.

Reaction Is Unexplained.

There was little in the news to account for the reaction which found many loans in the lower-priced brackets off 1 to 2 or more points at the close.

The rails were the more active losers. Among these were liens of Alleghany Corp., Baltimore & Ohio, Chesapeake Corp., St. Paul, Chicago & North Western, Rock Island, Denver & Rio Grande, Erie, Illinois Central, Missouri Pacific, N. Y. Central, Frisco, Southern Pacific, Texas & Pacific and Western Pacific.

Utilities and Industrials.

Utility and industrial casualties included issues of American Rolling Mill, American Water Works, Armour & Co., Goodrick, International Telephone, Laclede Gas, Otis Steel, Philadelphia Reading Coal & Iron, Portland General Electric, Postal Telegraph, Richfield Oil, United Drug, Vanadium and Warner Bros. Studebaker 6s dropped 5 points, although these have been exhibiting strength for several weeks.

The U. S. Government list was dull, but small gains were in the majority here.

Dutch East Indies obligations advanced 3 to 5 points, Austrian Government 7s of 1957 gained 2½ and loans of France, Australia and some of the Germans firmed. North German Lloyd 6s spurted 5 points.

N. Y. C. Collateral To Be 125 Per Cent

Railroad Will Back Issue With Bonds of Line and System.

New York, Feb. 23 (AP).—Bond circles heard today that the collateral underlying New York Central Railroad Co.'s new $59,511,100 issue of 10 year 6 per cent convertible bonds will consist of bonds of parent and controlled lines and will amount to 125 per cent of the issue.

It was said that the new loan would probably be secured by $48,000,000 consolidated 4s of 1998, $7,500,000 refunding 4½s of 2013; $6,000,000 first mortgage 3½s of 1997 of the New York Central; $4,500,000 Boston & Albany bonds; $6,000,000 Michigan Central refunding 4½s of 1947 and $3,000,000 Cleveland, Cincinnati, Chicago & St. Louis 4½s of 1977.

Active Selling Forces Curb Into Declines

Metals and Utilities Yield as Sales Mount to 413,000 Shares.

New York, Feb. 23 (AP).—Following forenoon dullness, the curb market met active selling today and closed with losses of 1 to more than 3 points. Metals were heavy and utilities also yielded. Alcohols held up rather well and a few inactive specialties were higher.

Newmont Mining and Bunker Hill & Sullivan lost 2 and 4 points, respectively. Pittsburgh & Lake Erie and A. O. Smith sagged around 3 each. Humble Oil and International Petroleum receded a point or more each, but Gulf Oil finished a net fraction higher.

Issues ending a point or so lower included Electric Bond & Share, American Gas & Electric, Dow Chemical, J. J. Newberry and Waco Aircraft. Hiram Walker eased a fraction, but other alcohols were steady.

Midvale Co. and Neisner Brothers preferred were each up 5 points on quiet volume. Pan American Airways moved a little higher.

Transfers approximated 413,000 shares, compared with 352,000 for Wednesday.

Berlin Says Mark Value Will Stand

Dr. Schacht Tells Bankers Cut Would Be Met by Other Nations.

Berlin, Feb. 23 (AP).—There will be no devaluation of the mark, Dr. Hjalmar Schacht, president of the Reichbank, has promised German bankers. Such a move, he told a group of bank executives yesterday, would only result in further devaluation by the United States and Great Britain.

Also, he added, "German exports depend in large measure upon the finishing of imported material which, through devaluation of the German mark, would immediately become more expensive.

"The men who today head German banks," he said, "can fulfill their tasks only if, with a full heart, they devote themselves to the spirit of the new state.

"We are assured that anybody failing to do so will disappear soon."

Dr. Schacht promised that the government would take no "forcible measures" for lowering the interest rates on bonds.

General Foods Net Increased To $11,000,000

Standard Oil of Kansas' Profit Rises; Aircraft Dividend Omitted.

New York, Feb. 23 (AP).—The preliminary annual statement of General Foods Corporation for 1933 shows net earnings of approximately $11,000,000 after all charges and expenses, and provision for income taxes, President C. M. Chester announced today.

This total is equal to about $2.10 a share on the company's common stock outstanding at the year-end, and compares with $10,343,882, or $1.97 a share for 1932.

The company paid out $9,452,669 in dividends last year. In 1932 its disbursements to stockholders totaled $13,167,787. Expenses increased during 1933, President Chester reported, "because of larger taxes and increase in costs of material and pay rolls."

Utility and Industrial Corporation's net income for the year ended December 31, 1933, amounted to $582,187, which is equivalent to $0.86 a share on the outstanding convertible preferred stock, according to the corporation's annual report made public today.

During 1933 Utility and Industrial Corporation reduced its notes payable $710,000, from $3,500,000 to $2,790,000. The net asset value of the convertible preferred stock as of December 31, 1933, was $3.78 a share.

Standard Oil Co. of Kansas had net profit of $77,790 in 1933, equal to 52 cents a share on capital stock. In the preceding year the company reported for the nine months ended December 31 and had net profit of $61,971 in that period.

Colorado Fuel & Iron Co. had net loss of $2,389,063 in 1933 after depreciation, taxes, &c., against net loss of $4,253 in 1932.

Douglas Aircraft Co. has omitted the semiannual dividend of 37½ cents a share on its capital stock. The company said that in view of the large unfilled orders now on hand it was for the best interests of the company to conserve cash and strengthen the current position.

J. I. Case Co., maker of agricultural equipment, reports 1933 loss of $2,093,503 after depreciation, interest charges and expenses, but before preferred dividends. This compares with a 1932 deficit of $2,611,082. Preferred dividends paid from surplus last year totaled $407,300. Current assets at the year-end totaled $25,547,563 and current liabilities $936,805.

Despite increased passenger traffic during the World's Fair, the Chicago, South Shore & South Bend Railroad sustained a net loss of $358,755 for 1933.

The company has been undergoing reorganization under the Federal bankruptcy act since September 30. In the nine months prior to October the net loss was $333,947, while net loss during the three months of reorganization was only $24,808.

Net loss in 1932 was $629,311. At the close of 1933 the surplus account showed a deficit of $1,276,603.

The Markets at a Glance

What the Stock Market Did.

	Fri.	Wed.
Advances	120	396
Declines	660	246
Unchanged	97	169
Total issues	877	811

Stocks—After some irregularities in early trading, prices turned downward and closed around the bottom. Moderate selling, due to traders' withdrawal from the market on account of publicity given to proposed regulatory legislation, was blamed in the losses. Declines averaged 2.4 points. Sales totaled 2,296,238 shares.

Bonds—Secondary loans weakened and caused bonds to react. Losses averaged five-tenths of a point. Trading was quiet. Nothing in the news seemed to explain the reaction. Sales totaled $15,151,000.

Wheat—Setbacks in securities reacted upon wheat and prices closed lower. Prospects of more rain were cited also as aid to slump. Corn advanced. Oats were unchanged to ⅛ lower. May wheat sold at 88; July, at 86⅜.

Cotton—Traders found little stimulation in the holiday developments. An early advance was followed by reactions promoted by realizing and liquidation. March sold at 12.02. The general market was barely steady at 2 points higher to 1 point lower. May closed at 12.18.

Rubber—Crude rubber futures were steady, 15 to 18 points higher. March sold at 10.61, May at 10.85.

Sugar—Raw sugar was unchanged at 3.29; refined sold at 4.50.

Gold—Bar gold in the United States sold at $35 per ounce. It sold in London at 136 shillings and 5½ pence.

Dollar—The United States dollar was steadier on foreign markets. It stood in New York, with reference to other currencies, $5.07½ to the English pound; 6.56 cents to the French franc and 39.57 cents to the German mark.

Loans to Brokers Climb $97,000,000

(Associated Press.)

Loans to brokers and dealers held by weekly reporting New York City member banks amounted to $950,000,000 during the week ended February 21, the Federal Reserve Board reported today, representing an increase of $97,000,000 for the week.

The loans for the week ended February 21, 1933, were $429,000,000.

For own account	$790	$696	$410

Wall Street Briefs.

New York, Feb. 23 (AP).—New bond offerings in the New York market this week totaled $16,047,000, compared with $10,892,000 last week and $4,950,000 a week ago.

New State and municipal financing scheduled for next week totals $37,673,089, says the Daily Bond Buyer. The largest item is the State of Pennsylvania's $30,000,000 block on Thursday. Buffalo will offer a $3,000,000 issue Tuesday.

Sealed bids will be opened March 8 on 37,500 bags of Santos coffee held by the Grain Stabilization Corporation.

Demand for women's wear fabrics continued active in wool goods markets this week, says the New York Wool Top Exchange Service, but men's wear cloths were rather slow. The market took a stronger statistical position when it was learned that stocks of fabrics at mills were lighter than had been believed and that stocks or spring goods had become scarce. Most of these goods have gone into consumption.

The liquidating value of Tobacco & Allied Stocks, Inc., was $55.13 a share on 47,000 shares on December 31 last, compared with $35.50 on 53,000 shares at the end of 1932. About 46 per cent of the corporation's investments on December 31, 1933, were in cigarette manufacturing companies. A special meetings of stockholders has been called for March 20 to act on retirement of 8,639 shares of the company's own capital stock.

Foreign Markets.

(Associated Press.)

London—A confident tone prevailed on the stock exchange today. Gilt-edged securities were strong on the favorable revenue position, the 3½ per cent war loan issue reaching a high record of 102¾. German bonds eased, kaffirs were irregular, rubber shares improved on more optimistic restriction news, and Transatlantic issues held steady. The market closed steady.

Paris—Rentes and industrials improved on the bourse following the response accorded Prime Minister Doumergue in his firm handling of Parliament. International issues were hesitant and gold mining shares heavy. The closing was irregular.

Berlin—President of the Reichsbank Schacht's speech Thursday in defense of a stable mark stiffened prices on the bourse today, especially those in the bond section. With but few exceptions, prices remained firm and there was a further improvement at the close.

Wheat Follows Securities to Lower Levels

Prospect of More Rain Blamed in Slump; Corn Prices Up.

Chicago, Feb. 23 (AP).—Late setbacks of securities carried the wheat market downward today, more than offsetting early gains.

Prospective further moisture relief for domestic wheat territory Southwest and West that recently had been suffering from drought tended also to pull wheat values down.

Relative slowness of European demand for wheat from Canada and from Southern hemisphere countries acted as an additional weight on values.

Wheat Closes Unsteady.

Wheat closed unsteady, ⅛ to ⅜ under Wednesday's finish; corn, at ⅛ to ⅜ advance; oats unchanged to ⅛ lower, and provisions, unchanged to a rise of 22 cents.

Transient upturns of wheat prices reached a maximum of about 1 cent a bushel. They were associated largely with strength shown in foreign markets, while United States exchanges honored Washington's birthday.

There was early talk also among crop experts that a great deal more rain or snow was needed to remedy moisture shortage in the Wheat Belt Southwest and West. The wheat market derived temporary upward impetus, too, from assertions which later lacked confirmation, that the United States Government would buy $5,000,000 worth of wheat to be distributed immediately in drought regions.

Interest Among Traders.

Considerable interest among wheat traders here was taken in reports today that for the first time since last August Russian wheat shipments had ceased during an entire week.

Heretofore moderate quantities were forthcoming regularly from Russia, and in one case totaled 2,500,000 bushels. Another strengthening factor at some stages today was confirmation of frost damage to wheat crops in France, but when securities developed weakness, the wheat market showed a pronounced lack of support except on material declines.

Corn and oats showed a little more backbone than wheat did. Rural offerings of corn were scarce, and there was more or less buying based on unfavorable corn crop reports from Argentina, together with the fact that some deliveries of corn in Liverpool and Rotterdam were quoted at a premium over wheat.

Provisions were helped by a pick-up in export demand for lard.

Flexible Glass Gains Favor In England

A flexible form of plate glass produced by a secret process in one of the largest glass factories in Great Britain, is reported to be meeting with considerable success, according to a report from the American consulate general, Birmingham, made public by the Commerce Department.

The new glass, the report points out, is flexible to a remarkable degree, and capable of withstanding enormous pressure. In a recent demonstration, a plate of the glass measuring 3 feet in length was raised on two narrow boards. Pressure was then applied causing the glass to curve, but upon removal of the pressure the glass resumed its normal straightness.

Stones may be thrown against the new glass without causing it to break, the report stated. At the corners it is more vulnerable; sharp tapping there caused it to crack, although it did not break into pieces.

This new type of plate glass, the report states, is beginning to make inroads into the field of "safety" glass in the automobile industry. Likewise, it is reported that the British Board of Trade has sanctioned the use of this material in half-inch thickness for ship's portholes. It is also reported that when exposed to rifle fire thick composite sheets of the glass were dented but the mass remained intact.

Baltimore Grain Prices.

Baltimore, Feb. 23.—WHEAT—Receipts, 1,100 bushels by car. Shipments from elevators, 10,054 bushels. Stock in elevators, 984,002 bushels. Opening prices were: No. 2 red winter, garlicky, spot, domestic, 96; February delivery, domestic, 96; March delivery, domestic, 96½. Receipts of wheat running light and demand is fairly good here for No. 2 red winter, garlicky. Off grades hard to sell.

CORN—Receipts, 7,083 bushels by car. Shipments from elevators, 1,631 bushels. Stock in elevator, 10,991 bushels. Receipts of corn from the nearby sections have recently been running freer. For yellow and high-colored mixed there is a fair domestic demand. Cob corn—Quoted at 2.75@3.00 per barrel for carloads prime nearby yellow on spot. Offerings more than ample for present needs. No. 2 yellow corn (old) arriving here by car quoted at 65@66 per bushel with transit billing.

OATS—Shipments from elevators, 3,129 bushels. Stock in elevators, 48,126 bushels. Receipts of oats show considerable variation in weight, being mostly light. Demand fair in a jobbing way. Good heavyweight oats are relatively scarce and such command a good premium. No. 2 white oats, 48@52 per bushel, as to weight and position. Note—On all sales of oats to the local trade, excepting those on track, there is an additional charge of 1¼ cents per bushel for storage and elevation, which is paid by the buyer.

RYE—Receipts, 3,603 bushels by car. Shipments from elevators, 125 bushels. Stock in elevators, 51,076 bushels.

HAY—General hay market is quiet. No surplus of good timothy. Prices range from $12 to $14 per ton, as to grade and kind. The poorer grades of hay are hard to sell at any price. Market irregular on everything below 3 timothy.

Gossip Turns To Regulation As Chief Topic

Proposed Law and Fear of Strikes Blamed for Market's Decline.

New York, Feb. 23 (U.P.).—Brokerage houses had good attendance of tape watchers today, but few traded in stocks. Professionals sold and prices broke 1 to 5 points in light turnover. Reasons given for the downturn included fear of spread of strikes now breaking out in the automobile industry, the packer investigation, and indications the regulation bill when it passes will be more stringent than had been anticipated.

Regulation—The National Securities exchange act of 1934 was the chief topic of conversation as testimony on the bill was being heard. The street was impressed by the opposition which indicated that each section of the act contained dynamite. One Wall street expert said: "The authors of the bill were either very dumb or very clever to pack so much legislation into one bill. I suspect they were very clever."

Words—A new high record will be set for wordage on stock market regulation if the present pace continues. The present bill contains about 12,000 words. An equal number was in the interdepartmental report and the testimony of Richard Whitney, president of the stock exchange, also amounted to about 12,000 words. Thousands of words have been used in questioning witnesses, and the end is not in sight. An official of the Twentieth Century Fund which also is conducting a stock market investigation has amassed from 450,000 to 600,000 words of research. It has sent to press a "brief" summary of this research. The summary will contain 225 pages or around 68,000 words.

Margins—Brokerage house hangers-on amused themselves figuring out margins today after Richard Whitney brought up that subject yesterday in his testimony. The present stock exchange rules set minimum margins at 50 per cent of the debit balance for accounts with a debit balance of $5,000 or under, and 30 per cent of the debit balance for accounts with a debit balance of more than $5,000. Assume one buys $7,500 of stocks. He puts up $2,500 margin which is exactly 50 per cent of the debit balance of $5,000. The calculator figures the customer could ask his broker for $770, which would make his debit balance $5,770 and put him in the 30 per cent bracket. His margin then would be $1,731 which is 30 per cent of $7,500. The little catch in this sort of calculation is that the margin requirements set down by the exchange are "minimum." The broker can use his discretion in the amount of margin to be charged over that amount.

Speech—Earle Baillie, until recently assistant to Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau and before that member of the stock exchange and banking firm of J. & W. Seligman & Co., and chairman of the board of Tricontinental Corporation, is now loafing for the first time in his life. He will take time out next Wednesday from his rest at his country place to address the Bond Club of New York of which he is a member. His topic will be "Some Aspects of the Government's Financing Program." But no one will ever read his speech in the newspapers, since the meeting is to be strictly private. No newspapermen will attend and there will be no stenographic record taken. It is believed the Treasury Department is responsible for the precautions against publicity. Incidentally, it is reported in the street, Baillie soon will return to his Seligman and Tricontinental posts.

Razz—Circular letters went out today to prospective contributors to the Bawl Street Journal, annual publication of the Bond Club of New York. The paper will reflect this year as last the developments in Washington. Troubles and tribulations of the brokers will be handled with greatest possible lack of consideration.

Business Improves.

Chicago, Feb. 23 (AP). — The Association of Commerce in its weekly report said that steady business for wholesalers and retailers and a slight increase in industrial employment marked activities last week in the metropolitan area. All department stores reported increased business over a year ago.

OFFICIAL NOTICES

OFFICE OF THE COMMISSIONERS OF the District of Columbia, Washington, February 10, 1934. Notice is hereby given that under authority granted in Public Act No. 307, approved December 15, 1932, authorizing the closing of streets and alleys in the District of Columbia, the Commissioners of the District of Columbia have prepared the following order: Ordered, that pursuant to the provisions of Public Act No. 307, approved December 15, 1932, the street area as shown in green on plat filed in the office of the Surveyor of the District of Columbia and numbered as Map No. 1823, is hereby ordered closed, same to take effect on and after March 20, 1934, the title to the land comprised in said area so closed to revert to the abutting property owners, as shown on said map; the said streets hereby ordered closed being described as follows: (1) Closing Main avenue between 3d and 4½ streets S.W., running for a distance of one block west from 3d street. (2) Closing Missouri avenue between 3d and 4th streets N.W., running for a distance of one block west from 3d street. Any and all property owners interested must file objections to said closings in writing before the effective date of above orders; otherwise said order shall become effective on March 20, 1934, as aforesaid, and the said street area shall on and after said date become closed in accordance with the provisions of said act. MELVIN C. HAZEN, GEORGE E. ALLEN, JOHN C. GOTWALS, Commissioners of the District of Columbia.

THE BUNGLE FAMILY — Neighborly Interest — By Harry J. Tuthill

OH GEORGE IT GAVE ME THE JITTERS WHEN YOU THREW OPEN THAT DOOR SO SUDDENLY.
WE HAD MORE MYSTERY CONCERNING THOSE ODD PEOPLE NEXTDOOR TODAY.
ABOUT NOON I WAS PACKING THOSE DISHES I GOT FROM YOUR MOTHER....
SUDDENLY I HEARD THAT WHINING SOUND AND THEN SOMEONE TAPPING ON OUR DOOR.
MY HAIR JUST STOOD ON END.
WELL...
WAIT! THEN I HEARD A COMMOTION IN THE HALL AND THE WOMAN AND MAN TALKING. I COULDN'T SEE A THING THROUGH THAT FROSTED GLASS SO I OPENED THE DOOR A LITTLE.
THEIR DOOR WAS PARTLY OPEN. THEY WERE PUSHING SOMEONE—A SMALL CHILD, I THINK, INTO THEIR HOUSE.
WHEN I TRIED TO SEE MORE, THE DOOR CREAKED. OH I'LL NEVER FORGET HOW THAT MAN LOOKED BACK AT ME AND GLARED.

THE SPORTS WRITERS CLAIMED THAT IF DYNAMITE COULD KNOCK OUT FIVE MEN IN FIVE MINUTES; THE FIVE WOULD HAVE TO BE HAND-PICKED PUNKS ....BUT JOE HAS AN ANSWER TO THAT CHARGE.....
O.K., JOE...WE'RE WAITIN' TO HEAR THE BIG NEWS ...AGAIN
THEN HERE IT IS...YOU CLAIM I'M GONNA PICK FIVE SET-UPS FOR DYNAMITE TO KAYO IN FIVE MINUTES...
YOU GOT THAT PART RIGHT, JOE
NOW, LAY OFF THE SMART CRACKS/... GIMME A CHANCE!... I TELL YOU THAT EVERY GUY THAT FIGHTS DYNAMITE IS GONNA BE TOUGH!
SO YOU SAY!
AN' SO YOU'RE GOIN' TO SAY/... YOU'RE GONNA KNOW THEY'RE TOUGH!
YEAH?...AN' JUST HOW'RE WE GOIN' TO KNOW THAT?
BECAUSE I'M GOIN' TO LET YOU WISE GUYS PICK 'EM!

WHERE'VE YOU BEEN? — I WAS SURE YOU HAD AN ACCIDENT!
HA-HA — I WAS WORKING — AND I GUESS YOU MIGHT CALL THAT AN ACCIDENT!
DIXIE — YOU WERE SO CHARMING WHEN I WAS OUT WITH YOU, YOU FILLED ME WITH INSPIRATION — THE DESIRE TO DO SOMETHING BIG — SO I WENT HOME, SHUT THE DOOR ON THE WORLD AND WENT TO WORK ON A NOVEL——AND FORGOT ALL ABOUT EVERYTHING AND EVERYBODY
WELL — NEXT TIME I GO OUT WITH YOU I'LL TRY AND NOT BE SO CHARMING

Doctors' Advice.

I'm often cautioned by the docs to eat at certain hours; "That man is wiser than a fox who thus his food devours. This thing of eating now and then, as well as here and there, has ruined many stalwart men," the thoughtful docs declare. "A man should always watch the clock, and when the hour arrives he'll eat his victuals from a crock" —and thus the race survives. The docs insist that we should eat at certain stated times; and if this system meets defeat, we are accused of crimes. But how about the good old docs? They're chasing here and there; they take some doughnuts in a box, to serve as bill of fare; they eat a pie at 9 o'clock, some wienerwurst at 10, for they must lope around the block to save some fellowmen. To save the life of some poor scout their cars the road devour, and they must eat a can of kraut at 60 miles an hour. At intervals a quiet night invites them to repose; at home, they feel the rare delight that but the tired man knows. But when they there sit down to eat, they hear the telephone; old Jimpson fell upon the street and smashed his collarbone. And so they take their cross-cut saws, their knives and guillotines, and labor in a worthy cause—what chance is there for beans? The docs must catch their custard pies and eat them on the bounce; and yet they hand us counsel wise that's worth five bucks an ounce.

Radio Waves and Ripples

WJSV has a program it calls the Song Vendor which is so much like the Street Singer that people are always getting them confused. They would like to sell the program to the network, but the network bosses won't take it because it always reminds them of the Street Singer, who is somebody they are trying to forget.

So WJSV minds set to thinking, and presently one of them came to the conclusion that the best way to keep the Song Vendor from sounding like the Street Singer was to find him a hurdy-gurdy.

We haven't any ideas on where to find a hurdy-gurdy, but if the minds think they would like a monkey to go along with it, we suggest our Cousin Archibald.

Whitecaps.

WRC—First complete broadcast of "Tannhauser" from the Metropolition Opera Co., Lotte Lehmann and Lauritz Melchoir. 1:35 p. m.; Dr. Serge Koussevitzky conducting the Boston Symphony in Brahms' "Fourth Symphony in E Minor," the St. Cecilia Society singing the vocal part of Charles Martin Loeffler's "Evocation," 9 p. m.; "One Man's Family," 11:30 p. m.

WMAL—Metropolitan Opera Company, 1:35 p. m.; "Art in America," origin and development of Georgian architecture, 8 p. m.; National Barn Dance, 10:30 p. m.

WJSV—Abram Chasins begins a series of informal piano recitals with Chopin, 12:30 p. m.; Army-Navy basketball game, 3 p. m.; Lilyan Tashman discussing her new picture, "Frankie and Johnnie," on the "45 Minutes in Hollywood" show, 8 p. m.; National A. A. U. indoor track and field championships from Madison Square Garden, 10:30 p. m.

WJSV takes to the air in a strictly literal sense at 6:45 tonight, sending Arthur Godfrey aloft with Eddie Rickenbacker in the plane that recently broke the transcontinental mail record for an interview with the World War ace and an aerial description of the Capital.

Operating a short-wave transmitter at 2342 kilocycles by special authority of the Federal Radio Commission will be WJSV Engineer Earl Merryman.

Sitting in the ship and hoping for happy landings will be the city's radio editors.

Our lady air prowler is pretty disgusted with things radio and is beginning to understand how Aunt Sadie got into the habit of listening to police calls. She had all her friends primed to hear Heinie and his Grenadiers the other day when N. B. C. cut them off. Now she's trying to round up a following for One Man's Family, which, barring acts of Providence and international broadcasts, will be heard on WRC at 11:30 tonight.

The same lady says she's on the verge of changing her mind about Arthur Godfrey. She heard his network program from WJSV Thursday afternoon and found him "sweet, wholesome, and funny."

The highest honor within the gift of our public educators, the American Education Award, will be given Dr. Walter Damrosch, dean of American conductors and musical counsel of the National Broadcasting Company, at the annual meeting of the Department of Superintendence of the National Education Association in Cleveland Tuesday.

The award was voted Dr. Damrosch for his music appreciation concerts for children, which for the last six of the 30 years he has been conducting them have been broadcast by N. B. C.

Columbia's Mr. Husing is in for a busy time running between the Army gym at West Point and Madison Square Garden in Manhattan today for descriptions of the Army-Navy basketball game and the forty-sixth annual National A. A. U. indoor track and field championships. It will be radio's first athletic day since the football season was laid in mothballs at the Rose Bowl. Mr. Husing probably will find it as strenuous as anyone. He's due at the Point at 3 p. m. and back at the Garden at 10:30.

Lotte Lehmann, the Austrian soprano, whose debut several weeks ago was one of the sensations of the Metropolitan season, appears again as Elizabeth in radio's first opera, "Tannhauser," to be given its initial complete air performance on N. B. C. at 1:35 p. m. today.

In the supporting cast will be Lauritz Melchoir, as Tannhauser, Ludwig Hofman, as Landgraf Hermann, Friedrich Schorr, as Wolfram, and Maria Olszewska, as Venus.

In one hour of narrative broadcasting, National will review President Roosevelt's first year in office tomorrow, beginning at 8 p. m.

Entitled "Chapter One—A Busy Year," the program will begin with the inauguration and trace the progress of the year, one of the most dramatic in American history.

After 12 years in the House, Representative Anning S. Prall, of Staten Island, N. Y., goes over to the Federal Radio Commission to succeed Commisioner William D. Starbuck, whose term expires March 1.

Olmstead Grill Booking.

Here's the young lady who doubles for missing movie stars on Columbia's "Forty-five Minutes in Hollywood." Her name's Arlyne Frances, sometimes taken for Dolores Del Rio. The show goes on WJSV tonight at 8 o'clock.

Covelli Faces Jimmy Britt At Portner's

Philly Featherweight to Sub for Sarron in Tuesday Feature.

JIMMY BRITT, youthful and highly promising Philadelphia weight, yesterday was definite-definitely selected to pinch hit for Petey Sarron against Frank Covelli at Portner arena Tuesday night in an eight-rounder.

Balked for a time in his efforts to secure Britt, Mann closed out for his services after some spirited bidding yesterday.

Only 23 and possessed of an abundance of class, the colorful Britt has been cited by so capable a judge as Al Lippe as one of the most promising young 128-pounders in the land today.

Three sixes and a four now in the process of arrangement will close out the show.

Moose Discuss Child Training

Home Praised for High Type Work; Session Ends Today.

Care and training of children was discussed from various angles by leading scientists yesterday at the midwinter conference of the Loyal Order of Moose and the advisory council of the Mooseheart Laboratory for Child Research.

Praise was given by the speakers of the opportunity afforded children at Mooseheart, the home and school for dependent orphan children.

The speakers were Dr. Charles H. Judd, director of the School of Education, University of Chicago; Ales Hrdlicka, anthropologist and curator of physical anthropology of the Smithsonian Institution; Dr. T. Wingate Todd, professor of anatomy of Western Reserve University, Cleveland, Ohio; Dr. John E. Anderson, director of the Institute of Child Welfare, University of Minnesota, and Dr. C. A. Prosser, director of the William Hood Dunwoody Institute, Minneapolis.

After the afternoon session Senator James J. Davis, chairman of the Mooseheart governors, and Mrs. Davis were hosts at a reception at their home on Massachusetts avenue. The conference will end today with a banquet of the Mooseheart Alumni Association at the Willard Hotel.

"Skyscrapers" Ballet Uses Factory Whistles

Cleveland (U.P.).—Jazz wormed its way into the classic portals of Severance Hall, generally reserved for the most classical compositions of musicdom, when the Cleveland Orchestra, under the direction of Dr. Artur Rodzinski, recently performed a ballet of modern American life, "Skyscrapers."

Interpretation of the composition was lent color by the use of borrowed factory whistles and the use of seven jazz musicians, augmenting the austere 90-piece makeup of the symphonic orchestra. Two blues singers also wailed into the composition their part toward its revelations.

Wounded Deer Gives Hunter Dizzy Whirl

Harrisburg, Pa. (U.P.).—As a hunter approached a deer he had shot and crippled, it sprang up and started to run away. But the man had determined not to lose his game and made a desperate grab at its tail, caught it and the two went around and around, merry-go-round style. A fellow hunter fired four times, but missed. Another sportsman killed the deer with one shot and helped the dizzy tail "hitch hiker" to sit down.

Roosevelt Is Model For Debating Team

Atchison, Kans. (U.P.).—President Roosevelt has become the oratorical model of the St. Benedict's College debate team here. Father Gervase Burke, O. S. B., debate coach, is using the recorded inaugural address of the President as an example of oratorical construction and delivery for the study of his forensic group.

Latin Requirements Reduced at Wesleyan

Wesleyan, Conn. (U.P.).—Taking another step in its plan to grant students wider liberty in their choice of studies, so they may give greater time and attention to those in which they are most interested, Wesleyan University has reduced Latin requirements, effective at the start of classes next fall.

Horse Thief Detective Group Elects Officers

Strawberry Point, Iowa (U.P.).—The Horse Thief Detectives' Association has just elected officers for another year of vigilant service in the name of the law. Founded in the early days when Strawberry Point was a rendezvous for horse thieves, the association has a membership of 82 and a treasury of $758 for use in recovering stolen horses.

Under the rules, 12 riders are elected annually whose duty it is to be ready at all times to set off on the trail of stolen horses. The riders receive $2.50 for each day engaged in pursuit.
